Rudee Jetties Are Completed

"For all intents and purposes, the jetty work at Rudee Inlet is finished," said Dean Curtis, the City's coordinator for the Rudee Inlet Authority project. The construction of two long rock jetties jutting out into the Atlantic Ocean at Rudee Inlet ran behind schedule because of bad weather during the winter and because the jetties continued to settle into the water. They are now stable, according to Curtis.

Curtis noted that he expected to "settle the accounts" with contractors by today on the work done on the jetties. The settlement would constitute final payment for the work done.

The next step in the construction of the newly-named Virginia Capes Marina is up to the City Planning Commission and to City Council. The Planning Commission will be asked Tuesday to approve rezoning of the last parcels of land for the marina. Council will act on the request on April 8.

Bids will be advertised within the next few days for the first work on the marina, contingent upon zoning approval, according to Curtis. Then work should begin by the end of April, if all goes according to present plan.

"After that we hope we'll hear what the state is going to do about the funds we've asked for," said Curtis. "But we're still going ahead anyway." Assistant City Manager Roger Scott said that funds for the marina have not been included in the proposed new city operating budget, as had been speculated by a Norfolk newspaper story. He added that regardless of what happens on the requests for state and federal funds, the money would not come out of operating funds of the City.

"There is a possibility that funds may be budgeted sometime in the future for a bond issue," said Scott. "But no funds are provided now in the operating budget and I don't expect them to be in the future."

No Bids Yet

Bids are now in the process of being advertised for the leasing of city-owned marina on Long Creek. It was erroneously stated in last week's VIRGINIA BEACH SUN that bids had already been advertised and were ready to be opened.

Due to some errors and misunderstandings at City Hall the bids were not advertised earlier for opening on March 1, as had been originally stated and planned. Earlier planning had called for a five-year lease to be accepted for operation beginning on April 1 of this year.

Now, according to a spokesman for the City of Virginia Beach, it will be some weeks before the bids are opened and a lease awarded.

Plans for completed construction of the marina have been abandoned for this summer, although limited use by charter boats and the like is definitely expected, according to Curtis, while final work continues.

In addition to the Rudee project, it was announced this week that the state, through the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries, will build public boat launching facilities on near by Owl Creek.

The estimated cost of the project is about $21,000, using no city funds. The facility will require four acres of land, and is part of the 35 acres of Camp Pendleton given by the state to Virginia Beach recently to be used as a sand erosion borrow area.

City Budget Not Ready For Council

The new operating budget for the city of Virginia Beach, again expected to set a new record high, will not be ready for presentation to Council Monday, according to City Manager W. Russell Hatchett. He said that the Finance Department is putting the finishing touches on the document, and it should be ready for the printers within the next few days, according to Giles Dodd, head of the department.

City Manager W. Russell Hatchett had hoped to have the budget ready to drop on the desks of Councilmen at the next Council meeting, but a number of small problems had to be ironed out.

"I don't want to release any of it until I am ready to give the entire package to City Council," said Hatchett, when queried concerning the contents. Budget hearings have been going on between Hatchett and the heads of various city departments since early in January. The School Board budget, drawn separately, was only recently presented to Hatchett, after approval by the Board.

New School Supt. E. E. Brickell said he would not release the contents of the school budget until the City Manager was ready to make the contents of the full budget known.

Brickell also noted that a story published in a Norfolk newspaper sometime ago about a proposed more than $18 million school budget was somewhat in error and was published entirely prematurely. "Some of the facts in the story were absolutely wrong," said Brickell. "The story came from no central source, and I would rather wait now until the City Manager is ready to release the full contents."

The story stated that the School Board had recommended a starting salary for new teachers in Virginia Beach next year.

Senator Harry F. Byrd, Jr. delivering the principal address at the First Citizen banquet.

Mrs. Lucille Clark accepts the First Citizen award at the annual banquet. Bob Stanton, Virginia Beach Jaycees president is at left and Robert Warren, dinner chairman, is at right.

Byrd Warns of Money Crisis

A capacity crowd of more than 400 gathered at the Black Angus Restaurant on Pacific Avenue to pay tribute to Virginia Beach's "First Citizen of 1967," Mrs. Lucille Clark, at a banquet sponsored by the Virginia Beach Jaycees.

The featured speaker of the evening was U. S. Sen. Harry F. Byrd, Jr., who discussed the conduct of the war in Vietnam and the crisis in the Middle East.

Byrd criticized the continued expansion of domestic programs of the Johnson administration while ignoring international defense expenditures.

"I am convinced this country faces a very serious financial crisis unless it acts to bring expenditures under control, to reduce our deficits and to put an end to inflation," said Byrd.

The senior senator from Virginia also said the U. S. should remain ever mindful of not becoming "overly" involved in the entanglements of other countries.

Byrd called for a quick and honorable end to the Vietnam war, but stopped short of recommending complete military might to do so. He did, however, strongly urge that trade with North Vietnam should be cut off with all free nations.

Byrd also called for an economic and diplomatic blockade of the port of Haiphong.

The Senator also said much the same thing First District Congressman Thomas N. Downing had said earlier in the week in a Virginia Beach speech.

Both felt that the President cannot continue to disregard the recommendations and opinions of top military advisors who are calling for more escalation and more aid. Byrd particularly pointed out that the military had recommended shutting off supplies and supply routes to the enemies.

The crisis in the Middle East also concerned Byrd. He said that during a recent trip there he found that the Arab nations were totally recovered from the June war and had been almost completely resupplied by the Soviet Union. He added that these events should make us realize how vulnerable we are to Communist challenge at many points in the world.

"While we are putting out a fire in the pantry, the Soviets are busy setting a fuse which could ignite a blaze in the rest of the house," said the Senator.

Nine of the 18 past winners of the Jaycees First Citizen award were also present at the banquet to hear Mrs. Clark join their ranks. She was cited for her charitable and educational works over three decades in Virginia Beach, particularly with the March of Dimes and the Fraternal Order of Police Auxiliary.

In her acceptance speech she again sought support for both organizations.

Bob Stanton, president of the Virginia Beach Jaycees, was master of ceremonies.

Transportation Raises Interest

"After Monday, maybe we'll know better just where we are," said Herbert Glassman, owner of the Beach Transportation Inc. jitneys. "Then we can think a little more about the future."

City Council on Monday will probably take action on a request by the jitney operators to conduct charter business anywhere in the city. At present they are restricted to select routes along the waterfront and to military installation. Council has heard the request twice before, but has twice deferred the matter to study it further.

Glassman said he believes all the questions have been answered now and hopes it will be passed.

Meanwhile the jitney owners have been asked to study the feasibility of transportation to such areas as the General Hospital of Virginia Beach, Seaside and Princess Anne, the Virginia Beach Development Council transportation committee, headed by Capt. W. N. Homer of Dam Neck, is working with the manager of the jitneys to see if transportation to these areas can prove useful as well as monetarily feasible.

A separate study by the Princess Anne Plaza Civic League is underway with the jitneys in mind, according to civic league president Glen McClanan. McClanan has appointed a committee to study the needs of that sprawling community, particularly during peak hours of the day.

"There is a possibility that public transportation needs could dictate a circular route of the city," said McClanan. "I think the Plaza could be a part of that."

Capt. Homer said that the Virginia Beach Development Council feels there is a need for additional transportation for the city, particularly in the residential area.

The jitneys, but stressed again that he is not trying to infringe on the larger buses in any way.

"I'm very happy to serve any area that we can if it's feasible," said Glassman. "However, I don't think there is enough business in some areas who now want the study to make it worthwhile yet."

He pointed out that Trailways already serves Seaside and the General Hospital of Virginia Beach during peak periods, and said he was not certain what could be done. He added that even now his service to the military installations are often made with near empty jitneys.

New School Undeterred By Snow

"The snow Friday slowed us down a little," said Virginia Beach School Board construction supervisor Ernest Stone, "or we'd have had the Pembroke Meadows school up out of the ground by now."

He then admitted that he was exaggerating just a bit, but that construction has actually begun on the new elementary school, a week after the bids were opened. The bulldozers were on the scene just before the snow but had to wait until Monday to get started clearing the site.

The start of construction marks the beginning of the first of the schools to be built with funds voted in the Jan. 20 bond referendum. Construction of additions to First Colonial and Kempsville High Schools will get under way any day now, according to Stone, again a week after the acceptance of bids.

Next bids to be opened will be for the Princess Anne Plaza junior high school off Lynnhaven Road and Hospital Drive near Salina Drive. Those bids will be opened March 19, with construction set to begin as soon as possible.

Ernest Stone believes in "instant schools."

Legislative Session Termed 'Profitable' By Freshman Delegate

As the 1968 session of the Virginia General Assembly draws to a close, Delegate Kenneth Whitehurst, Jr., of Virginia Beach, describes the session as "profitable," especially to the City of Virginia Beach.

Whitehurst was chief patron on a series of bills to change the City Charter. Delegate B. R. Middleton was the co-patron on the bills in the House; All were assured passage when they cleared Senate committees after being passed in the House. State Senators from the Third District, including Edward T. Caton III of Virginia Beach, guided the bills in the Senate.

Whitehurst also introduced bills that would set aside part of Camp Pendleton for a city golf course and another section as a sand erosion control area. Both were assured of passage in the last days of the session.

The charter changes involve raising the legal limit of two types of non-referendum bonds that can be sold by the city and the setting up of machinery for charging home builders certain fees. There was no dis-could not take any legal action of any kind after a report of missing in action. Military leaders in this area had urged passage of the bill.

As a freshman legislator, Whitehurst admitted that he was "a lot busier" than he expected to be, especially helping to guide his own bills through the legislative body.

"I think Virginia Beach has done well in this session," he said. "Of course, there were some disappointments also."

He was particularly referring to a bill he and Middleton introduced that would have exempted the first $2,000 of military and Civil Service retirement pay from State income tax. The bill failed to come out of committee. Middleton's efforts to lack a provision on another bill that would have exempted the same amount for those over 65, also failed when the bill died in a Senate committee. Whitehurst noted that he was sorry this bill had not passed, since he considered it a good measure for Virginia Beach and the entire state.

A communique from the Governor's office noted that more than half the general fund monies passed in the new state budget is earmarked for return to Virginia localities. Whitehurst said he was particularly pleased with the money earmarked for the larger cities like Virginia Beach.

Now Whitehurst says he looks forward to the special session next year to discuss constitutional overhaul.

"I feel sure that one of the revisions will be the call for annual sessions of the legislature," said Whitehurst. "There is just too much to do in 60 days."

Virginia Beach City Manager W. Russell Hatchett said he had not had a chance to evaluate the full program of the General Assembly so far but that he felt Virginia Beach had fared well. He promised a full statement to the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN next week on the matter.

The current session will adjourn late Saturday night or in the early hours of Sunday morning. By law it must end by midnight Saturday night-60 days after it convened-but the lawmakers have been known to stop the clock at a few minutes before the witching hour and continue until they finished several hours later. That may well be the case in this session.

Green Run Awaits Approval

Green Run Corporation will move another step closer to construction of its Planned Unit Development, depending upon City Council action on Monday. The application for the multi-million dollar 1,000-acre tract zoning for housing and commercial development has already been aired in the City Planning Commission public hearing last month.

Council is expected to approve the new zoning, mostly because the new zoning category for such planned unit developments has already been fully heard in Council chambers before allowing passage of that, and has been fully investigated by Council members.

Green Run expects to begin construction of its first planned unit 1,000 home "village" as soon as Council approval is forthcoming.

Other zoning matters which will concern Council Monday include approval of a use permit of a new 60-seat movie theatre in the shopping center on South Military Highway and Indian River Road.

Townhouses and apartments will consume part of Council's time as well. An application for a use permit by James A. Monaceo to build 68 apartments at 19th Street and Mediterranean Avenue in Virginia Beach Borough will be heard. John Aragon Enterprises, Inc. has applied for use permits on two tracts of land to build nearly 100 townhouses. The first, for 38 units, is located at Daytona Drive and the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway, and the other, for 56 units, is located at 2nd Avenue.

State Association of Home Builders president Fred Napolitano of Virginia Beach had expressed concern over the other bills, but Whitehurst explained that home builders would actually benefit financially under the provisions of the new fee bill. That bill too was then assured passage.

As far as other bills were concerned Whitehurst said he was particularly pleased that a bill he sponsored extending power of attorney to women who are advised their husbands are "missing in action" was passed, after much discussion. Heretofore wives of servicemen who had power of attorney while their husbands were overseas

594 More Apartments to Be Considered

With City Planning Commission and City Council permission there will be 594 new apartment units in Virginia Beach and 80 new townhouses. The five new developments are part of the 18-item docket for planning by the City Planning Commission on March 12, at 2 p.m. at Virginia Beach Municipal Court.

The largest apartment complex to be discussed at the public hearing concerns property already zoned for multiple residence. Lee A. Gifford is seeking a use permit to build 230 apartments at Ferry Plantation Road and Haygood Road in the vicinity of the new Haygood Shopping Center he is also developing.

Chris G. Christopoulos is asking for a zoning change and use permit to build 153 units fronting on Diamond Springs Road and Ferry Road. The NOVAB Corporation is seeking a zoning change and use permit to construct 91 apartment units at 56th Street and Atlantic Avenue in the North Virginia Beach area. And the application of Carter-Hobbs-Ott asks for a zoning change and use permit to build another 120 apartment units at Little Neck Road and Edinburgh Drive in the King's Grant area.

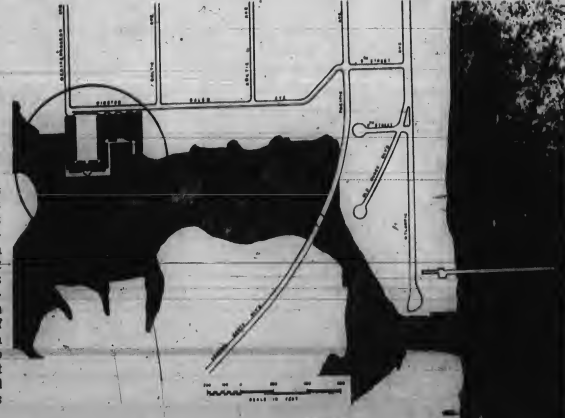

M. Bagley Walker is asking for zoning changes on two parcels of land along Shell Road and along the shores of Lake Smith and a use permit that would allow him to build 80 townhouses on one tract and have zoning for motel and tourist and restaurant on the other.

The Providence Friends Church is also seeking a use permit to build a new church on Providence Road near Kempsville Road.

Other applications to be heard by the commission include one by the Greater Tidewater Fair Association for a use permit to operate a fair grounds on part of the old Pungo airstrip on Route 615, and applications for at least two new gasoline stations.

City Council is also asking for a zoning change of surrounding lands to allow for the building of the Virginia Capes Marina at Rudee Inlet. The newly-named marina is expected to be started shortly, although funds have not been forthcoming from the federal and state governments.

Attorneys Get Access to Some Evidence

Attorneys defending a 17-year-old juvenile facing murder charges have been granted access to part of the evidence which the Commonwealth Attorney plans to use in his prosecution.

Police have accused the juvenile of the fatal shooting of Jack Simon, of Mediterranean Avenue, last December while inspecting Christmas trees in front of a London Bridge store. The information released to the defense concerns photographs to be used as prosecution evidence, statements made by the juvenile and information which may be in favor of the defendant.

Redskin Visits Beach Store

Bobby Mitchell, flanker-back for the Washington Redskins, was in Tidewater Monday at Moore's Virginia Beach Boulevard store to promote Owens-Corning Fiberglass, distributed here by Moore's.

The burly football player explained that the promotion work for Owens-Corning is only one of several jobs he has in the fire, including his own insurance firm in Washington, D.C., where he makes his home with his wife and two children.

Mitchell, 32, said that he plans to retire from football in another year or two. In the meantime, his other activities are carried on primarily during the off-season.

His one-day promotional stand at Virginia Beach was in conjunction with the "Grand Opening Festivities still under way at Moore's, which opened Feb. 22.

5 VIC Cagers Compete in Tournament

Five VIC cagers began playing Monday, in the interservice basketball tournament at Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala.

Player-coach Bill Suter of Fort Eustis' VIC champs, who were permitted to send only one candidate, has landed a berth on the All Army squad. Substant, which lost its VIC title to Fort Eustis but went on to earn an unprecedented fifth straight All Navy crown, has three players on the All Navy team. They are player-coach Mike Barrett, forward Jim Cole, and center Beatty Burnes.

Philbant, which became the first local Navy team to beat Substant in recent years, is represented by playmaker Skip Wallace who was augmented by Substant after the Fifth Naval District tournament.

A new VIC commissioner took office this week, as Lt. Cmdr. W. H. McDaniel, Dan Neck's Special Services Officer, succeeded Lt. (jg) John G. Zaffer.

Two weeks before the end of the VIC bowling season, Philbant has clinched the conference bowling honors.

Philbant, which has led every week since the VIC season started, has rolled to a 41-10 record, well ahead of runner-up Fort Eustis' 26-22 mark. Oceana is third with 22-23, Dan Neck is fourth at 19-32, and Substant is fifth at 18-33. Philbant has averaged 916, with 46,739 pins in 51 games.

PA Loses To Hampton

Princess Anne High School's last game of the basketball season ended last Friday night in frustration and a little sadness--it was Coach Harold Revis' last game with the cagers.

Revis, who will become PA's assistant principal next fall, saw his scoring ace Bob German held to seven points in the semifinals of the Eastern Regional Group I-A basketball tournament at the Norfolk Arena.

Hampton, the Peninsula District Champions, led all the way in their twentieth victory, on the way to the Regional finals against unbeaten Maury on Saturday night.

It was Ricky Rodgers who held German to the meager seven points. Rodgers has missed 11 of the regular season games because of a kidney infection. He scored only seven points himself, but played a relentless defensive game. German's only field goal for the game came on a fast break late in the final quarter.

At intermission, the Hampton crabsiders led by only eight, even though they were hitting 47 per cent in comparison to the Cavaliers' 19 per cent.

In the second half, PA made a short rally to narrow the scoring gap from the 13 to 12.

But the brief scoring spurt was answered by a string of successful free throws from Hampton, who hit 15 of 18 in the last 16 minutes of the game.

The Crabbers' Foley Jones, a 6'6" center and tall man on the Hampton totem pole, was high scorer for the evening with 21 points. He led rebounding for both teams, with 17.

When Hampton came up against Maury (23-20) the next night, the Peninsula winners held the Commodores to a trailing position going into the final quarter--the second time in 23 games that this has happened.

Hitting free throws to the tune of a final 51-48 score, Maury served up its Eastern Regional championship. The Commodores will be making their fourth State Group I-A tournament appearance in seven years when they meet GW of Alexandria (20-2) Friday night in the semifinals of the tournament at Charlottesville.

Chuck Laskin and his Devil-alres, who will be providing the music at the Khedive Temple's sprin dance, April 20 at the Dome, has a reputation around Tidewater as being a band leader who "plays people, not music."

Shrine Noble Bill Rice, who is being instrumental in making plans for the April dance, said that Laskin is being hired again from popular demand. "He's versatile," said Rice. "What he plays and how he plays it depends on his audience. He plays for people to dance to."

The dance will be open to all members of the Khedive Temple and their invited guests. According to Rice, the details of the party will be released as they are confirmed.

Veteran P.A. Coach 'Retires'

By Mike McCully

Nest year when basketball season rolls around, the Princess Anne High School bench will be minus one familiar face and the spectators will be plus one that they have viewed for years.

This particular face belongs to Harold Revis, ten-year veteran basketball coach at PA. He will vacate his varsity coaching job to become the school's new assistant principal, an opening made through the retirement of assistant principal Edwin Charles.

The 1968 season ended for Revis and his boys Friday night, when PA bowed to Hampton 50-34, in the openers for the Eastern Regional Tournament. But despite last weekend's disappointment, Revis leaves coaching with a heap of accomplishments behind him.

Every PA varsity basketball team he has coached has had a winning season.

"He has seeded a squad in the Eastern District Tournament in each of his seven years with the varsity."

"He led his 1965-66 Cagers to the semifinals of the State Tournament at Charlottesville, the farthest any PA quint has yet advanced."

"His same five won the 1966 Eastern District Tournament placing three players on the all-tourney first team."

The North Carolina native was graduated from Western Carolina College (now in a university status) with a B.S., and a master's degree in physical education and business administration.

After graduation, the basketball mentor served two years in the Army, stationed at Ft. Eustis. He liked the Tidewater area, and decided to stay here as a teacher and basketball coach.

He taught one year at Maury High School, where he coached the junior varsity cagers. The following year, he transferred to PA, where he was placed in charge of the J.V.'s for the next three years.

After his apprenticeship Revis was awarded the varsity head coaching job, a position he has held for the past seven years.

In addition to his basketball duties, Revis has also served as head coach of the varsity tennis and cross-country teams. This year's distance runners ran off with the district championship.

His wide range of sports activities is similar to the variation of non-athletic subjects he has taught. He currently teaches two classes of driver-education, but has also been an instructor for business classes.

"I will definitely miss it," replied the soon-to-be-assistant principal regarding his leaving coaching. "It will be tough to watch the boys take the floor next year, but of course I'll be 100 per cent behind them."

Revis' coaching prowess is best summed-up by varsity cager Skeeter Whitlow, a junior. "He has taught me a lot in the past couple of years," Skeeter explained, "because he drills you so thoroughly on the fundamentals of the game. I wish he were returning next year."

Such is the feeling of all the basketball players and fans who have come to associate Harold Revis with fine high school basketball.

Princess Anne High School coach Harold Revis has been more familiar to basketball fans as the fellow on the sidelines, coaxing skillful maneuvers out of "his boys," than behind a desk as the administrator. A change is due, come September.

Industries May Occupy City Site

Within the next couple of weeks, the Industrial Park of Virginia Beach off Lynnhaven Road may have some tenants. L. Dean Curtis, executive director of the Virginia Beach Industrial Authority says he hopes deeds will be signed in a few days.

"We already have a sizeable down payment on three tracts of land," said Curtis. "One of the companies will require two of the 2 1/2-acre sites. The other will occupy one site."

Curtis said he was not at liberty to divulge the names of the companies until they themselves made the announcements. He would only describe them as manufacturers.

The two companies will be the first two to purchase land in the park set aside for industry about two years ago.

"Interest has been quite high in the site since the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway opened," said Curtis.

The site is also accessible to railroad tracks and major highways, according to Curtis. It lies just north of the Expressway at the Lynnhaven exit.

The aggregate capital investment in the two new plants in the industrial park, including buildings and land, will be about $500,000, Curtis said. Together the two will eventually employ about 150 people.

Capt. Homer Gets Sea Duty

The Navy's training facility at Dam Neck will have a new commander on March 29.

The change of command ceremony will take place on the base that afternoon. Capt. W. N. Homer will relinquish command to Capt. Stuart Sadler.

Capt. Homer, who has been the commanding officer of Dam Neck for a little more than a year, will take command of a destroyer squadron in the Pacific.

"I'll be glad to get back to sea duty," said Capt. Homer. "I'm most anxious to see what's really going on out there, and this is the best way I know to do it."

Capt. Sadler, who is presently already aboard the Dam Neck facility was formerly Chief of Staff of Cruise and Destroyer Flotilla 8, home-ported in Norfolk.

Capt. Homer has been extremely active in Virginia Beach civic affairs while at Dam Neck. He currently heads the transportation committee of the Virginia Beach Development Council, a committee which has been looking into the problems of mass transportation in the city.

Farm Fresh Opens New Store

The locally-owned Farm Fresh Supermarkets, one of Virginia's largest independent food firms, has opened a new Virginia Beach branch at Robbins Corner, North Independence Boulevard at Pleasure House Road.

Ribbon-cutting ceremonies Feb. 28 initiated a four-weeks' grand-opening program that includes customer gifts and prizes. Mayor Frank Dusch attended the official Wednesday morning opening ceremonies, as well as L. Marshall, Bay-side councilman; G. Dewey Simmons, Lynnhaven councilman; and Alvin Malhes, executive vice president of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce.

According to David Furman, president of Farm Fresh, the new supermarket will encompass an extensive variety of specialized departments most often found today in new and modern stores. "Today's modern woman asks for more selection, more convenience and more specialization in her shopping," said Furman, "and we've designed our new store to provide it."

Furman is last year's Virginia Food Dealers Association president.

The new Farm Fresh at Virginia Beach is an overall 15,000 square foot store with specialized produce and grocery departments, a delicatessen, on-promises bakery, a dairy and a frozen food department and a meat department specializing in USDA Choice beef.

Charles Hale has been appointed store manager. He and his wife and their two children reside at Sandy Bay Drive.

Farm Fresh markets have been in operation in Virginia for 11 years, the latest store additions being in Richmond and Portsmouth. Farm Fresh opened its first supermarket in 1956 at Military Highway, Norfolk. Since that time the chain has grown to include six supermarkets and a drugstore.

Democrats Set Primary

The First District Democratic Committee has called for a primary election under provisions of state law for the second Tuesday in July.

The state primary law requires that the election be called for whether or not there is opposition, but it is not held unless there is opposition.

The action was taken at a meeting of the committee last Saturday at the Chamberlin Hotel in Hampton.

year of $5,800-$400 more than the current school year. The Virginia Beach Education Association had requested a new starting salary of $6,000. Norfolk's proposed starting salary for new teachers next year is $5,800.

Another story in the same newspaper yesterday contradicted the original story. The story by the same writer stated that the starting salary would be $6,000, as recommended by the school Board, and if approved by Council.

Brickell, upon being queried about this, said again that he had no comment, and that he did not see how he could comment until the City Manager was ready to release the contents of the entire City budget.

Another school system spokesman said, however, that part of the new story was still incorrect and was apparently only speculation.

A spokesman for the city added that he regretted the story appearing before members of City Council have had a chance to see the contents of the budget.

Asst. City Manager Roger Scott noted that the full docket for Monday's City Council meeting had not been drawn, but that little of a controversial nature was expected to rise.

Snow Stops Brickell On First Day on Job

Like Franklin Delano Roosevelt, on the first day in office he closed everything down.

Edward E. Brickell's first official act after becoming Virginia Beach superintendent of schools was to close all the schools, thanks to last week's snow.

"Brickell, who joined the Virginia Beach school system in 1966, commented, 'Whoever a new superintendent takes office, there are some who are afraid that he is going to change everything and there are some who are afraid he's going to change nothing; happily, however, the end result usually lies somewhere in between these extremes.'"

Hesitant to talk about specific future changes, Brickell said he wanted to wait until before making any announcement of changes.

He came here from Franklin as director of secondary education and was named assistant superintendent last August when former superintendent Frank W. Cox indicated he would retire.

A native of Norfolk, Brickell received his B.A. degree in English from William & Mary and a master's degree in English in the University of Chicago.

ago Honors Program. Despite his busy schedule he has been teaching night classes in English under the William & Mary extension program in his area.

Brickell and his wife and two children live in Larkspur Forest. He was named First Citizen of South Norfolk in 1964, is a lay speaker and member of Community Methodist Church and is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Delta Kappa, Kappa Delta Pi and Quill and Scroll.

Brickell concluded, "I hope to continue the school system in the direction it's going toward, becoming the best there is."

1st Colonial Library Picked

The school library and text book division of the state board of Education at Richmond announced this week the selection of First Colonial High School as a demonstration school library under provision of Title 2, Public Law 89-10. A grant of $22,222 for books and materials has been made available to the school from Federal funds.

The purpose of this project is to assist selected schools with the development of an exemplary school library. It is hoped that school personnel and interested citizens who visit these established programs will gain ideas for improvements which may be made in their own school library services and facilities.

Nine schools were chosen as demonstration school libraries in the state of Virginia during this school year. The state was divided into four regions and Virginia Beach is located in Zone 1. Other schools selected in this zone are Shenandoah Elementary school in Chesterfield County and Thomas Eaton Junior High School at Hampton.

First Colonial High School, in its second year of operation, is located on First Colonial Road, James C. Mounie is principal of the school and Mrs. Margaret Frazer is the librarian.

Title II of the 89-10 program has provided $227,000 in federal funds for library books and materials over the next three years. In Virginia Beach school system this particular phase of public law 89-10 is the only provision that benefits all schools. Models gotten through 89-10 can be used only for library improvement.

Cox Visits Cox

By Doug Schroeder

A high point of the assembly followed when SCA president Terry W. Cox, president of the SCA, visited Cox a 1965 class ring. The class of '65 was the first to be graduated from Cox. Walter W. Carroll, principal, introduced Cox.

Cox, who has since retired (see March 1) urged his audience to "keep Cox clean," not only in the halls and classrooms, but the students themselves, their minds. The students gave him a standing ovation. The assembly ended with the singing of the high school alma mater.

Two days before his official retirement as superintendent of schools for Virginia Beach, Frank W. Cox was the guest of honor at the high school that bears his name.

"Since 1933, there has been a superintendent of schools in Virginia Beach named Frank W. Cox. Since 1961, there has been a unique high school in Virginia Beach named Frank W. Cox. We are thankful for his work, for without it we would not have this school or his name to call our own."

With these words, from Ann Cherryman, Student Cooperative Association reporter, an SCA assembly in honor of Frank W. Cox was called to order. The assembly was held for some 600 students the morning of Feb. 28 in the Cox auditorium.

After a brief introduction, Miss Cherryman presented Cox with a subscription to the 1968 yearbook, the "Talon." James W. French, assistant principal of the high school, gave a short history of Cox High, and presented Cox with a plaque on behalf of the faculty and administration. Patti Morris, SCA vice president, then read the Code of Ethics and made Cox an honorary member of the Student Cooperative Association by giving him an SCA card.

Curtis Kemp, SCA second vice president, then read passages from Khalil Gibran's "The Prophet," and presented the book to Cox.

UPON A SUMMERTIME—)

This is for those people that like "mood" music, mostly soft, gentle mood music. The Clebanoff Strings is one of the most well respected names in instrumental music, and they live up to their reputation in this latest album for Decca. Clebanoff has taken themes and songs from the more popular, recent, movies and has turned them into very enjoyable listening experiences. Experiences that will be even more meaningful for those that have seen the various movies. Shows such as "Waltz Until Dark," "Far From the Madding Crowd," "Doctor Dolittle," "PJ" and the best seller, "Valley of the Dolls" are represented.

Also included in this excellent collection are "The Last Waltz," the title song "Once Upon A Summertime," and a new composition by George Harrison of the Beatles "With In You Without You."

Herman Clebanoff is, and has been for years, one of the most versatile musicians in the business. In the past he has performed as soloist, concert master, conductor, staff musician on radio, and even as a Gypsy violinist in cafes. Mr. Clebanoff has worked with every type of musical group from symphony orchestras to trios. In this album he is the featured solo violinist.

If you enjoy beautiful, full music, you'll enjoy The Clebanoff Strings' "Once Upon A Summertime." (SURFSIDE 1550-MARCH 7, 1968)

Development Committee Announced

Fourteen prominent Virginia Beach residents will serve on an Area Development Committee for Virginia Wesleyan College, according to an announcement this week by Henry Clay Hoehmer, II, chairman of the college's Trustees' Development Committee.

These committee members will assist in Virginia Beach in helping Virginia Wesleyan College to raise $500,000 to complete the Phase II development program. College officials announced in January that $500,000 toward a $1,000,000 goal had been raised. The committee members expect to carry out a limited solicitation in Virginia Beach during March and early April.

Listed on the committee are Harold B. Kellam and William J. Vaughan, co-chairmen, Thomas Broyles, William G. Bruce, James W. Buffington, W. Clark Flemler, Jr., A. Richard Hasler, Kermit S. Land, Everett A. Martin, Walter B. Menden, Swindell Pollock, Frank D. Tarrall, Jr., Dr. Roger Visser and Kenneth N. Whitehurst, Sr.

The committee is raising funds for two projects—the college's portion of the money necessary for the science building and the final payment on the land.

Glue Bill Should Help City Police

Members of the Virginia Legislature in the closing moments of the current General Assembly session approved legislation which would outlaw glue sniffing.

The bill was originally introduced by Virginia Beach State Sen. Edward T. Caton, III, after the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN pointed out there were no existing laws which could be used by police officers in their efforts to deal with persons engaging in the practice.

Police have located several places in Virginia Beach where large numbers of paper bags containing quantities of glue were found but were hindered in charging persons with taking part in "glue sniffing" because of the lack of a specific law covering the practice.

Members of the Virginia Beach City Council also considered enacting a city ordinance to give authorities legal grounds to sue with the practice, but delayed their action pending any action by members of the State Legislature.

It now appears law enforcement officers will have the power to cope with another situation which could channel persons into illegal use of drugs or narcotics and possibly lead them into a life of crime.

While reaction to the move by State Legislatures has been favorable, Virginia Beach police officials along with city Attorney Harry Marshall have understandably withheld comment on future steps which may be taken pending full details of contents of the bill and what action may be taken by Gov. Mills Godwin.

First and Merchants senior vice president, Edward H. Church, stands beside the sign announcing the advent of the BankAmericard, "the one that does it all."

Card Covers Everything

Virginia's own First and Merchants National bank has gotten on the BankAmericard bandwagon, and by early March, Virginia Beach residents will have the "card that does everything" in their hands.

Edward H. Church, senior vice president at First and Merchants, said that about 240 Beach merchants have been accepted as authorized outlets for BankAmericard charges.

According to Robert L. Gordon, bank president, there are 2,000 card outlets in the state, running from every variety retail store to restaurants, hotels, motels and even medical services.

One of the most widely respected international credit cards, the BankAmericard was initiated in 1959 by California's Bank of America. It has been licensed to 21 United States banks throughout 17 states and is handled internationally both by Bank of America's foreign offices and the branches of Barclay's of Great Britain.

First and Merchants began negotiations for the BankAmericard in September, 1967, and started putting their plans into effect in January. Church set a target date of two years from now as the time when the card will be handled by banks in all 50 states.

The card will be mailed March 5 to approximately 200,000 Virginia Cardholders in 19 cities and communities. The card has been issued at no membership charge.

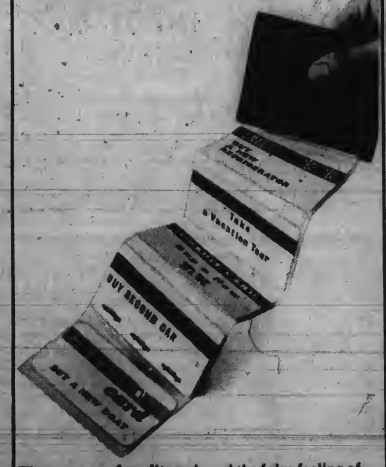

BankAmericard is now held by some 6,000,000 Americans; over 150,000 businesses in this country honor the card. Virginia BankAmericard anticipates more than doubling its holders and businesses in 1968.

Boy Scouts Police Map Tells Tourists Where to Go

The first semester of the 1968 University of Scouting will begin at 7:30 p.m., March 14 at Thalia Trinity Presbyterian Church. All other classes of the spring semester will be held at Thalia Elementary School.

The University of Scouting is a training session designed to prepare the leaders of units, parents of scouts and other public-minded individuals for their part in the building of tomorrow's leaders.

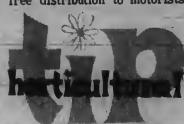

The training pattern used at the university is based on "On the Job" training and discussion where adults come together to work in fellowship, according to Ed Russell, PAVAB District Scout executive. The program provides interested persons with an opportunity to learn what the scouting program has to offer and how to apply it for the best results, he said.

The schedule is as follows: March 14—The Cub Scout Program, The Boy Scout Program, This is Exploring; March 21—Planning the Cub Scout Program, The Patrol Method, Explorer Leadership, I.R. and District Operation;

March 28—The Den Meeting and Pack Management, The Explorer Program, Merit Badge Counselors Training, Troop Mother's Auxiliary; April 4, Den Operation and Pack Meeting, Training Boy Leaders, Understanding Exploring, Training the Committee;

April 11—Webelos Den Operation, Program Planning; April 18—Training the Den Leader Coach, Advancement and Troop Financing; April 25—Boy Behavior.

Men of the Second Precinct of the Virginia Beach Police Division have taken a unique step designed to assist motorists unfamiliar with this region. Small maps are being made available in the Precinct for free distribution to motorists.

The map was designed by Capt. R. C. Davis, Precinct C. O., who said the men of the precinct felt the map was necessary "due to the many inquiries regarding services which can only be rendered at Police Headquarters or the Court offices, and motorists unfamiliar with routings to the southern extremity of the city."

Capt. Davis also told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN the maps bear a reminder to obey the laws of the city and state as a means of protecting themselves and the community.

The maps were prepared at no cost to the city, but rather were paid for by men of the Second Precinct from their own "station funds."

According to Capt. Davis a request has been received from officers in the City Hall Annex, located within a block of the Precinct, for a supply of the maps to be distributed there.

Distribution of the maps received full approval of Police Chief James E. Moore who told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN "I think it's an excellent idea, and the location of the Precinct will make the maps even more valuable as the approaching tourist season will bring an increasing number of travelers into our city."

Up, Up and Away

Somehow or other, to build a brand new airport a few yards from an existing one right in the very middle of a city doesn't add up exactly right, even if highly-trained and highly-paid consultants want to see Norfolk spent $12 million that way.

We do not suggest that the present inadequate Norfolk airport cannot go on being used safely forever, even if it is in a heavily populated area. We have been lucky with the fairly limited amount of air traffic so far...but that is going to get far worse.

The report also says it is cheaper to build there where the residents of the area and the Botanical Gardens are already up in arms than to go elsewhere and start over. That may well be because of the cost of real estate, but does it really make sense to build a major air terminal in a place where it can never expand again...as it must?

And then there's that application for a new Metropolitan designation for the airport. How can it serve all of us well? It will only then be near to Norfolk, not the rest of us. Gentlemen, we are not consultants. We are not airport planners. We are not airline representatives. But we are citizens of Virginia Beach, the city that in 20 years will be the largest city in Virginia. And we still have lots of land, as does our neighbor of Chesapeake, for a fine airport, Metropolitan or otherwise.

The time has come now for everyone in the area to stop being so interested in "self." We must get a new airport somewhere to serve all of us. And we just cannot see expansion on the present site so that in another 10 years, more inadequacy will develop.

Surely, Virginia Beach needs its own airport. There are those who are working toward that aim, however slowly. And we also are in the perfect spot for the next International air terminal if we work it right and show genuine interest.

We cannot afford to drag our feet on this one. We must get moving now. And we must look again at the $12 million mistake that could be made in Norfolk.

License Changes

The watered-down bill passed by the Virginia General Assembly concerning new requirements for drivers' licenses will possibly reduce the number of accidents somewhat. We certainly hope so. The number of fatalities each year on our roads is horrible. But the changes passed so far are actually more of a harassment to the driver than they will be an accident deterrent.

Granted also that Virginia had to pass at least these changes or lose federal assistance. But again we hope the harassment is worth the money.

Taking eye tests when the permit is renewed at, or near age 30 and 38 and then every time after 42 seems silly. Few in their right minds who can't see well are going to drive in today's traffic. And that color photo of the driver that will help increase the cost of the license from $3 to $9 is rather ridiculous.

Let us hope this keeps the speeders, the reckless drivers and drunks off our roads.

Where Do We Sign?

The Attorney General of Virginia has now handed down an opinion that we can begin gathering names of qualified petitioners who would seek a referendum in Virginia Beach on liquor-by-the-drink. The local option law, however, still doesn't become law until July, and no matter what, the earliest possible date a drink can be served across a bar legally anywhere in Virginia will be about Oct. 1.

In Virginia Beach we will need a few more than 3,500 qualified voters to sign petitions before the question can be put before all the voters. We suggest that an active and organized campaign be mounted as soon as practicable here to get as many names as possible by the time the bill becomes law. Don't stop at 3,500. Get 20,000, if possible.

Apathy could still possibly keep it from becoming law in Virginia Beach for another four years. The "antis" can be counted on to campaign vigorously to get the votes out against. And they will go to the polls. Those in favor must be made to see the pitfalls unless they also go out to the polls in record numbers.

Until the day of the referendum, active campaigning must continue to get it passed here.

Vietnam Victory

Within a week Senator Harry F. Byrd, Jr. and First District Congressman Thomas N. Downing spoke out "hawkishly" in separate speeches in Virginia Beach on the subject of Vietnam.

Downing supported all out military efforts to win. Byrd, while soft-pedaling the same support, advocated blocking any supplies reaching North Vietnam from any country.

Certainly there are the "doves" who will not agree with either man, but we find it particularly significant that both are merely trying to end the war. We support the policies of both Byrd and Downing, to end the war by winning it.

No longer can this nation continue under its present course. The war must be ended honorably and soon to save America from economic problems beyond comprehension.

MEASURING UP?

Rebuttal

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

An editorial in your paper on February 22, 1968 stated: "Almost unnoticed, a tremendous amount of planting has been done throughout Virginia Beach to beautify the area." May I, as president of The Council of Garden Clubs of Virginia Beach, Inc., say our membership of over 1000 ladies are very conscious and constantly aware of the planting that is going on in our city.

Our members are exerting every effort to live up to our motto, "Beautify The City in Which We Live." The planting of hundreds of Crape Myrtle trees throughout the entire city this Spring, with plans to continue the planting, is made possible by contributions made by Garden Clubs and individual members of the Council of Garden Clubs in cooperation with our City officials in charge of the Planning and Planting.

In the past five years, the Council of Garden Clubs has contributed over $10,000 to landscape and beautify the grounds of the General Hospital of Virginia Beach, plus money to plant Crape Myrtle and dogwood trees along First Colonial Road, Laskin Road and miles of Oceana Blvd., with plans to continue on to the Princess Anne Court House.

As participants in the "Hands" program (Home and neighborhood development sponsors) with a grant from the Sears Roebuck Community Improvement Fund, Garden Clubs have and are continuing to beautify residential areas, business areas, churches, schools, etc.

Now to get to the controversial subject of the Orange trash cans.

A member of the Beautification Commission, who is also a garden club member, presented the subject to the Council. The Beautification Commission decided to petition the City officials to renew the orange painted trash cans with green so that they would blend with the landscape around them. It was thought that the Council of Garden Clubs would agree with them.

A motion was made, seconded and carried (no dissenting votes) to write the City Manager. Our minds then turned to other business at hand and that motion was forgotten, except that the letter would be written, until it was hashed and rehearsed by the news media.

As for the ladies giving Mr. Hatchett, Mayor Dusch and other City officials a "compliment or two," you can be assured that this has been done many times, verbally, in person in writing and through the papers. Our relationship has been of the highest quality, and we have worked on projects that would more beautify our city for many years, always in a most cooperative and harmonious manner.

Mrs. C. L. Hershberger, President.

Praises Newsmen

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

On Thursday, Feb. 1, 1968 a news story which was to have national impact was carried by the news media in this area. Everyone in the area is by now aware of the recent narcotics and drug investigation, which originated in this City. However, what the public does not know is the responsible attitude taken by the press and particularly by Mr. Joseph Lowenthal and Mr. Les Lehigh of the Virginia Beach Sun and Radio Station WVAZ. Mr. Lowenthal and Mr. Lehigh were well aware on Tuesday, Jan. 30, 1968 as to what was going on and the news value involved.

In keeping with the best interest of the public and for the sake of the success or failure of the investigation, Mr. Lowenthal and Mr. Lehigh, at the request of my office, gave us the time that was so essential to the successful outcome of the investigation by requesting their agencies to withhold publication until a formal release was made by my office one day later.

In assuming an attitude of public responsibility and the exhibition of dedication to public service, adhering to ethics and fair, impartial and factual reporting, both in the first and continuing news stories, Mr. Lowenthal and Mr. Lehigh were indeed in keeping with the highest standards of news reporting and public service.

The Virginia Beach Sun, WVAZ, Mr. Lowenthal and Mr. Lehigh are to be commended. Mr. Lowenthal and Mr. Lehigh are a credit to their profession and to their respective agencies, who can well be proud of the above two gentlemen. James E. Moore, Chief Department of Police. Ed. Note: Mr. Lehigh and I thank Chief Moore for his kind words. Unsolicited accolades of this type are hard to come by. The VIRGINIA BEACH SUN staff, its publishers and executive officers take great pride in maintaining high journalistic standards in reporting the news, as well as in ever cooperating with those in authority, especially when they have a particular "sticky" and difficult task to perform.

'Freedom - My Heritage, My Responsibility'

Each year letters from armed forces personnel are submitted to the Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge by servicemen from all over the world. Cash awards and medals are awarded by the patriotic organization for the best entries.

For 1967 a Virginia Beach naval officer, stationed aboard the USS Forrestal in the Operations Department won one of the coveted medals, the George Washington Honor Medal Award, as well as $100, for his entry.

Reprinted with permission is the letter from Lcdr. L. M. Stevenson, Jr., USN.

Various segments of the population of America these days, from college professors to hippies, have taken it upon themselves to cry out for "Peace." Their espousal of the cause of peace takes many forms, from public forum to draft-card burning; from statements in the press to picket lines at the Pentagon. They advocate and support virtually any and all measures which might achieve this elusive quality called Peace.

But what is Peace? Is it the condition enjoyed by the convict in his cell? By the slave? By the peasant paying tribute to a tyrant out of his meager production in order that he might go on living? If so, it is a commodity of little value.

There is another quality which must necessarily exist before peace can be at all meaningful; and that quality is Freedom. I am in favor of peace, too—I think anyone who has been in combat, who has seen war close up, favors peace. War is ugly, cruel, destructive. But uglier far is oppression, immeasurably more cruel is tyranny. Destructive in a more real sense is slavery. The processes by which these "peaceful" forms of ugliness destroy people may take longer, but they are far more thorough, for they destroy not only the body, but the mind and spirit as well. They may not blow up buildings, but they will rot the foundations of an entire nation.

Yes, I think peace would be great. I'm all for it. Except at the expense of liberty, I would rather pay for freedom with peace than the other way round.

Certainly our forefathers felt this way. Life in the colonies could have been peaceful enough, and much more comfortable than winter Valley Forge. The slave on the plantation enjoyed more peace than the soldier at Shiloh or Gettysburg. And why should we involve ourselves in a war in Europe—a whole ocean away?

Yet, again and again, throughout the history of this country, generations of Americans have left their homes, their families, their jobs—all the trappings of Peace—to fight for freedom. And not even their own freedom, usually. At least not at that instant. They realized, as we must realize today, that so long as tyranny exists in the world, no free man can afford to ignore it or condone it in the name of Peace, or he will not be free long.

Freedom, my heritage, is my responsibility, for it is under attack everywhere. America, for all her faults and weaknesses, is the last meaningful, significant bastion of Freedom in a troubled world. Yet, even now, the tide shows signs of turning. The embers of freedom have begun to glow in lands around the world where despots thought them extinguished utterly, due to the sacrifices of free men. We must not stop now. We must continue in the cause of Freedom as individuals and as a nation, until all men everywhere can say, "Yes, Freedom is my heritage and my responsibility," too.

SPOTS

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

It all began Friday, which was a bad day anyway, since it had snowed and the kids couldn't go out. Both had their usual colds. The store, which shall remain nameless, had promised that the color TV would be delivered early that morning. There were several telephone calls back and forth from office to home and vice versa.

"Has it come?" he asked.

"No," she answered.

"OK call you later," he said. "Bye."

Tune in Next Week,

Same

Time

Confusion

"Where are you going?" she yelled after him as he stomped out of the house.

"To have a few words with our friendly TV salesman," He roared off.

A little later he was back, confident that a serviceman would arrive on the scene first thing Saturday morning to fix the thing. He had heard the salesman call the service department to get the call okayed. They promised faithfully.

"All that snow looks great in color, but I'll bet those delivery fellows hooked it up wrong, he said," as he began to investigate the antenna connections. They were hooked up correctly, but touching each other, shorting the whole mess out. He fixed it, and, miracle of miracles...color TV.

"Now fix the sound," she said. "It's much too loud."

"I can't. The switch is broken," he muttered under his breath. It's either going to be too soft or too loud until the man gets here and puts in a new switch.

That night they watched everything from Gomer Pyle to Johnny Carson. Sure, the color wasn't set right. Sure Carson's nose was red, his eyes purple and his ears green.

"The serviceman can fix it all when he gets here first thing in the morning," he assured her as they stumbled off to bed after the Late, Late, Late show.

By 11 a.m. Saturday he was not certain what time a serviceman day began, so he once again called his friendly TV salesman, Mr. All-You Have-to-Is-Plug-It-In Whatsitname. He promised to investigate and call back. All she could hear was one end of the conversation when he did, and it was enough. "There, make a little mistake and set it up for first thing Monday morning," he said too calmly. "I'll be friendly TV salesman, either you get a repairman out here by this afternoon for my brand new color TV for which I will be in hook for years, or send those two delivery boys back to cart it out on their backs." (Pause) "You'll have someone here? Wonderful, Bye."

He came about 5 p.m. and adjusted some knobs, before pronouncing it a very sick brand new color TV set, for which he would require an entire afternoon of "setting up" and to put in a new volume control switch.

Of course friendly TV salesman had said all this was done before it ever left the store. "Bunk," said friendlier TV repairman.

Confident in the knowledge that it would be fixed Tuesday, they sat back that evening to watch Jackie Gleason and the Hollywood Palace, among other shows. (They can't stand either, but they were beautiful in color. So what if Art Carney had purple eyebrows?)

It was shortly after 9 p.m. when the phone rang. Again all she could hear was his end of the conversation.

"Hello... (Pause)... No, I haven't. It was delivered yesterday. (Pause) Yes, that's right...I hope you find him soon. Bye."

"Who was that?" she asked.

He was laughing almost too hard to tell her, but in between hysterical gulps of air, he managed to say, "That was the delivery department of the store. They were trying to locate one of their drivers and wanted to know if our color TV had been delivered yet. She seemed very surprised when I said it had been delivered yesterday. I think they're still looking for the driver. Poor fellow must be lost."

"They really know how to keep the public happy, don't they?" she asked.

"Just relax and enjoy it," he said. "Hey! Look, the NBC peacock has orange feathers!"

New Poodle Club Sets Meeting

A poodle is a noodle you say? That's just half the story. There are three sizes to begin with—standard, miniature and toy. And they come in a variety of colors ranging from black, through gray to apricot (Breeders are trying to develop a true pink poodle).

The whole point is that a new poodle club, The Tide Lands Poodle Club of Virginia, is being formed and will hold a meeting at 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 13 at the Virginia Beach Activity Center on Recreation Drive (the old Nike site).

Mrs. Donald McNeerney, who operates the Poodle Boutique at Princess Anne Plaza, will speak on "Know Your Poodle." There will be several poodles on display. A discussion will follow.

Mrs. McNeerney said she hopes the club will interest poodle owners who do not show their dogs professionally but keep them as pets. She said the main difference in show poodles and pet poodles is that show poodles are not trimmed, which requires much more care with their belts.

Anyone interested in poodles is invited to the meeting.

Designs Model

Eight-year-old Jeff Corbitt, of F Avenue, NAS Oceana, has designed a model of a road-runner from Tinkertoys, and has been awarded a Junior Engineer Certificate from the Toy Tinkers, a division of A. G. Spaulding & Bros., Inc.

Along with the certificate, Jeff received news that the model will automatically be entered in the 1968 Scholarship Award Program to find the most imaginative creation of the year.

Each of the 50 state finalists, to be selected at the close of the 1968 program, will be awarded a handsomely mounted, engraved wall plaque. One national winner, who will receive a $1,000 Savings Bond Scholarship and expense-paid trip to New York for himself and his parents, will be chosen from the state finalists.

Mrs. Donald McNeerney admires Bedouin, a six-month-old French poodle, with the full head of hair that matters to the good breeding to prove it.

Play On At School

On Feb. 29 and March 1, the Drama Club of the Colonial staged its first production of the year, "The World in Eighty Days."

The presentations marked the end of an extensive schedule of rehearsal and practice by the 25 member cast. Madrigal Chorus, and the personnel involved in the production.

The main characters in the play were Chris Wade as Phileas Fogg, Efrin Osorio as Passepartout, John Wolfes as Inspector Fix, and Gail Gordon as Mrs. Aouda. The play was directed by Mrs. Wade's sister, Mrs. Louise Lowenthal. The play was a success, and the cast members were praised for their performance.

Girl Scouts To Compete Saturday

The girl scouts will hold their neighborhood arts festival Saturday, March 9, at Plaza Elementary School on Lynnhaven Road, from 2 to 4 p.m. About 16 troops in the Princess Anne Plaza-Windsor Woods area will take part. About 60 girls are expected to participate in various competitive events.

Events ranging from drawing and painting, photography, dramatic skills, singing, poetry, and dance to puppetry, pottery and weaving will be judged. Judges are H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr., managing editor of the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, Mrs. Louise Lowenthal and Mrs. Gertrude H. Duke, all former teachers in the Virginia Beach school system.

Winners in the various contests will then compete in a Councilwide arts festival of Girl Scouts to be held in April at Virginia Wesleyan College. Mr. Lowenthal will also address the festival on "The increasing value of art in a modern world."

Hospitality House Finds Home--Again

The Hospitality House has found a new home in Virginia Beach, but again it may be only a temporary situation. The Virginia Beach Ministerial Association had been searching for a place to set up the facility for servicemen this summer, but were unable to come up with a suitable place.

Then Algy Cohen, who has worked closely with the association and has served as the city's liaison between the association and the Department of Parks and Recreation, "stumbled" onto the site which will be used this summer.

Cohen said, "The response to our pleas for help in finding a home were very poor. Then I just sort of stumbled onto this one...and it's just perfect."

The site is on 24th Street, about two blocks from the oceanfront, according to Cohen, and has been leased in a one-year basis. Cohen says it has a large attic, a large basement, a fine, large back yard and three dressing rooms.

"It just suits our needs to a 'T,'" said Cohen. "If it works out, there is a possibility we might be able to purchase this one."

In the past the Hospitality House has been in churches, old stores and in the basement of the annex to the General Hospital of Virginia Beach.

Either the places have been torn down or the facility has had to be moved each year recently for one reason or another.

The Hospitality House is supported by the United Communities Fund and the Virginia Beach Ministerial Association, with some aid from the city, recreation commission, and local military installations. Volunteer help has also made the center possible. It has been considered to be a great asset to the resort for servicemen either in the area or who come to the beach on a visit.

Bayside Wins First Place

Bayside High School's band was the only Tidewater representative at Frederickburg's George Washington's Birthday Celebration, Feb. 24, at Fredericksburg.

The band, one of about 20 entering the festivities, won the $100 first prize, to add one more notch to an already impressive record.

Bayside's band, directed by O. J. Doyle, Jr., has entered and placed in three competitive band programs this year. They have taken two first place awards and one third.

Miss Elaine Ward and Track H. Redburn, who were selected Youth Leaders of the Great Neck Baptist Chapel's Youth Week, March 18 through 24, hold "the Chapel key," their badge of office. The church meets in Trantwood School.

Va. Alumni Will Meet

The Virginia Beach Chapter of the University of Virginia Alumni association will meet tonight at 6:30 p.m., at the Pine Tree Inn.

The University's director of development and public affairs, William Hobbs, will discuss

"Where the University Is Today and a Look to the Future." Hobbs, a former president of M.A. Hanna Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, is a Norfolk native and has been a member of the University's Board of Visitors since 1963. He assumed his current duties July 1, 1967.

Vision Week Continues

Sunday March 3, began the annual observance of National Save Your Vision Week. It has been announced by Paul Sternberg, O.D., president of the Tidewater Council of Optometry.

Save Your Vision Week is a national, concentrated effort to draw the attention of the American people to their vision and its care, said Dr. Sternberg. "Goals during this week are to remind people not to take their eyesight for granted, but to remember that it is their most precious sense; to remind them that proper care and safety measures are necessary if good vision is to be preserved, and that an annual professional vision examination is essential to detect any subtle vision changes and to detect any problem before it becomes serious," he continued.

"It is easy to realize the importance of good vision, to realize how much we depend on it for nearly everything we learn and do," said Dr. Sternberg. "Just pause and think of the things you do during a normal day--how many could be done easily without good vision? Without full sight, we would be badly handicapped in our everyday lives. During this week, we hope everyone will ponder these things."

The present staff of Virginia Beach Fire Inspectors consist of (R to L) Milton Holland, chief inspector, James Jessup, Fred Quist, asst. chief inspector, and Jake Brammer.

Inspectors Check All Fires

"Our primary objective in this business is to serve the general public by assisting in handling complaints, and at the same time try to maintain top public relations."

These were the words of Milton Holland, chief fire inspector for the city of Virginia Beach in describing the operation of the Fire Prevention Bureau. Holland is assisted by Fred Quist, Assistant Chief; Jake Brammer and James Jessup. Another important member of the staff is Mrs. Ginger Lee, "Grl Friday" who handles office correspondence, records which are kept in the office, and channels complaints to the inspector assigned to that category of investigation.

The Fire Prevention Bureau was formed at the time of the merging of Virginia Beach and Princess Anne County. The Bureau comes under the direction of the city's Public Safety Director, and operates with funds provided by allocations within the City budget. Chief Holland told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN he has requested an additional man in the Bureau, providing the next City budget will permit.

At least one of the inspectors respond to all major fires in the city, not only to investigate the cause of the fire being questionable or of a suspicious nature, but to render whatever assistance possible in fighting any fire. The inspectors automatically respond to any fire which involves injury or death of any person. Investigation of a fire not only consists of examining material or structure involved in the fire, as well as photographing same, but the interviewing of persons who may have occupied the structure and any one who may have witnessed the fire.

Reports of the activities of the Bureau, and their findings during investigations, as well as the inspections of buildings being constructed meeting fire safety requirements are submitted on a regular schedule to the Public Safety Directors Office. Reports of fire investigations are of a confidential nature and are not open for public use, however the public is entitled to reports of any inspection activities.

The longest, and most involved investigation, recently handled by the Bureau is of the fire which damaged the

G. E. X. Store on Virginia Beach Boulevard last year. Holland told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN "that fire represented the biggest loss since formation of the Bureau, and was declared the largest fire loss in the State last year."

In addition to being concerned with fire prevention and investigation, the Bureau also provides escorts for trucks which transport explosives through the city. The issuing of various permits is also handled by the Bureau.

Such permits concern the public burning of leaves and trash, storage of hazardous materials, construction of underground tanks for storage of inflammable liquids, the installation of commercial "LP" gas systems, and making certain tents which are put up in the city for public assemblies are raised in a manner which will provide safety for occupants.

The great concern over fire prevention was illustrated when Chief Holland pointed out the amount of time spent in appearances in schools of the city and during meetings of civic groups in a constant urging of protection against loss of life or property because of fire. Holland said, "the simplest way to stop a fire is to prevent it before it starts. We urge all family's and business owners, to outline a plan of several escape routes from their buildings in the event of a fire, and hold practice drills over these escape routes as a life saving factor."

According to Holland one of the biggest concerns of the Bureau is the leaving of young children unattended in homes or other buildings. Examples were cited in the loss of young lives when children were unguarded for only a few minutes. Statistics indicate an increasing number of deaths attributed to fire. While Virginia Beach has recorded only two fatalities in fires thus far this year, there were ten in the city last year, as compared to nine during the year 1966.

THE WOMEN

VIRGINIA BEACH SUN

Thursday, March 7, 1968

HemisFair's "Confluence of Civilizations" theme inspired the Java group from Henson-Kickernick. The tailored group of night-wear is bound with gold-embroidered ribbon and designed in rich, oriental colors. Shown are the Kurta, an Indian-inspired pajama, and a coat.

Gingham girl checks and crocheted lace reflect the feminine influence of HemisFair '68 in Lady Flair's cool sundress. Four great buttons close the back bodice over a gently bubbled skirt. In rayon and cotton; sizes 6-20; about $12.

Texas Fashions Have International Flair

Texas Fashion Creators, inspired by HemisFair '68, have illustrated the variety of cultures found in the New World in their Summer 1968 collections.

In showing the "Confluence of Civilizations in the Americas," Texas designers have pulled the historic costumes of other continents, incorporating some facets of them in their styles. From the Alpine countries they took the laced bodice and dirndl skirt trimmed with flowered embroidery. The high waist, tied with ribbon, and the low neckline was borrowed from the court of Napoleon. They imported the tiered skirt and fitted bolero from Spain and Renaissance lace from Italy.

The new, feminine look in fashions fits perfectly into this historic mood. Romantic sleeves and a froth of lace or eyelet. Necklines are scooped out and softened with collars and flounces. Lines follow the body and outline the waist with insets, belts and seams. Skirts widen into a flip of pleats, swinging gores or frothy dirndls. The look emphasizes frills and old-fashioned prettiness.

Romance turns sexy in the clothes brought back by Faye Dunaway in the movie "Bonnie and Clyde." The skinny, slinky dresses of the Thirties cling to the body in soft, draping fabrics. This alluring look is marvelous for at-home wear.

For nights away from home, T. F. C. A. designers have interpreted the Fiesta atmosphere of HemisFair '68 in a group of extravagant evening clothes. Turning their backs on the "simple" look, they speak of luxury and elegance. Great froths of lace billow at the neckline. Tiers of ruffles form wide skirts and silk rustles beneath a sparkle of sequins. Heavy crusts of jewel beads glitter against the soft sheen of satin.

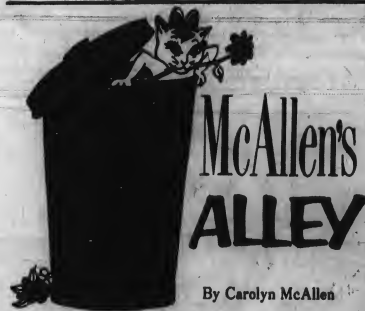

From the extravagant, Texas fashions go to the practical with suits and dresses for travel and sightseeing. With tourists for the National PGA Golf tournament and the National Women's Bowling tournament, as well as HemisFair, San Antonio will have more than seven million visitors this summer. They will arrive in tailored suits and ensembles. For touring HemisFair and San Antonio, they will have active clothes--skirts and culottes--which don't restrict movement. Non-wrinkling blends and knits fold into suitcases and come out fresh and smooth.

The physical face of HemisFair '68 has left its mark on Texas fashions. Its patterns and colors have been used in playclothes and sportswear. The clean lines of its modern buildings come alive in strong, sharp prints. The ornate ironwork and facades of its historic structures decorate slacks. The symbols of ancient Indian cultures are applied on casual dresses and ruffled pantdresses bloom with HemisFair gardens.

The many facets of HemisFair--the fun, the history and the purpose--influenced the Texas collections and through these clothes you can see HemisFair '68, the first world's fair in the Southwest.

What Would You Do--Bury It?

It's a lot of garbage.

That's a first hand report from my mother who ought to know. She's surrounded by it.

What would you do with almost three weeks' accumulation of trash? That's what she has. Although it has not received the publicity New York did, Memphis has had a sanitation department strike going for more than two weeks with no signs of settlement. (Memphis has a population of over 600,000.)

Of course, a garbage disposal helps to a certain extent, but a disposal can do just so much. Then there's always bottles, cans, paper and so on...

Articles in a Memphis newspaper the first few days advised homemakers to flatten all tin cans (remember World War II?) and try to conserve as much trash space as possible. Then when things dragged on, the newspapers ran out of advice (and garbage cans?) and just gave up on the subject.

Some housewives took matters into their own hands and drove their accumulation of trash to the parking lot of one shopping center and deposited it. Pictures showed a huge pile.

It seems like the ideal situation for our City's R.E. Dorer whose unique "trash mountains" have earned him national recognition and a federal grant. His method includes compressing the garbage and covering layers with dirt to form a mound. This, hopefully, may become an amphitheatre in the future.

Memphis could use an amphitheatre, but I'm not sure the middle of a parking lot would be the ideal site.

State President to Cut Ribbon

Show Opens Saturday

Things should be pretty hectic at the Cavalier Cabana Club tomorrow night and Saturday as garden clubbers set up the annual flower show sponsored by the Council of Garden Clubs of Virginia Beach, Inc.

Mrs. Charles T. Benjamin of Mechanicsville, president of the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs, will cut the ribbon to officially open the show at 3 p.m. Saturday, March 9. The hours are 3 to 9 p.m. Saturday and 1 to 8:30 p.m. Sunday.

The theme of this year's show is "A Thing of Beauty is a Joy Forever." Mrs. M.J. Schwartz is general chairman and Mrs. Joseph Davis and Mrs. Richard C. Dunaja are co-chairmen.

Frank Israel of Virginia Beach, president of the Tidewater Orchid Society, will set up an orchid display for the show. He recently won several awards at the state orchid show in Richmond.

An educational exhibit will also be furnished by the Girl Scouts, who will be celebrating Girl Scout Week next week.

The show will incorporate an African violet show and will also include a junior division.

Tickets will be on sale at the door for 90 cents.

Proceeds from the show will be used toward beautification of Virginia Beach. The Council of Garden Clubs has already "adopted" the General Hospital of Virginia Beach for a landscaping project.

Other money is used to purchase trees and shrubs for planting along major streets such as First Colonial Road, Virginia Beach Boulevard, Independence Boulevard and General Booth Boulevard, for example.

Women Slush To Service

It just couldn't happen two years straight--but it almost did.

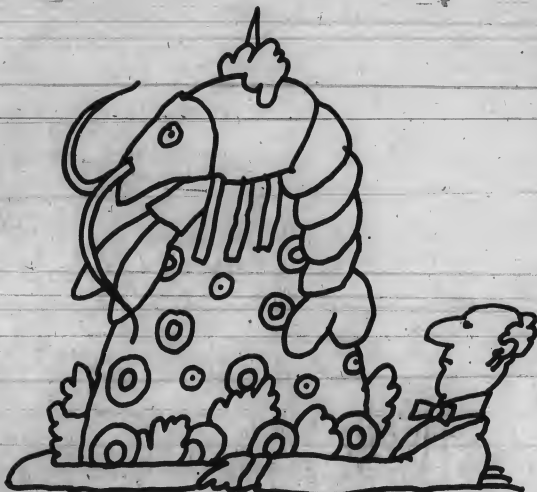

Last year World Day of Prayer services were canceled in Virginia Beach because of snow. Last Friday they were canceled in Norfolk and Chesapeake while hardy Virginia Beach Women pulled on their boots and mushed through three inches of snow to attend services at Star of the Sea Catholic Church.

Despite the weather, a large group of women showed up to hear Clifford Robinson, a Society of Friends missionary, speak on "Bear One Another's Burdens." He later conducted a retreat for the Virginia Beach Council of Church Women United at the Washington Club Inn.

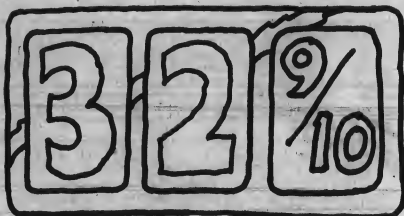

All money collected at the service is slated for use in home and foreign mission projects.

Soil Is Essential

BLACKSBURG--Soil is a fascinating material which is essential for human life. Plants growing in the soil supply the food we eat, the beautiful flowers we enjoy in our homes, and the grass, shrubs and trees we use for landscaping. Let's examine the soil closely and discover how it functions to provide so many good things for us.

Soil is composed of three ingredients: particles of broken rock, organic matter and microorganisms. When water and air are present in proper amounts, this mixture provides physical and nutritional support for plants.

The texture of the soil, which really refers to the size of its rock particles, is the most important feature in determining whether it is good or poor for a garden. This particle size varies from sand which is coarse, to silt which is fine and to clay which is very fine.

Coarse sandy soils are infertile and hold very little water. Clay, on the other hand, with its very fine texture, is quite fertile. The particles pack closely together and hold large amounts of water. Clay soils are heavy and hard to work. Silt is between sand and clay in fineness and also in its fertility and water-holding capacity.

Organic matter is a very important material because it adds fertility and improves the water-holding capacity of sandy soils. It is also very useful in clay soils because it loosens them and makes them easier to work.

Loam is the ideal soil type which is composed of a mixture of sand, silt, clay and organic matter. It is ideal because the sand provides aeration and drainage, and the silt, clay and organic matter give fertility and water-holding capacity.

In your home garden you cannot easily change the amount of sand or clay in your soil. However, by using organic matter, you can improve either one and make it more productive and easier to work.

The best way to improve soils is to use an organic mulch such as sawdust, peat moss or leaves during the growing season. In the fall, cut your old vegetable and flower plants into pieces about six to eight inches long and leave this trash on your garden as a winter mulch. Plow the mulch and trash into the soil in the spring, along with a liberal application of fertilizer. In a few years, you will have a rich mellow soil which will be the envy of your gardening neighbors.

Miss Owens in her "office." Staff Artist Wins Prize

Carolyn Owens is our idea gal—officially the staff artist of the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN.

One of her ideas paid off recently when she won the prize for a slogan for the Tidewater Job Fair in which Virginia Beach is participating. Her winning entry was "Step Up Thru the Job Fair." The contest was sponsored by the Advertising Club of Norfolk of which Miss Owens is a member.

The job fair, second to be held, is set for the Norfolk Arena on May 14-15. Its purpose is to help find jobs for ghetto residents.

Miss Owens, a native of Baltimore, Md., lives in Bay Island. Formerly a promotion artist for WTAR, she has been with the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN about six months. She is a graduate of Granby High School, Martha Washington College and Richmond Professional Institute.

She is a member of the Tidewater Business and Professional Women's Club, the Citizens Committee for the Status of Women and the Norfolk Safety Council.

Two Virginia Beach girls will participate in FOCUS symposium at Randolph-Macon Women's College, March 1-3.

They are Cecelia Gerloff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar J. Gerloff, Jr., Cedar Lane, and Barbara Riley, daughter of Cmdr. and Mrs. William P. Riley, Smith Farm Road.

Miss Gerloff will be senior escort of Ronald Beckman, an urbanologist. Beckman will relate the study of the behavioral sciences to the design of the human environment. Miss Riley will be senior escort of John M. Johansen during the weekend. Johansen, an architect and author, will speak on "The Death of Architecture."

FOCUS is a biennial student-sponsored symposium which this year will consider the topic, "Assault on the Absolutes," placing the emphasis on the particular disciplines of the six guest lecturers.

Miss Sue Sellers of Virginia Beach, a senior at Randolph-Macon Women's College in Lynchburg, has been selected a Designate by the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation. Three other classmates were named Honorable Mention Winners.

Miss Sellers is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Duncan Sellers of Sandy Valley Road. A history major at Randolph-Macon, she was recommended for graduate work in Asian studies.

Jeffrey Shelton of Cavalier Drive, has been named to the Dean's List at North Carolina Wesleyan College, Rocky Mount. N. C. Shelton is a junior, majoring in psychology.

Better Buy an Easter Bonnet

Already plans are underway for the annual Boardwalk Easter Parade.

John Griffin of the Ocean Highway Association and Mrs. Barbara Leitman, promotions director of Pembroke Mall, have been named chairman and co-chairman of the event, according to Mrs. Laura Lambe, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce special events committee. Easter this year is April 14.

Traditionally prizes are awarded for well-dressed citizens in a variety of categories. Last year 43 prizes were donated by local businesses, Mrs. Lambe said. Fashions are judged by prominent citizens.

The parade area is about five blocks of the Boardwalk with the Norwegian Lady as a halfway point. According to Mrs. Lambe, "It's not the fashion plate, but usually the well-dressed persons who win."

She said the Easter Parade had its beginning in the Sunday afternoon promenade of tourists along the Boardwalk many years ago. It was revived as the Easter Parade during the Beach's Golden Jubilee when persons dug into their trunks and dressed in costumes of bygone years.

Better start planning your Easter wardrobe and hope for sunny skies.

Spring Cleanup Is Good Sense

Homeowners across the United States and Canada were urged by the American Insurance Association today to join in Spring Clean-Up activities by sprucing up their homes and throwing out trash and clutter, which may have accumulated during the winter.

Old newspapers, oily rags and other rubbish are a fire hazard and create fuel upon which fires feed, the Association cautioned.

Spring Clean-Up Week serves as an annual reminder to make homes fire-safe and protect both lives and property by disposing of such trash.

In most communities, provisions are made to put trash on the curb at designated times, to be picked up and carted away in sanitation trucks.

"Don't underestimate the importance of this annual clean-up program," urged T. Lawrence Jones, president of the Association. "In fact, let us hope it will serve the purpose for which it was designed, to remind Americans that homes should be kept clean and fire-safe every day of the year."

To underline his remarks, Jones added:

"Every 49 seconds, fire breaks out in some home. In 1967, fires in the United States took 12,200 lives and caused property losses aggregating more than $1.7 billion. With normal care, many, many fires could be avoided."

Spring Clean-Up Week is observed at different times in various parts of the nation, most often in April or May.

The American Insurance Association recommends that during the special period set aside for the campaign locally, homeowners go through their homes, room by room, and throw out any combustibles which might help feed a fire.

A check of the attic, as an example, will turn up old newspapers, discarded clothing, old radio sets, unwanted furniture, worn-out mattresses, old shoes, lamps and appliances in need of repair, old letters and magazines. One incipient spark, and the householder may have a costly fire.

Bedrooms, too, can create potential fire hazards. Old clothing stored in closets, which will never be worn, should be donated to some charitable organization or thrown away.

In the kitchen, cooking is done daily over open flames or electric stove cooking units with temperatures capable of starting fires if they come in contact with dish towels or other combustibles.

"Be vigilant, not only during Spring Clean-Up Week, but at all times," Jones stressed.

"To protect your family and your property against fire, plan ahead, practice good housekeeping, and develop safe habits. And don't forget that good housekeeping includes a periodic check for—and the elimination of—fire hazards."

Polluted Air Affects Hair

Good scalp and hair hygiene dictates that hair should be shampooed as often as needed. Although once a week is recommended, our polluted air might make more frequent shampooing necessary for hair health.

That's the good grooming advice from the A. M. A.'s "Today's Health" which points out that daily brushing supplements the shampoo. It helps to keep the hair and scalp clean by loosening and removing dust, grime, hair spray residue, and dead cells.

Classic Pie Is Good Cold Weather Recipe

Quiche Lorraine is a classic French provincial dish that's easily adapted to American menus and entertaining patterns. This version, Hearth 'N Heather Quiche, enhances traditional touches from the French province of Lorraine with rolled oats, a favorite of the Scottish countryside.

Rolling oats add a toasty, rich flavor to the crust to match the goodness of the cheese and bacon custard filling. The custard also gets extra creaminess and smoothness from convenient evaporated milk.

Hearth 'N Heather Quiche typifies the "arts"—or ples, as we call them—served by the fireside in French country kitchens. Tiny wedges may be served as delicious hot hors d'oeuvres. Or you might plan a special luncheon or supper menu around this flavorful pie. Add a continental look to a tossed green salad, with sliced fresh mushrooms, tomato wedges and oil-vinegar dressing. Complete the French atmosphere with an appropriate dinner, wine and a fruit dessert.

Daughter Born

Mr. and Mrs. William B. Simmons Jr. of Goldsboro Avenue announce the birth of their second child, a daughter, Wanda Marie, who was born Feb. 22 at the General Hospital of Virginia Beach.

Cox Has Rocking-Good Time

The occasion was the Virginia Beach Council of PTA's "This Is Your Life" Program honoring retiring school superintendent Frank W. Cox and his wife last week at Malibu Elementary School.

And one of the gifts presented was especially fitting—a rocking chair in which to rest up from a week of retirement parties given by friends of Cox. He also received engraved silver cuff links and tie bar. His wife was presented with a life membership in the National Congress of PTA's.

Mrs. James Kellam was program chairman and John Griffin, vice president of the Malibu PTA, was master of ceremonies. Griffin recalled when Cox became superintendent in 1933 and "occupied two rooms under the stairs of the court house." Telephone calls were by long distance—an improvement over his days as principal of Oceana High School which had no phones at all.

The tables were also turned on Mrs. Paul Coussens, council president, who was presented with a life membership also.

Among the many school administration and City officials present were Mrs. Belmont Williams, district PTA regent; Mrs. Frank L. Fentress, Cox's first secretary; Miss Louise Luford, now personnel director for the schools but formerly Cox's second elementary supervisor; George Ferrell, former chairman of the School Board and now a City Councilman; J.W. Buffington, School Board chairman; Edward E. Brickell, new superintendent; Joe Owens Jr., administrative assistant; Grace Harrell, elementary supervisor, and several principals.

Golden Age Clubs Meet

The Virginia Beach Recreation Department brings news from around the town, wherever there is a Golden Age Club. The Atlantic Park Club met in the home of Mrs. Annie Woodhouse on Oceana Boulevard. Plans are being laid for the dinner to be held at the Giant Open Air Market.

The members are looking forward to the City-Wide meeting to hearing H. J. Ridinger from the Social Security Bureau explain the different changes in the Medi-care and Social Security, Mrs. Utoka Hite is president.

The Lynnhaven Golden Age Club No. 1 met in the home of Mrs. Edna Sutton on Doyle Way with Mrs. Anne Cartwright serving as hostess. The sick committee reported several members out because of illness.

A trip is being planned to Philadelphia to visit historical shrines of the nation, Mrs. Edna Sutton presided in the absence of Mrs. Cherry Sawyer, also Mrs. Sadie Barnes, ass't. secretary served in the place of Anne Cartwright.

The Nino Golden Age Club met in the home of its president, Mrs. Sara P. Cason, on Princess Anne Road. Plans were laid for the second anniversary to be held at Mt. Zion A.M.E. Church the first Sunday in March.

Warm Them

Tired of eggs cracking when cooked in the shell? Try this tip—bring eggs to room temperature before being placed in hot water. To speed up the warmup, hold eggs under warm running water, or place in a pan of warm water for a few seconds.

Sooner or later, that day comes, the day when a woman feels she's changing. It's not a good feeling either. And she could use a good old-fashioned medicine then.

Could be you feel a little edgy, or maybe cross. You might even have what we call hot flashes and feel sad and slightly off-balance.

Whatever you feel, we have something for the day you need a little comforting. Lydia E. Pinkham Tablets. They're made with gentle, natural ingredients that work to give you a better sense of well-being.

With an old-fashioned problem like this, couldn't you take an old-fashioned medicine?

Green Run Approved With Restrictions

The Green Run Planned Unit Development, all 1,000 acres of it, moved a step closer to reality Monday with Council approval of the 4,000-family project, as recommended by the City Planning Commission, with restrictions.

The finished project is expected to cost an estimated $100 million and will include single family residences in several price ranges, apartments and townhouses, much open land, playgrounds, schools, commercial property and a system of canals.

The restrictions, accepted by the corporation called for approval of a master drainage plan, approval of a master lighting plan in the open green belts, dedication of rights of way for six main roads running through the property, sidewalks on all major streets, school sites to be sold to the city at raw land cost, denial of two commercial sites for rezoning, and assurances that the community will be built within given time limits according to final approved plans.

The massive PUD project lies between Holland Road and Princess Anne Road off Lynnhaven Road. After final plans are accepted construction is expected to begin immediately for the new housing concept in Virginia Beach.

More restrictions were placed on the property known as the Conrad Farm off Great Neck Road, near Great Neck Estates; in accepting a development plan there, Residents of the area objected to smaller lots than they owned and to certain other things. A compromise offered by Councilman Dewey Simmons was accepted. This called for the same size

New Zoning Opposed

Virginia Beach residents are embroiled in two zoning battles, both fights involving rezoning residential areas to multiple family.

At Tuesday's city planning commission meeting, the North Virginia Beach Improvement League, represented by attorney Grover C. Wright, Jr., presented a 300-name petition opposing rezoning for a 91-unit apartment complex at Atlantic Avenue between 56th and 57th Streets.

Thomas C. Broyles, lawyer for the NOVAB Corp., which is pressing for the rezoning at North Virginia Beach requested that his clients' application be tabled for two months, during which time they plan to revise the apartment complex plans to the satisfaction of area residents.

Wright responded that any multi-family plan was unacceptable. He pointed out that NOVAB had misrepresented the area of land to be used for recreation purposes, not even owning approximately half of the recreation land.

Introducing a letter from Dr. Madge May, public health director, Wright said that the proposed population increase would even more overburden the already insufficient septic tank serving North Virginia Beach. In Dr. May's letter, it was stated that the tank is now a health hazard.

Three times Broyles asked for the two month delay, and ended by asking to withdraw the application if tabling was not granted.

Tax Increase Expected

Under provisions of the Virginia Beach City Charter the budget for the forthcoming fiscal year must be in the hands of City Council by April 1. That deadline now faces squarely City Manager W. Russell Hatchett, Finance Director Giles Dodd and the printer.

A spokesman for the City Manager said the finishing touches were being put on the budget Monday but that it has not been fully added up yet, and that no copy is available so far.

Dodd said that portions of the documents were being delivered to the printer this week, and that hopefully all of it will be to the printer by the end of the week.

of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board profit-splitting formula is unfair to Virginia Beach. The formula distributes state money based on the 1960 census. Hatchett said he thought basing it on school-age population would be fairer. He added that

Variety of Business Requires 2 Meetings

City Council met twice this week, once on Monday and again on Tuesday, and the two sessions combined were not as long as the one that lasted more than three hours a month ago.

Monday's session, although primarily occupied with zoning matters, also adopted a new building code, called on the Planning Commission to set a public hearing on rezoning of two major streets, appointed members of the building committee and invited the King of Norway to visit here next month.

The Tuesday session was held at the School Administration office to open bids of the sale of city revenue bonds. Four bids were received for the $7,750, 000 in bonds. The spread was not too large, ranging from a low of 4.4195 per cent to a high of 4.5231. Council accepted the low bid of Northern Trust and Southern Planters.

Sold were $3 million in bonds left from a 1966 referendum for municipal construction; $2 million for water and sewer work; $1.17 for new municipal buildings; $80,000 for the new Kempsville library; and $1.5 million for streets and highways.

Assistant City Manager Roger Scott said, "We are very pleased with the interest rate on the bonds."

The new building code adopted

Development Council To Report on Center

The Virginia Beach Development Council will meet next Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 at the Vepco Building on First Colonial Road and will unveil its finished copy of a report concerning a convention-cultural center.

At the last meeting a month ago a special committee of the VBDC reported a need for a facility in Virginia now, and recommended a center similar to the $6 million Monroe, La., center, visited recently by the Mayor's special committee headed by Lawrence Marshall.

The center, as recommended would have a 3,000 seat auditorium, a small theatre for about 400 and a large 7,000 seat arena area for conventions. The finished report of the study of VBDC, which will be presented to City Council at its next meeting, deals only in the need for a center and what should be included in it. It does not get into the probable controversy of where to build it.

The VBDC study has been completed following several months of investigation according to the president of the council, E.R. Cockrell, Jr. The council is an organization of civic-minded businessmen and other citizens interested in the problems of the city and which offers its services to find solutions.

After the council turns its center study over to Council, its members are finished unless asked to do more, according to Cockrell. They will then turn to such studies as the tax structure of the city, among others.

Cockrell says he can see that there is bound to be a certain amount of duplication of effort by his committee and others working toward the same end, but he thinks this is good for the best convention-cultural center possible.

"It offers a good check and balance system that way," said Cockrell.

Councilman Marshall's committee has set up since returning from his trip last month to see several facilities and then filing a report. That report also noted the Monroe facility appeared to be nearest to the needs of Virginia Beach.

Marshall said, "One of our members is away now, and we'll be meeting as soon as he gets back. We hope to have something more definite soon."

Location of the facility either on the oceanfront or in the more central part of the city still would appear to be a coming controversy, according to Marshall and others. Meanwhile the other part of the controversy is the stadium, where it will be, who will participate in its construction and how it will be financed.

A group of citizens from four cities is already working toward studying the needs of the area, as is Marshall's committee. The committee has recommended a one-stop, multi-city stadium, centrally located. The citizens' group feels it should be multi-stop.

To add to all this a new authority has set up by the Virginia General Assembly, to be known as the Tidewater Recreational and Stadium Authority. Representatives from the cities of Norfolk, Portsmouth, Chesapeake and Virginia Beach will be selected by respective city councils to serve the Authority. Although the Authority will have the power to sell revenue bonds to finance the facility, there is question by officials in all the cities about being able to sell bonds for a project that will probably never make any money.

Canal Delayed Again

The completion of Rudee Inlet to North Bay Canal is once again mired in the mud of controversy. This time a suggested change of location of part of the route has caused City Council to ask the Department of Public Works to look into it.

A request reportedly came from Col. Aubrey Holmes, Soil Conservationist, to alter the accepted route in a more easterly direction to save about $30,000. Holmes was formerly in charge of the City dredge in the early days of the digging of the canal before the project was transferred to the DPW.

Council has already approved the three-phase project through an area designated as alternate "A," as recommended by a consulting firm last year. At that time work had been stopped for some time because of the Navy's objections of the proximity of the canal to its facility at Dam Neck and to a lake in which the facility poured sewage.

Phase one of the project brings the canal from North Bay to Old Dam Neck Road, and it is estimated the necessary work will cost about $33,500 over a period of about 145 working days. Some city officials say they do not see how Holmes' suggestion can reduce the cost so greatly.

DPW director Charles Kiley said there must be valid reasons for changing the route or for even waiting to.

"I'm not trying to resist anyone," said Kiley. "But Council has already agreed to put could there after a long and complicated study."

Holmes has said in the past that the canal, besides its recreational purposes, has added greatly the drainage in the area. The same canal will also provide drainage for a Planned Unit Development housing development nearing construction.

Building Permits Rise Again

The value of building permits in Virginia Beach continued to climb during February, although five less permits were issued than in January 1968.

The total value of the 231 permits issued by the inspections division of the city during February 1968 was $4,646,135--$462,631 more than the previous month.

So far in 1968, 487 permits have been issued for a total value of $8,649,639, an increase of $3,238,788 over the same period in 1967, when only 364 permits had been issued.

Building permits have shown a steady rise in recent months in Virginia Beach following the "slight money" slump that virtually stopped most building in the city.

Permits for 101 single-family residences were issued in February, valued at $2,112, 515. Apartment units totalling 200 in 31 permits accounted for $2,074,300.

Search Continues For City Manager

The City Manager sweepstakes in Virginia Beach is off and running. As of the beginning of this week, Councilman John McCombs, confirmed reports that he already had applications from three people who would like to replace W. Russell Hatchett, when he retires on July 1.

McCombs, chairman of a special City Council committee to screen and interview applicants, declined to name the applicants, but said that Council as a whole would interview all qualified candidates a few at a time on selected dates.

Assistant City Manager Roger Scott, considered by many to be a frontrunner for the job, was not one of the three applicants received by Monday. McCombs noted that none of the three were at present connected with city government in Virginia Beach.

Scott said, "My application is about ready and will be in by the end of the week. I just have to put the finishing touches on it."

Richard Webbon, the city's coordinator of federal projects, also has noted his intention to submit an application shortly. A reliable source told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN that one of the applications already received came from a city official in Chesapeake.

Meanwhile the search goes on through advertising also. An ad in the International City Managers' association newsletter will seek qualified men for the job. The City is offering, in the ad, a salary ranging from $18,000 to $23,000 a year. The ad also requires the applicants to have a degree in a related field and some experience in city management.

McCombs denied reports of members of Council being seriously split on the choice of a successor to Hatchett. Councilmen Lawrence Marshall, Dewey Simmons, George Ferrell and Curtis Payne serve with McCombs on the screening committee.

"There is just nothing to report right now," said McCombs. "I hope we'll have a new man by June 1. We are looking. That's all I can say."

Legislators Report on 1968 General Assembly

Virginia Beach's three-man Virginia General Assembly delegation is home from the 60-day session in Richmond, which ended last Saturday, called the session "An exciting one."

Delegate Kenneth Whitehurst Jr. said it is almost unbelievable to see how much "law" comes out of one session.

Delegate B.R. Middleton said he was greatly impressed with the way the younger legislators grasped the reins in such a capable manner.

Whitehurst said the session called for "total involvement for 60 days. He said, "With about 1,800 bills introduced you have to do a lot of reading."

He admitted that no one could read them all, but that he tried to learn about each bill as it came out of committee. Whitehurst added that he was pleased with the final budget form and that he hopes the $81 million bond issue will pass. He said he thought Virginia Beach was treated fairly in the distribution of educational and mental health funds.

He also called it a "good session" for Virginia Beach because of the passage of local option liquor-by-the-drink legislation, approval of the golf course and erosion area decreed to Virginia Beach by the state, and approval of charter changes for the city.

He said he was disappointed that bills to kill tuition grants in Virginia on which he and Middleton were patrons failed.

"I think Bev Middleton and I worked closely together," said Whitehurst. "He was a co-patron on all my bills and I was a co-patron on all of his."

Whitehurst said he also handled some of Caton's bills in the House, and that cooperation between Caton, William Hodges and Willard Moody and himself could not have been any better.

Whitehurst said he was particularly pleased that the gluc-sniffing law which he handled in the House after introduction by Caton in the Senate, passed.

Middleton said he thought the budget turned out just about the way most people wanted it, but that none of the larger programs, such as education or mental health, received as much as was needed.

He too noted that the bond issue will take much work and organization if it is to pass in the November election. He said he was not particularly pleased with the issue since there were no provisions to pay the money back.

"Undoubtedly taxes will have to be raised in the future," he said. "I think some provisions for paying the money back should have been put in the law now."

Middleton added that he was quite glad Virginia Beach got more in the way of education funds, but said that was only because of the increase in impact funds. He also said he was glad to see the Virginia Beach

Hatchett

"The printer will have to finish it quickly," said Dodd, "so that we can check it over and get it ready for Council before the deadline."

Hatchett, who still will not reveal the contents of the new budget until it is in the hands of members of City Council, says he may call a special meeting for that purpose or he may wait until the next regular Council meeting on March 25. He added it would depend on how soon he received a completed copy.

Hatchett has indicated that the real estate tax for the city will have to be raised in this budget, but has not said how much.

He pointed out, in an interview Monday with the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, that the Virginia General Assembly still failed to pass any legislation to relieve the major problems of "fast-growing" areas like Virginia Beach.

"Many cities are being forced to broaden their tax base," said Hatchett. "We don't want to put the whole burden on the real estate tax."

Hatchett said he did not think

RADGES & BANTER

By Les Lehigh

"Uncle Sam" has called Keith White to service from the ranks of the Kempsville Volunteer Fire Department. Unit Chief Swartzentruber says White has been with the unit for three years, but will soon be entering the Army. Indications are White hopes to further his studies of engineering, which he was pursuing in college.

The Windsor Woods fire station, home of the Princess Anne Plaza Volunteer Fire Department, is taking on a new look. Men of the unit are gathering furniture and other items for the stations' recreation room for the comfort of men who draw the "night watch" at the station house.

A new voice is being heard over the air ways of the Virginia Beach police division radio system. Officer Ralph E. Taylor has just joined the staff of the communications room in police headquarters at Princess Anne Courthouse.

Plaza Rescue Squad, Capt. B.B. Whitman also says the squad is looking forward to the arrival of a recently ordered new ambulance, which in White's words, "is to replace our old Cadillac ambulance which saw it's better days a long time ago".

Virginia Beach Rescue Squad Capt. Jerry Carpenter says a rescue squad school will be held in the squad's headquarters, for members of the Second District Virginia Association of Rescue Squads. John Dickens, who in addition to serving with the Beach Borough Squad is district training officer, will have charge of organizing the school.

A.L. (Sally) Rogers, Virginia Beach Chief Justice of the Peace, feels daylight savings time may be the reason for tardiness of J.P. H. Bates in attending weekly J.P. training sessions. Rogers says Bates consistently arrives one hour late for each session, and he is convinced that while the classes are set up on eastern standard time, Bates is of the impression they are scheduled according to daylight savings time (or is it the other way around?).

Library Contract Signed

A construction contract for $1,602,789 for a new library was signed on Monday by Virginia Wesleyan College and W. H. Belanga and Associates of Norfolk.

Construction on the new facility is scheduled to begin by the end of this week. Completion is expected for September 1969. The library, 50,000 square feet in size, will have a capacity for 20,000 volumes. The library design won an "Award of Merit" last year from the American Institute of Architects and the U.S. Office of Education.

The library is the priority project in Phase II of Wesleyan's long-range development program. Other projects in Phase II are a science center, a service building, and completion of payment on the 300 acres of land. The total Phase II project will cost approximately $3,000,000.

Virginia Wesleyan has a grant and loan under the Higher Education Facilities program on both the library and the science center totaling $2,000,000. The college has raised in cash and pledges $500,000 toward the remaining $1,500,000 goal. Plans are now under way to complete this financial effort. (See Editorial page.)

Foreign Cars To Be Shown

Foreign automobiles, including all of the imported cars shown in this area will be on display at Pembroke Mall, March 17-23 during the Imported Car Show.

The show will open at 12 noon on March 17, and will continue during the following week from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., daily.

Scouts Investigate Government

Mayor Frank Dusch and Councilman Dewey Simmons, Lynnhaven, chat with Girl Scouts who visited the Mayor's offices Tuesday.

A group of much-traveled Girl Scouts visited the offices of Mayor Frank A. Dusch Tuesday for an explanation of the city government and a dosage of Dr. Wacky's Political Pill for Ending Political Bologna.

The 16 Girl Scouts, all from Lynnhaven, Borough, only recently returned from a trip to Washington where they toured the Capitol and visited the offices of Congressional Rep. Thomas Downing. Their interest in politics has been stimulated by work toward the "My Government" merit badge, which has been awarded to all the girls who made the tour.

Mayor Dusch began his explanation of Virginia Beach's city-manager form of government by defining the mayor's relationship to the city manager. He went on to answer questions from the girls about the new Norfolk-Virginia Beach Expressway, explaining that it came under the jurisdiction of the state highway department, rather than the city.

Dinner Topic Is Basketball

Maury clobbered Princess Anne High School in basketball a couple of times this season, and PA gave Maury a real scare once, even though the Commodores went on to win. But that's all right with Gus Rignano, owner of Freddy's Restaurant at Princess Anne Plaza, even if he is a Cavalier supporter.

Rignano invited the entire Maury team, its coach, school officials from Virginia Beach and even a few from Princess Anne to dinner last night at the restaurant. They came. They talked basketball. They told how Maury almost won the State crown. And PA said, "Wait until next year." So did Maury.

Anyway a good time was had by all, especially Rignano.

In the Pre Teen League, G. White, with the high scoring of 12 points, led Seatack to a win of 17 to 8 over B. Williams.

But it was a rough and tight game for Seatack in the Teen League, in which they defeated Seaboard with a score of 15 to 13. S. Humes was high-point scorer for Seatack and D. Turner for Seaboard.

Evans Appoints Assistant

Virginia Beach Commonwealth's Attorney Andre Evans has announced the appointment of David Dickerson as an assistant in his office. Dickerson, a 28-year-old Norfolk native, formerly served as a legal officer at the Dam Neck naval installation. Evans' staff of assistants, in addition to Dickerson, also includes Alfred Ege, Jr. and Joseph Lyle, Jr. Former Police Division Juvenile Bureau Detective Louis Taylor is also working with Evans as a special investigator.

Court to Decide

Two more juveniles have been found within the purview of the Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court, after being charged with being incorrigible in the investigation of the illegal movement of marijuana, and / or other drugs, through the city of Virginia Beach. Final disposition of the cases is pending outcome of an investigation into their backgrounds.

Another juvenile, also charged with being incorrigible in the same investigation, has been committed to the Bon Air juvenile detention center, where during the next six weeks she will undergo screening to determine whether she should remain in a juvenile detention center, be placed in a foster home, or undergo any remedial training.

Suit Filed Against Torok

The former operator of a teenage night club, The Sand Box which operated last summer at 21st Street and Atlantic Avenue, has had judgment entered against him for $3,661.11.

Circuit Court Judge ruled Ted D. Torok owed the money to owners of the building, Sherwood Hotel Corp., as payment for back rent and utilities. Permits to continue operation of the club were denied following legal action on the part of the innkeepers of Virginia.

lots as others nearby on property adjoining Eastwood Park, demolition of buildings on property to be donated to the city for a park, construction of a new earthen dam to guarantee continued good drainage in the area, and that no house could be built in the area of less than 1,700 square feet, exclusive of garage.

Council moved quickly through several other zoning matters with no opposition. They included new townhouse for Princess Anne Plaza, approval of the Shakey's Pizza Parlor on Virginia Beach Boulevard, 26 new motel units, the first billboard to get through Council this year, approval of a new 600-seat theatre in a shopping center at Providence Road and Indian River Road and even a new gas station.

P.A. Class Decal Question Unsettled Schedules Reunion

The 1958 graduating class of Princess Anne High School will hold its tenth class reunion June 29, at 7 p.m., at the Ft. Story Officers' Club. Reservations for the party are now being taken.

Class members are holding regular planning meetings each Wednesday night at Princess Anne High School in the old dramatics room at 7:30 p.m., and any 1958 graduates in the area are asked to attend.

Mrs. Diane Wyles of Richland Drive, is taking reservations for the June reunion. She is also trying to collect as many graduates' names and addresses as possible in order to mail out brochures concerning the reunion. Anyone with the names and addresses of members of the 1958 class are requested to mail the information to Mrs. Wyles.

City Attorney Harry Marshall is trying to settle the matter of city license decals for automobiles of non-resident military personnel. The problem came to light again in recent days as Virginia Beach police began a crackdown of automobiles not displaying the 1968 decal.

According to law all residents of the city, military or otherwise, are required to purchase and display in the proper manner the $10 tag. To complicate matters even more, if a serviceman from outside the state of Virginia is registered to vote here, if he has a part-time job and pays state income tax, or if a second car used by his wife is registered here, then he must also purchase the $10 tag. If none of the above hold true, then he does not have to do so.

This, however, does not preclude his being stopped often by policemen for not having the decal. Some have been taken to court and found guilty until one judge deferred all action until there is definite ruling and settlement.

Marshall said, "I am still working with the military in hopes of working something out soon. I hope we'll have it settled in a few days."

City Treasurer V.A. (Jack) Etheridge last year began the optional sale of $1 tags to non-resident military personnel to hold down any suggestion of harassment, but the motorist was not required to purchase the special tag. Most did not.

Etheridge said, "I would like to see some sort of decal issued by the military for this type of case. They know more about the men than we do."

Marshall confirmed that this is one of the methods of settlement under consideration. Both Etheridge and Marshall indicated they would like to see the matter settled once and for all for the best interests of the city and of all the servicemen in the area.

200,000 Receive Credit Cards

The nation's largest all-purpose bank credit card—good for buying almost anything from merchandise to a trip around the world—is now being received by some 200,000 persons in Virginia.

Robert L. Gordon, Jr., president of First & Merchants National Bank, has announced that initial distribution of its BankAmericard is being completed. "Over 2,000 Virginia businesses are ready to accept the card," he said.

In addition to the initial distribution to persons of good credit standing, Gordon reported that a flood of applications are being received by the bank's BankAmericard Center.

The course will be taught at the University of Virginia extension center at First Colonial High School and is concerned with the philosophy, organization, activities and techniques used in the kindergarten level.

Free Class

All of Virginia Beach's primary school teachers are eligible for a course preparing them for kindergarten certificates being offered by the Virginia Beach School Board.

The class, required for kindergarten teachers, will begin March 20 at 7 p.m. and will end June 11. It is free to teachers and carries three college credit hours.

The course will be taught at the University of Virginia extension center at First Colonial High School and is concerned with the philosophy, organization, activities and techniques used in the kindergarten level.

Social Agencies Council to Meet

The Virginia Beach Council of Social Agencies will meet on Friday, March 22 at 3 p.m. at the VEPCO Building, 525 First Colonial Road.

Our speaker will be Richard Cockrell, president of the Virginia Beach Development Council.

At the February meeting Stanley Phillips, assistant City Attorney, spoke about Legal Aid for indigent clients, who would most likely be screened by the Department of Public Welfare. He stated a committee has been appointed to study the situation.

Chief Moore Disappointed

Virginia Beach Chief of Police James E. Moore noted that he is "disappointed" a bill he had supported in the Virginia General Assembly failed to pass in the final hours before adjournment Saturday.

The bill, introduced by Norfolk Del. Thomas McNamara, would have provided $10,000 in death benefits for the families of policemen and firemen killed in the line of duty.

Chief Moore wrote all three of Virginia Beach legislators noting his support.

"I feel it's something we've needed for a long time," said Chief Moore. "It would be an incentive for people to give consideration to entering these lines of work."

In committee hearings it was pointed out that in the past very few men in either job have been killed in the line of duty, but that proponents felt such a law would serve to entice needed personnel.

The city's personnel director, E.A. Culverhouse, a strong police supporter, said, "It would be a wonderful thing to have. I feel we need to take a hard look at benefits for policemen and firemen, and to find ways public safety careers can be made more attractive for young men."

Zoning

In an almost simultaneous and very similar battle, residents of Lake View Park and Lake Shores were fighting a proposed town-house and restaurant-motel project on land south of Shell Road off Northampton Boulevard.

Dr. M. Bagley Walker is making application to have the area rezoned from rural residential to multiple family, with a permit for a motel and restaurant.

Walker's attorney, Richard Guy, said that the proposed 80 town-house/apartments would include two bedrooms and would rent for a minimum $200 a month.

A 114-name petition opposing the action was presented by the Lake View Park Civic League, who are basing their opposition on the lack of recreation area to be included in the project, the density of population and the commercial operation of a motel in close proximity to the residential subdivisions.

The planning commission will make recommendations on the two rezoning applications April 8 to the City Council.

Last Link of Shore Dr. Set for Widening in Fall

The last three-mile stretch of Shore Drive from the gates of Fort Story to Atlantic Avenue will be four-lane by the end of this year, according to Virginia Beach's director of the Department of Public Works, Charles Kiley.

"The work will be started in the fall, after the tourist season," said Kiley. "We wouldn't want to tie up that road during the summer with all that traffic."

The project was held up for some time until the funneling of traffic into Atlantic Avenue at 49th Street could be worked out. With that completed, the last major snag was removed.

Most of the land has been acquired, much from the state, since it was part of Seashore State Park. The City of Virginia Beach will pay 15 per cent of the cost of the new road and the state pays the rest.

The completion of the road will mark the end of four-lane of Shore Drive in several projects that began as much as a decade ago.

Kiley also said bids will be advertised on schedule on March 20 for the completion of Independence Boulevard from Baywood Road to Shore Drive, including high level bridges over Northampton Boulevard. When that road is finished it will be the city's only north-south artery between oceanfront Norfolk that is four-lane.

Jaycees Present Pacemaker

As one of their last official actions, the Princess Anne-Bayside Junior Chamber of Commerce (scheduled to merge with the Virginia Beach Jaycees June 1) donated a "demand pacemaker" to the General Hospital of Virginia Beach Monday morning.

Chris B. Sanidas, Jaycees president, and Linwood Benton, vice president, presented Earl Willis, hospital administrator, with a check covering the cost of the pacemaker.

Doctors R.J. Robertson and W.A. Dickinson, of the hospital's cardiology staff, explained that the new heart pacemaker is a small battery-powered instrument worn externally and operating on the principle of "demand" or "standby."

Cardiac patients at the hospital have had a more primitive pacemaker available to them for the past two years. The older equipment did not operate on demand, but continued to function regardless of the presence of normal cardiac activity in the patient.

The new demand pacemaker will be used to temporarily "ride-over" a heart patient, generating pacing pulses only when the patient's intrinsic heart rate falls below an adjustable, pre-set rate.

According to the doctors, the new pacer will go into operation after a one-second lapse in the patient's pulse rate. It is ideal for cardiac patients whose hearts will eventually function normally of their own accord and do not need a permanent pacer.

Permanent heart pacemakers, they continued, are worn internally with a small battery placed beneath the skin, through surgery, usually in the breast area. The permanent pacer is self-sustaining, and the battery needs replacing every three years.

Residents Complain Of Movers

At Tuesday's continuing City Council meeting, carried over from Monday's meeting, Virginia Beach House moving operations came under fire from Councilman George R. Ferrell, who moved to accept seven applications for house-moving that had been presented to the council Monday.

According to Ferrell, he has received numerous complaints from Beach residents concerning damage to property by illegible house-movers.

City manager Russell Hatcher pointed out that house-movers "have caused bad public relations for the city," knocking down mailboxes and damaging trees in their path. Norfolk lawyer Stanley Hodgins, a stockholder in the house-moving concern Gabor, Inc., defended the house-movers, saying that they enabled the Highway Department to recoup some of its losses in acquiring land with houses on it.

Councilman John McCombs made a motion—which was approved—that Director of Public Safety Reeves Johnson and Supt. of Inspections John E. Gibbs confer with the moving companies and report their findings to the Council.

The Council then joined Ferrell in approving seven moving applications which had been carried over from Monday.

Mrs. Hardy Will Speak

Kellam Honor Society Taps New Members

By Ronnie Keel

Twenty-eight new members were welcomed into the Kellam chapter of the National Honor Society, in the annual "tapping" ceremonies held March 6.

There altogether were ten seniors meeting the requirements. A 6.0 average must be maintained over the high school career, as well as good leadership, character, and service. The ten seniors were: Emily Cason, Olive Cason, Norma Colton, Sharon Giambrone, Ronald Ginn, Marvin Leonhardt, Alan Jay Minsterman, Virginia Nordline, Laura Sonderson and Patricia Wolf.

In order for a junior to be tapped he must have maintained a 6.2 average. Eighteen juniors were invited into the organization. They are: Michael Campbell, Gale Cary, Terry Charleston, Lucy Dudley, George Everling, Lucien Normand, Jill Riley, Joyce Saunders, Valerie Stuts, Donna Spruit, Thomas Ferrier IV, Russell Galip, Sharon Grimstead, Linda Jethro, Robert Kennedy, Gary Kilgore, William Tillman and Gail Whitehurst.

Eight provisional members were tapped into the society. These members are sophomores who currently have a 7.0 average with all A's and B's in high school. David Campbell, Grace Sawyer, Jane Taylor, Steve Thompson, Dorothy Benio, Randolph Garver, Nancy Wilkin and Michael Ives were the provisional members chosen.

President Toni Baum presided over the ceremonies. Margaret Wilkin, Cathy Jones, David Pace and Donna Frost, all seniors presented speeches elaborating on each of the requirements, character, scholarship, leadership, and service.

Monday, March 18, a senior breakfast will be held from 9 a.m. to 10:15 a.m. At the breakfast seniors will be presented with tickets to sell for the senior adaptation of "The House That Rodeo Built." A 25-cent fee is required. The tickets sell for $1.00 a piece for the two presentations March 22 and 23.

Dinosaurs and giant cross-sections of eyes, among other things, are on display at Thalia Elementary School this week for the school's sixth grade science fair.

Four classes, taught by Miss Hazel Southall, Mrs. Paul Freeman, Miss Rose Beth and Mrs. Shirley McEvoy, are participating in the fair.

Judging took place yesterday afternoon, with Bruce McGuire, supervisor of elementary education for Virginia Beach; Mrs. Reva Kelberg, a member of the city School Board and J.A. Lynn, a past president of the Virginia Beach Education Association and teacher at Princess Anne High School, rating the projects they thought best.

Each student turned in one project, and according to Robert H. Pearsall, principal at Thalia, some of the results were pretty remarkable.

The '68 Session Is Over

Memories of the 1968 session of the Virginia General Assembly will linger on for years to come. It will long be remembered as the legislature that departed from tradition...that took a couple of giant steps into the 20th century...and that dealt fatal blows to a few sacred cows.

Passage of the local option liquor-by-the-drink bill must be looked up on as a departure. The urban-oriented legislators, faced with massive revenue problems at home, finally dealt the death blow to the Biblebelt, the bootleggers and the hypocrites. The sale of across the bar liquor should prove to be a boon to the economy of those areas which finally approve it. We certainly hope Virginia Beach is one of those places.

The increase in our tourist business alone should prove to be fantastic, to say nothing of the new hotels and motels that should spring up and the large conventions that should come here.

We agree that the $81 million bond issue for education and mental health funds is a must, and we realize that deficit spending is an accepted practice but we worry about being that much in the red now and wonder what the future holds to get out of the credit hole.

This session has to be marked as "progressive" and "busy", and even "exciting" if for no other reason than the massive amount of work accomplished and for the prospect of events to come. Now we must wait until next year to find out just how far the state is willing to move forward with an overhaul of the Constitution. We hope move sacred cows meet their doom then.

Virginia Beach gained little from this session of the legislature, except a slight increase in education funds. We agree with Mr. Russell Hatchett. More should be done in the future to relieve the problems of fast-growing areas like ours. Maybe next time, but meanwhile, the 1968 session of the Virginia General Assembly must at least be commended for taking a few steps in the right direction and none backward.

It's Tag Time

Every year about this time the same old problems arise. Non-resident military personnel are stopped by police for not having a Virginia Beach license decal. Finally by virtually ignoring the problem or by trying appeasement, it goes away until the next year.

Some system must be arrived at by cooperation of city officials and the military to keep

Va. Wesleyan-Phase II

Virginia Wesleyan College, less than three years ago was no more than the dream of a lot of people. It had been a dream for a long time. Now the young college, already highly respected as an academic institution, is completing its second school year.

Phase II is underway, the construction of the backbone of any good college, a new library. Also included is a science center, completion of payment on the land and a service building. The library will be a major one, built to house 210,000 volumes. The science center will have the latest in laboratory equipment.

All this costs money. The powers-that-be at Wesleyan have been highly successful in raising money through grants, loans and contributions. This is a difficult task for any private college. Now another half million is needed. Distinguished Virginia Beach citizens are taking part in a 14-man area development committee, helping to raise that money. The committee is headed by Harold Keilam and William B. Vaughan.

They are not canvassing the area for money. But they do need help from those interested this from cropping up again next year.

We feel that Virginia Beach officials and private citizens bend over backwards to help the military, and we have always been satisfied with the fine cooperation of the military officials.

This is a minor problem we are facing. Please, gentlemen, settle it through the usual cooperation...now.

enough in the education of our children to give a little for this "second step forward" of Virginia Wesleyan.

We feel that we are quite fortunate to have such a fine institution partly in the city of Virginia Beach. We feel we owe it our full support for the bright future it is sure to have.

And for those who haven't really had a good look at this magnificent school. Plan to include Virginia Wesleyan on your next family drive. It is aproud, if fledgling institution that will succeed with our help

Girl Scout Week

This is Girl Scout week and troops all over Virginia Beach are celebrating the occasion with numerous programs and displays.

For more than a half century Girl Scouts has been an organization dedicated to the young lady from 7 to 17. Today more than ever before, this organization is needed in a fast-moving world.

We salute the work of not only the girls, but also the many parents who have given of their time for their daughters.

Native Doves

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

Please permit me to return to our beautiful State of Virginia to plead in defense of our native doves. Each year over 70 percent of all doves in North America are eliminated. A few by the forces of nature, but by far, the large majority are massacred by bird hunters here in the United States.

According to information from the United States Department of the Interior the annual legal kill far exceeds 35,000,000 doves. The crippling losses exceeds 25 percent of the bag. This leaves between eight and ten million broken and wounded birds to linger days, even for weeks before death sets them free.

As dormant targets, millions more are killed from wires with slings, arrows, BB guns, and small rifles, but never picked up. The pleasures are in seeing them fall.

As friends of the farmers a dove eats up to 10,000 noxious weed and grass seed each day of its life. As for food there are about 2 1/2 ounces of meat to each dove, and they are the only birds hunted while brooding their young in the nest.

The dove has long been the emblem of purity, peace, love and of life after death. Since the baptism of Jesus the dove has been one of the four beloved symbols of the Holy Christian Church.

To each admirer of animated art doves are birds of living beauty, and their voice brings the sweetest notes this side of Heaven. The doves' domestic desires are to be man's garden companions, and the guardians of his fields and vineyards.

There ought to be laws, state and federal, giving the mourning doves back to the friends of nature for the songbirds they are,

Law Enforcement

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

In all phases of human activity there are predictive signs that help us measure the character and training of the human family. As we read the predictive signs, "Courtesy" stands out as a beacon light of intelligence. The lack of courtesy merely signifies the base and uncultured.

There is much ado about the law enforcement agencies, these days. There's an age old adage that goes like this,

"Where there is smoke, there must be fire."

Most of us have met up with the law-enforcement agencies one way or another. We have met the courteous-type officer and accepted his directives pleasantly, and used our intelligence to adjust our own behavior pattern.

Occasionally, however, we've had the misfortune of being "combed down" abruptly and rudely by an officer who has missed out on one of life's most helpful lessons. This particular lesson finds explanation in another age old adage, "One can catch more flies with molasses than with vinegar."

A good law-enforcement training should be a must in every community in our land.

On Closing the Gap

The following editorial is reprinted from the Virginia School Boards Association Newsletter, published at the University of Virginia in Charlottesville, W.H. Seawell is the editor.

Quite a bit has been heard in the Commonwealth since the Governor's Conference on Education which was held in October, 1966, about, "closing the gap" in the extremely varying quality of public education offered the children and youth in the local school divisions in Virginia. Admittedly, tremendous progress has been made State wide during the past two years to improve the total quality of public education. Unfortunately, little has been done to "close the gap" between those school divisions at the low end of the scale and those at the high end. It is predicted, further, that this "gap" will become more pronounced before the end of the current biennium and will widen even more during the subsequent biennium.

The reason for this is quite obvious. Virginia and Virginians are not committed to "closing the gap". The rationale for "closing the gap" is really quite simple and it includes three steps: (1) determine the dollar need for establishing a minimally acceptable quality of educational program in each locality, (2) determine the amount of local money that would be raised in each locality by requiring a reasonable uniform minimum tax levy on an equalized tax base, and (3) subtract (2) from (1) and let the State provide the difference, if any. This may appear to be oversimplified; however, no attempt at obfuscation can alter the basic facts.

During the first year of the current biennium, 1966-67, an amount of $41,768,363 was appropriated to be returned to the localities on an equalization basis (the principle used for "closing the gap"). For that year, a total amount for operating expenses of the public schools of $260,297,840 was appropriated at the State level. The amount returned to the localities on the basis of need, effort, and ability represented approximately 16% of the total appropriation.

Under the Governor's proposal for the first year of the next biennium, 1968-69, an amount of $44,204,183 of a total of $360,781,320 will be returned to the localities on the basis of need, effort, and ability. This represents approximately 12% of the total proposed appropriation. In other words, the only State money that would help "close the gap" when considered percentage wise, has been reduced by one-fourth!

Admittedly, not much now can be done about the current situation. It could have been done when the tax base was expanded two years ago; thus, "what might have been" remains "the saddest word of tongue or pen."

It is recommended, however, that something be done. Many seem to think that the $20,000,000 proposed for establishing kindergartens will not be spent during the subsequent biennium. It is not proposed that any money be taken from the kindergarten program; however, if it is found by a careful analysis that the entire amount will not be spent for kindergartens during the subsequent biennium, the excess should be used to increase the $110 per pupil A.D.A. allowance in the formula for distributing the Basic School Aid Fund to $115 for the first year of the biennium, and then, if possible increase the $115 allowance per pupil in A.D.A. to $120 for the second year of the biennium. This procedure would be of some help in "closing the gap".

SPOTS

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

His face was covered with shaving cream, but his frustration still showed through by the redness of his neck. "When we built this house, I purposely designed this dressing room, basin and mirror just outside our bathroom to make it more convenient for us," he tried to explain calmly. "And very good planning it was," she said, chucking him under the unshaven chin. "But I have to brush my teeth, not take a shower."

"Just outside that door and to the right is a large bathroom with two basins in it," he stated, still with much composure.

Maybe He'll Grow a Beard

"To brush their teeth, of course," she smiled an ultra-bright smile that did not impress him. "Very funny," he muttered. "Look, the shaving cream is drying out from having to wait so long. Will you all please hurry up with your oral hygiene?" "Why don't you go out that door, to the right and into the large bathroom with two basins. You can shave in one and if you sit just right, you can wash your feet in the other."

"You know, you are really quite funny...funny-peculiar, that is," he said a little too loudly. "And besides I was here first, and this is the basin that belongs to the master suite."

"Yes, master," she said, as she helped the children brush their teeth.

"Ok, I give up," he finally yelled. "I'll shave later. I'll take a shower now."

"Good thinking," she said, as he wiped the last vestiges of shaving cream off his face. "But we're finished now. You needn't have bothered."

"Thanks," he said wryly. "Say, what would you like me to do with all these stockings, at cetera, draped over the shower door?"

"Oh, for heaven's sake," she said, "How can I ever get anything done in the morning with you always bothering me? Hand them to me."

The hot shower helped. When he came out he lathered up again. It was quiet. Too quiet. He started to shave. A small four-year old voice from behind him said, "Daddy, I have to wash my hands."

"Where did you come from?" he asked her. "From downstairs. My hands are sticky from the jelly."

"Did you know we have a bathroom downstairs too. You could have washed your hands there."

"I forgot, so I came up here."

"What about your big bathroom with the two basins for you and your sister?"

"There's no soap in there," she said. She washed her hands for a long time.

Then she turned to him and said seriously, "Daddy, don't you know it's getting late? Why haven't you shaved yet?"

He heard an adult female laugh coming from downstairs. Did she send the young'un up to ask that question? He never knew for sure.

Kiddies, Librarian Enjoy Story Hour

And then there was the half-pint Virginia Beacher, maybe five years old, who came into the Windsor Woods library to renew his library card because his old one, as he told Mrs. Doris Finnigan, had "perspired."

Mrs. Finnigan, children's librarian for the City of Virginia Beach, has a collection of stories about her small charges that would do Art Linkletter proud. Aside from holding a story hour for three to five year olds once a week at Windsor Woods, she is also available as tour guide for nursery, kindergarten and elementary school class tours of the library.

"We always take a look at the reference room," said Mrs. Finnigan, "and I tell the children they will use the room when they are older. I ask them what that is," she went on, pointing to a bulk Webster's Third International Dictionary standing on a lectern-type stand by itself. "Most of them say it's the Bible...and one little girl said 'Oh, that's the Preacher Book.'"

Another point of interest on Mrs. Finnigan's tour is the library's bookmobile, which is usually parked in view of the reference room windows. "I tell them what it is, and I ask them if they know who drives it. A little boy once told me 'Sure, the bookworm drives it.'"

The Windsor Woods story hour is held at 10:30 a.m. on varying days, to fit Mrs. Finnigan's schedule. The dates for the hour are posted at the main desk two-months in advance. March Story hours will be held today, the 22 and 28. The dates for next month are April 5, 11, 19 and 25.

Winky Bear was the topic of discussion at One of Mrs. Finnigan's Story Hours at Windsor Woods Library, held weekly.

Mrs. Finnigan, who took her Masters Degree in library science from the University of Denver in 1947, is the wife of Dr. Frederick J. Finnigan, of the Navy's medical corps. He is stationed aboard the repair ship USS Vulcan.

The Finnigans have lived in Tidewater for three and one-half years, and plan to continue living in their King's Grant home after Dr. Finnigan leaves the Navy.

As a Navy wife, Mrs. Finnigan has taught at school libraries all over the country and during her husband's three-year tour of duty in England she began studies toward her Ph. D. at Cambridge and the University of London. Her studies abroad included library science and child guidance.

As Virginia Beach's children's librarian, under Mrs. Stephen W. Bada, the city's librarian, she is in charge of ordering and classifying children's books for the three libraries in the city, as well as arranging displays of the books.

During the Windsor Woods story hour, which has been in operation since October, Mrs.

Finnigan tells the children stories using a flannel board for illustrations to accompany her tales of Winky the Bear and The Curious Monkey, among others. At the end of the story, she said, the children play counting games, or let's pretend games, trying to imagine themselves the characters in the story they've just heard.

Mrs. Finnigan, whose son is a freshman at William and Mary, calls her job a "fun job." And it was obvious, watching her tell stories to her pint-sized listeners, that she is succeeding in making the library a "fun" place for them.

Irish Have Their Day

Mulligan's the name. And the cheers? One, for hearty man-pleasing flavor. Two, it's a dinner in a dish. Three, sure and it's a grand excuse for celebrating at shamrock time. So Irish or not, shine up the kettle and prepare for Mulligan Stew—simply abundant in meat, potatoes and vegetables. Nine in all! Perfect with the stew, and also in honor of the occasion, serve generous portions of Irish Soda Bread. Hot, fresh, with lots of butter. Then to do things up green, scatter shamrocks on a white tablecloth. Bore holes in large well-scrubbed potatoes to hold green candies. And what do you know, you've got a St. Pat's party going!

MULLIGAN STEW
Beef soup bone with at least 2 lbs. of meat on it
2 c. diced carrots and finely chopped onion, combined
1 c. diced turnips
2 c. diced potatoes
1 c. diced carrots
1 c. cooked green beans
1 c. cooked peas

Cut meat off bone. Place bone in kettle and cover with cold water. Add salt and pepper to taste, celery, combined carrots and onion. Bring slowly to a boil. Cut meat into 1-inch pieces. Drain in a little hot fat. Season with salt and pepper. Add browned meat to hot broth in kettle. Simmer 2 hours. Remove bone. Add turnips, potatoes, carrots.

Cook 30 minutes longer. A few minutes before serving add green beans and peas; heat through. 6 servings.

One more rousing cheer. This time for homey Soda Bread, borrowed from the Irish—but faster this way.

IRISH SODA BREAD
1 cup Bisquick
1/4 cup raisins
1 teaspoon caraway seed
1/4 cup plus 2 tablespoons milk

Heat oven to 450 deg. Grease a 4-inch skillet or deep baking

Pravda Turns Down Canyon

By Carolyn Owens

Milton Caniff, cartoonist, creator of "Steve Canyon," President of the Penitentiary of children of all ages, held still another audience spellbound as he told secrets of the industry known as "how to sell newspapers."

The Cavalier Hotel was the scene of the Annual Advertising Silver Medal Award dinner by the Advertising Club of Tidewater Virginia honoring Maurice E. Bennett, Advertising Man of the Year, last Thursday, March 7, 1968.

Dailey and Sunday cartoon strips induce the average reader to buy a newspaper... a little cheerful entertainment to balance the bad news in the headlines.

Caniff, guest speaker for the event, presented Bennett with "the only gift a cartoonist can give," the original drawing for the strip appearing in the paper that evening, March 7.

The cartoon, Caniff continued, is an American phenomenon. Due to the type of story line "Steve Canyon" follows, the strip has never appeared in any Russian newspapers... although some of the Walt Disney creations are printed in Pravda.

"Steve Canyon" is printed in 14 countries, and translated into eight languages. The Latin American countries prefer "Blondie" and "Maggie and Jiggs" to Steve for a different reason... they find it amusing to see a wife-dominate her husband.

French Salon Meets Sunday

The French Salon of the Woman's Club will hold its March meeting on Sunday, March 17, at 3 p.m., at the Club House at 524 Fairfax Ave. in Norfolk.

J. Luke Martel, professor at the College of William and Mary at Williamsburg, and President of the Penitentiary Chapter of the Alliance Francaise, will give a talk in French (and English, if desired) on "The Work and Importance of the Alliance Francaise in America." Monsieur Martel is very well known in Williamsburg for his devoted interest in this long known of organization which has aided for many years the knowledge of the French language and French culture.

The French Salon is open to all interested in the conversa-

Rose Group Is Meeting

The Tidewater Rose Society will meet at 3 p.m. Sunday, March 17 in the Norfolk Botanical Gardens Administration Building.

Two men from Smith-Douglass in Norfolk will speak on "Fertilizers, Use of Systemics and Spraying and Dusting of Roses."

Woman's Club Honors Two Members

Dr. Corpening with Mrs. M. B. Zoll, club president, and Mrs. Clark.

Mrs. Wallace T. Clark and Dr. Cora Corpening were guests of honor at Tuesday's luncheon meeting of the Princess Anne Woman's Club of Virginia Beach at the Pine Tree Inn. Both are members of the club who have been in the news recently.

Mrs. Clark was named Virginia Beach's First Citizen recently by the Jaycees. She was president of the club in 1942-46. Dr. Corpening recently retired after a long career in medicine. She was the first woman to graduate from the Duke University School of Medicine and has been a member of the club since 1925.

The guest speaker, introduced by Mrs. J. deCreny, was Mrs. Margaret Florence, R.N., recruitment nurse for Norfolk General Hospital. The club has provided an $800 scholarship for a male nursing student at the hospital.

"I sell nursing," said Mrs. Florence. "Informed parents are one of the greatest sources of encouraging nursing careers." She said there is a great shortage of nurses, and that 125 beds at Norfolk General had to be closed down last year because of the lack of nurses.

She said that hospitals are among the largest industries in the nation. She pointed out that nurses are needed in schools, industry, public health and military as well as in hospitals.

"Patients are better informed now and they demand better and more care," Mrs. Florence said.

She concluded with a line from a poem which she says is her mainstay, "He walks with God who is a nurse." This is my manstay in times of crisis. It's always a great help to know I'm in such good company."

Musical selections were sung by Mrs. Charles McCall, choir director of Knox Presbyterian Church, who was accompanied by Mrs. John E. Wunnerberg Jr.

Even Irishmen Can't Agree on Shamrocks

Shades of shamrocks and shillelaghs!

Did you know that St. Patrick's Day does not commemorate his birth or a momentous occasion, but is actually the date of his death? It seems a shame for Irishmen to be so happy about the day of their hero's death.

In Ireland March 17 is a national holiday. Green signified the undying gratitude to his memory, and the shamrock is worn to commemorate its use by St. Patrick as a symbol of the Holy Trinity.

According to tradition, he used the shamrock to explain the Trinity; three leaves were the three parts of the Trinity, and the stem was the godhead—thus the three in one.

One legend credits him with banishing all snakes from Eire except one old serpent who refused to leave—even for St. Patrick. Supposedly he made a box and asked the snake to enter it. The snake did to prove it was too small for comfort. St. Patrick quickly shut the lid and threw the last snake into the sea.

According to Roman Catholic authorities, Patrick was born at Kilpatrick, Scotland. But according to the book you read, the date was either in 387 or 389. They can't agree on his death either. It was March 17, alright, but it was in 461 or 493 (which would have made him more than 100 years old).

At 16 Patrick was captured by Irish marauders, and sold as a slave to a chieftain of what is the present County Antrim. During his six years in servitude he learned the Celtic language. He escaped, then fled to Britain.

From there he went to the monastery of St. Martin at Tours where he became a monk and remained until he was commissioned by Pope Celestine to work in Ireland.

The Druids were afraid of him and tried to capture him, but he escaped and made his way to his old master to whom he paid the price of his freedom. Patrick preached, taught and organized parishes in Ireland (12 times captured by Druids) until his death.

Celebration of St. Patrick's Day began in this country in Boston with the Charitable Irish Society founded in 1737. The Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, founded in Philadelphia in 1780, and in New York in 1784 took up the celebration.

Incidentally, in different seasons and in different regions at least three cultivated plants pass as shamrocks. The most common and perhaps the true shamrock, if there is one, is the common white clover.

Another plant sold as shamrock is the hop clover. The third is wood sorrel. Which is the true shamrock might be left to the Irish, if they agreed, but they do not. In the United States the shamrocks sold on the streets are seedling plants of the white clover.

Sounds like a lot of blarney—which in case you didn't know it is a village near Cork where Blarney Castle, containing the Blarney Stone, stands.

DAR Presents 'Good Citizens' Awards

Three young women, nominated by their fellow students, were presented with DAR Good Citizens pins and certificates by the Princess Anne County Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution at a luncheon Saturday at the Ft. Story Officers Club.

Mrs. George H. Ross, of Richmond, state chairman of DAR Good Citizens made the presentation to the girls, all high school seniors. They are Jacqueline Gail Sivertsen, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Warren S. Sivertsen of 87th Street, First Colonial; Jo Ann Watkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bernard Watkins of Victoria Drive, Kellam and Lorraine Maria Caruana of Wolfensnare Crescent, Cox.

Three girls were picked by the students of each school. Then the faculty made the final choice from the three. Students were selected for dependability, truthfulness, loyalty, punctuality and leadership ability. They are eligible for the state contest which gives a $100 scholarship to the winner.

State winners compete in the national contest for a $1000 scholarship. Mrs. Clarence J. Smith is chapter Good Citizens Chairman.

Mrs. Ross, who is also national vice chairman of genealogy, spoke briefly on the number and types of genealogical records submitted to her.

Hostesses for the meeting were Mrs. J.H. Burrell and Mrs. James A. Carr.

Mrs. Ross shows the certificate to the winners, Miss Watkins, Miss Sivertsen and Miss Caruana, as Mrs. Smith watches.

Mrs. John E. Wunnerberg Jr. of Norfolk really jumped the gun at the meeting of the Princess Anne Woman's Club of Virginia Beach when she asked for—and got—the first two tickets for the 10th Annual Antique Show sponsored by the club.

Although the show is not until October (24-27), Mrs. Wunnerberg said she wanted to buy them for a Father's Day present for her husband. "He comes every day of the show every year," she said. "I think he's been to every one. He collects beer steins."

Mrs. R. E. Davenport, had come prepared and provided her with two tickets.

Beautification Commission Meets Today

The Beautification Commission will meet at 3:30 p.m. Thursday, March 14 at the 2nd Police Precinct.

Reports from last year's chairmen will be heard as well as plans for this year and plans for the annual dinner meeting in May.

This building, situated on Morris Neck Road, near Princess Anne Road in the Pungo Borough serves as headquarters of the Creeds Volunteer Fire Dept.

Biggest Problem Is Water

Imagine, if you can, a fireman who continues to take pride in his outfit and goes about his job with enthusiasm, even though he is faced with what may appear to be insurmountable odds. Such is the lot of members of the Creeds Volunteer Fire Department.

Floyd Waterfield, Jr., chief of the Creeds Volunteers, told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN the lack of fire hydrants in their district is perhaps the biggest problem in fighting fires. Waterfield said the men have to rely on "drawing water from Back Bay, creeks running off Back Bay, and the North Landing River in fighting fires".

Another problem facing the men, according to Waterfield, is the great distance involved in moving fire fighting equipment to the scene of a fire. Waterfield said, "Many times the fire gets a good start on us before we can arrive".

Most of the district served by Creeds Volunteers is served by a "party line" telephone system. Waterfield said this presents a problem, at times, in obtaining an open line to notify fire fighters on the location of a fire, or delays residents in reaching the fire dispatcher to alert the men of the department. Waterfield said the communication problem is gradually being overcome through usage of radio monitors by men of the department.

Waterfield, who is in his second year as chief of the Creeds Volunteers, speaks with pride of the men of the dept. He told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, "I am impressed with the enthusiasm shown by the men, not only in their responding to fire calls, but also for their desire to take part in training sessions to increase their knowledge of improved fire fighting equipment and techniques". Presently men of the unit are holding at least two training sessions each month.

The residents of the district served by Creeds Volunteers also drew praise from Waterfield for the manner in which they strive to prevent any region from developing into a potential fire hazard. This is accomplished by requesting the men to "back fire" a potentially dangerous wooded, or marsh area which could accidentally be set afire and endanger property, and by requesting the "burning down" of old abandoned buildings thus not only removing another potential fire hazard but offering the men practice in fighting fires.

As with all other volunteer fire departments of the city, the Creeds unit is operated by public funds support. These donations, Waterfield said, have been generous and are on the increase, however the unit could still use some financial backing.

The Creeds Volunteers were organized in 1948 by the Creeds Ruritan Club as a community project with Leroy Dixon named as the first "chief". The unit's first fire truck was housed for some time in Dixon's garage at his home. In 1953 the unit purchased their first ambulance, and have operated a rescue squad since that time.

The present station house on Morris Neck Road has served as the headquarters building for the past 15 years. The building also serves as a tribute to men of the unit for their "civic pride" in their community. The building is offered as a meeting place for various civic groups, 4-H clubs, Boy Scouts, and a Cub Scout Troop sponsored by the Department.

The departments constitutional officers consist of Marvin D. Whitehurst, Jr., pres.; Oscar Dozier, vice pres.; Floyd Taylor, sec.; and James Tye, treas. Waterfield is assisted by Marvin Etheridge, asst. chief; Elwood Styron, capt.; and Gerald Freeman, capt.

Waterfield speaks very highly also of the women of the unit's Ladies Auxiliary who lend support in many projects. The Auxiliary officers are composed of Ruth Anne Tye, pres.; Edna Carroll, vice pres.; Margaret Hayes, sec.; and Margaret Hood, treas.

The present strength of the department includes 28 regular members, and five who are still undergoing probational training. Waterfield said that all but three of the men have already received credit in advanced first aid training. When a man joins the unit he serves a "one year probation period" in order to allow ample training and familiarization with the equipment.

The men of the department represent a cross section of backgrounds, occupations and interests, as well as covering a wide age range. Waterfield told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN he feels this is one of the departments biggest assets, for this provides a variety of interests and the men benefit from each others experience and ideas which mean a continued improvement in the department.

Local Children Win In Poster Contest

Several Virginia Beach children have won prizes in the recently concluded 16th Annual Keep Virginia Green poster contest, sponsored by Virginia Forests, Inc., in cooperation with the Virginia Division of Forestry.

The purpose of the contest is to create a better understanding of the importance of the forest and related sources. The theme for the 1968 contest was "Wood is Useful." Nearly 7,600 posters were entered in competition for the $2,500 in prize money.

A Special Mention Award went to Virginia Tully, 13, a seventh grader at Thalia Elementary. Eleven year old Larry Moy of W.T. Cooke Elementary won third prize in the sixth grade division. Special mention for that division went to David Focher, 12, of Hermitage Elementary.

Kelly Hurley, 11, of John B. Dey School, received Mention for his poster.

Walter Brown and Debbie Curran, both 11 and both of Bayside Elementary, received Special Mention for their posters, entered in the fifth grade division.

Nancy Eastland, 10, of Plaza Elementary, received Mention for her work in the contest, as did Gail Lynn Temple, 10, of Bayside Elementary.

Cancer Films Scheduled At Schools

The Virginia Beach Unit of the American Cancer Society is sponsoring a Mother-Daughter program this month in conjunction with the Virginia Beach school system. The unit's education committee, headed by Rev. Clayton B. Grigger, has arranged for several evening programs at various city high schools during March.

Two films will be shown to junior and senior high school girls and their mothers, entitled "Breast Self-Examination" and "Time and Two Women". A doctor will also be on hand to conduct a question and answer period after the films, as well as the high school's nurse, according to Mrs. Paul H. Coussens, coordinator of the project.

Mrs. Coussens says the films contain vital information for both mothers and daughters. Students must have signed permission of a parent or guardian to attend.

Information regarding breast and uterine cancer will also be distributed at each of the meetings by members of the school's PTA.

The first program was held at Bayside High School on Tuesday. The next is scheduled at First Colonial March 18. The program will then be presented on the 19th at Princess Anne High School, at Kempsville on the 20th, Union Kempsville on the 21st and at Cox on the 25th. All programs begin at 7:30 p.m.

Dr. Alvin Q. Jarrett, president of the Virginia Beach Unit of the American Cancer Society said, "With these films reaching the young people and their mothers I feel we have made a tremendous step forward in our public education program."

Frank J. Brizzi, assistant to the regional director of the Post Office Department, Washington, D.C., presented the recognition plaque to Mrs. William H. Military Wives Club Notes

By Mary Wright

Dam Neck FFAWTC commanding Officer Capt. W.N. Homer and Mrs. Homer were the guests of honor at a luncheon Tuesday, hosted by the Navy Wives Club of America, chapter #207, at the club's meeting room in the Center's special services building.

Capt. Homer has been re-assigned to duty in the far east, and will be relieved by Capt. Stuart Sadler on March 29. The Homers plan to remain in Tidewater until their first grandchild is born, to their daughter, and then they will leave for Yokosuka, Japan where they will make their new home.

president of the group, presented the Homers with a farewell gift of linens on behalf of the club.

At the chapter's March 21 meeting, scheduled for 10 a.m., Mrs. Florence Kroyzin from the Navy Relief Society, will discuss with the wives how Navy Relief extends help to families. She will display a complete layette, which is given to eligible expecting parents. Hostess for the social is Mrs. Lee Dickey.

Little Creek The Amphibious Force Officers' wives club will commune on April 10, when Mrs. Jackson Shattuck of the Virginia Beach Association for Research and Enlightenment will address the wives on "The Physic Nature of Man."

Mrs. Shelly will be the guest speaker at the club's monthly luncheon, at the base Officer's Club. The social hour will begin at 11 a.m., with the luncheon at noon.

The Association for Research and Enlightenment delves into extra-sensory perception and other psychic phenomena.

On Wednesday, March 27, Marine Lt. Col. O. Ogden Parades will speak to the Amphibious Force Officers Wives Lecture series on "The Other War." Col. Parades, who has recently returned from Vietnam, will present his impressions of the natives of Vietnam's small villages, illustrating his lecture with slides.

Coffee will be served at 10 a.m. in the Lynhaven Room of the Little Creek Officers' Club, preceding the lecture at 10:30.

Fashions for NWCA The Tidewater area Navy Wives Clubs of America are backing a membership drive this spring, in keeping with the national watchword for the clubs in 1968: "Unity."

As a part of the drive, the clubs will host a Sew-Show at Pembroke Mall's Sears and Roebuck store, April 1, when a New York consultant from McCalls Patterns presents a showing of new fashions made from McCalls patterns, as well as discussing important colors and fabrics for the spring-into-summer season.

There will be no admission charge, and free baby-sitting facilities will be provided. A door prize is being offered by McCalls.

Thalia Completes Project

Thanks to a group of hard-working garden club members in Thalia, the entrance to the neighborhood has been beautified for all the residents to enjoy.

The entrance, now marked by wrought iron rails and cast aluminum lights, was the "Hands Project" of Thalia Garden Club. Hands is the community improvement project sponsored by Sears, Chairmen were Mr. and Mrs. John Smith.

Paul D. Woodard, architect, drew up the plans. Humble Oil Company donated the land on one side as did B.J. Willis Jr. on the other side. Then the Garden Club members canvassed more than 800 homes for contributions as well as local businesses.

Lights are to go on at the entrance for the first time tonight.

HOW MUCH IS TOO MUCH

...to pay for health? Perhaps you believe that today's medicines are too high in price. Some capsules your doctor prescribes may cost 50 cents each, a dollar each... or even more. This sounds expensive.

But is it?

Divide the price of the medicine into four parts, so that you can see what you are getting for your money:

1. A smaller hospital bill because an effective medication put an end to the ailment in a few days or a few hours.
2. Fewer visits from your doctor because some new discovery stopped an infection quickly.
3. Wages earned because a complete recovery was possible sooner than would have been the case a few years ago.
4. A life because "expensive" drugs helped resist possible serious after-effects (a danger in prolonged illness).

We believe you will agree that today's medicines aren't so expensive after all, because they bring you real value for your money. They represent one of your best investments.

Governor Launches Seal Drive

The 1968 Easter Seal campaign was officially launched in Virginia on March 9 by Governor Mills E. Godwin, Jr., when he received the first shipment of seals from Margaret Louella Moyer of Ivy, this year's Easter Seal Child.

Margaret presented the Governor a plaque as a token of gratitude for his interest in the rehabilitation of the handicapped. Virginia's Junior Miss, Rebecca Kanak, Virginia's Junior Miss, and George R. Prens, the Easter Seal State Campaign Chairman, participated in the events which marked the opening of the appeal for funds to sustain the work of the Society during the coming year.

Following the presentation ceremony, Del. Willis M. Anderson, of Roanoke, escorted Margaret into the General Assembly where she was introduced to the members of the House of Delegates.

Others helping Margaret carry the Easter Seal message to the Capitol included twenty persons who are dedicated to the purpose of eliminating crippling conditions. Special guests at the afternoon kick-off luncheon was T.A. Mangelsdorf, of New Kent, Virginia, immediate Past-President of the National Easter Seal Society and a member of the Virginia Easter Seal Board.

Fliers Answer 'Whys' of War

Seventeen combat fliers with attack squadron 35, who were nominated for a total of ten Silver Star Medals and 68 Distinguished Flying Crosses while flying over North Vietnam, are returning to the Gulf of Tonkin with two questions burning in their memory: "Why Vietnam?" and "Why you again?"

Sometimes the perplexity becomes even more personal to others who ask them, "Why me?"

However, a Navy flier, at his request, will be relieved of flying duties. And, depending upon the circumstances, the decision will not endanger his career or promotional opportunity.

This freedom of choice to remove himself from the dangers of combat makes every Navy flier a volunteer. So the questions, "Why Vietnam?" and "Why you?" take on a different significance to those in the Navy.

The attitude of Cmdr. Glenn E. Kollmann of Virginia Beach is typical of that of many fliers. The commander of the Black Panther squadron has been shocked by the "why you?" question asked by friends upon learning he was returning to combat. "The first few times I was asked that question," he said, "I was rather shocked because I considered the friends to be well-informed with an appreciation of world affairs and national commitments. I also thought them to be individuals of normal moral development."

"My reasons are simple, continued Kollmann, who describes himself as a pacifist by nature. "They are my moral obligation and commitment to our nation. I identify myself with the obligations of the United States to honor its commitments with foreign nations all over the world."

The other second tour fliers in CDR Kollmann's squadron placed more emphasis on the personal aspects of their presence in the combat zone. "National commitments," "Communist aggression" and "political considerations" are phrases that have been mostly lost in the routine of daily combat missions. Missile sightings and flak concentrations now have become common in the flier vocabulary.

To these men, most of whom have flown over 100 missions, the war is the immediate consideration. Bombs are dropped, missiles are fired, some aircraft are hit and others are lost.

Each day and each flight is a complete event within itself. Few of the men make detailed plans for the distant future.

Cdr. Glenn E. Kollmann, USN, commanding officer of attack Squadron 35, aboard the USS Enterprise: "To me, my duty here is as natural and normal as accepting the responsibility of caring for my wife and children."

At least one of these men says that he does not expect to return from the war. There probably are more, but they do not admit it.

A study of combat statistics indicates that three crews will be lost-six of the 40 fliers in the squadron will be captured or killed. They know that the sex will not always be "the other fellows", but that is something that is not talked about.

To the 17 second tour men in this squadron, the end of this combat period will be a personal milestone. These Navy fliers, unless official policy is changed, will become exempt

1st Colonial Seniors Visit State Capitol

By Erik Klingenberg

The state capitol seems to figure heavily in this week's news-between the closing of the General Assembly, Frederick College students meeting with the governor and First Colonial's class of '68 journeying to Richmond to view the legislative body at work.

The entire senior class made the trip March 7, one day before it was announced that Frederick College is to be given to the State and two days before the General Assembly closed for the year.

The trip, master-minded by Mrs. Thelma Houck, departmental chairman and one of the three Senior Government teachers at First Colonial, was highlighted by the appearance of Gov. Mills Godwin. The governor addressed the group of students and presented Mrs. Houck with a special map of Virginia.

Besides receiving a guided tour of the capitol building, the seniors sat in on a session of the House of Delegates and a senate session. The group was introduced in the House by Rep. Kenneth Whitehurst Jr., Virginia Beach, and by Sen. Edward Caton, in the Senate.

Because of its size, the class was divided into two groups. While one was in the capitol, the other was touring the Federal Reserve Bank, where they were shown a film on the facility's operation.

Tomorrow night, Friday, March 15, the Junior Ring Dance will be held in First Colonial's gymnasium. The dance is held to celebrate the Juniors having received their class rings this week.

Former Navy Chief Aviation Machinist Mate Ernest H. Knox of Virginia Beach was sworn in recently as a warrant officer during ceremonies at the Naval Air Reserve Training Unit in Norfolk. He was sworn in by the unit's commanding officer Capt. R. G. Altmann.

City Needs Space

City Council Monday heard a report from the city's building consultant, Cheving, Goodwin & Hoggard, which stated that the City of Virginia Beach will need lots more land in the future for its own offices.

A. J. Cheving III wrote Council that a study of requirements in the years ahead for parking, future buildings and consolidation of offices called for obtaining a great deal more land in and around the municipal center area at Princess Anne.

The report called for acquiring land on both sides of Court House Drive.

"We feel there is a definite need for this land within the foreseeable future and we recommend that the City take such steps as may be necessary to preserve this land for future City use or to acquire it," said Cheving in his letter to Council.

Council accepted the report but took no action.

According to Zeke Landres, of Norfolk, president of Certified Television and Appliances, the firm will provide both sales and service.

The store will carry complete lines of Frigidaire, RCA Victor, Whirlpool, Zenith and Sylvania appliances and will be staffed by 32 employees.

Principal Is a 'Regular Guy'

By Linda Green

J. Warren Littleton, principal of Princess Anne High School, is a "regular guy," who enjoys a good round of golf, salt water fishing and pool. In fact, Littleton, the proud owner of a new pool table, has matched wits with world champ Luther "Wimpy" Lassiter.

After practice-teaching as part of his undergraduate studies at William and Mary College (where he was a member of the tennis team and Sigma Phi Epsilon, and from which he was graduated in 1939) Littleton chose education as his profession. In 1949, he took his master's degree in school administration at the University of Virginia.

While coaching basketball and baseball at his Eastern Shore Alma Mater, Bloxom High School in Accomack County, Littleton also taught math and government.

After two years as assistant principal at Norfolk County's Broadcreek Village High School, Littleton moved to what was then Princess Anne County, to teach at Kempville. And in 1954, he left Kempville for the newly-completed Princess Anne High, where he has been since.

During the years that Littleton has been working with high school students, he has observed little overall change in their behavior. However, he does feel that today's students are scholastically superior to students when he began teaching. "The average high school senior today has the equivalent education of a college sophomore in the 1940's," said Littleton.

Littleton is especially proud of "the sense of pride here at Princess Anne," and of the caliber of students elected as class and student body officers.

Littleton does not believe that college is for everyone. But he does believe that "it is important to do whatever one sets out to do well." There is a place in the world for people who work with their minds, and for people who work with their hands, he went on. "No matter what a man does, he must take pride in his work," said P.A.'s chief administrator.

Littleton and his wife and two sons live on North Alantone Drive, at Broad Bay. Jim, Jr., is a senior at Cox High School, while Richard Kent is an eighth grader at First Colonial High School.

According to Littleton, being the father of two teenage sons makes it easier for him to relate to students. But he does try to leave school problems at school, he said.

A past president of the Virginia Secondary School Principals' Association, and chairman of the Eastern District Group 1-A schools, Littleton is a member of Phi Delta Kappa honorary education fraternity and has been listed in "Who's Who in the South and Southeast."

Cooperation Brought Legislative Progress

"I think this session of the Virginia General Assembly more clearly evidenced the desire of the people for change," said Edward T. Caton III, State senator from Virginia Beach. "In fact, the governor mentioned this in his opening address, when he said, 'The people are restless for a change.'"

These were the words of Caton, intended as an overall observation of the recently concluded legislative session. Caton was part of the three-man team of Caton, William Rodgers and Willard Moody, who represented the Third Senatorial District.

"The session was personally pleasing to me also," said Caton, "since many changes we campaigned on were in the governor's program."

Caton said he had advocated modernization of the State Constitution. A study commission is now working on this to report back to the governor in January. A special session will be called in February to update the constitution.

Another campaign plank employed by Caton was use of the state's existing credit. He said it was little known fact that while "pay-as-you-go" had been an accepted practice for many years, the state had for 40 years the right to borrow money for bonds up to one per cent of assessed real estate in Virginia for use of special capital needs. In this instance the State is using the measure to borrow the limit, $81 million, for education and mental health, if approved by the voters in a referendum in November.

Caton served in the House of Delegates in the 1966 session of the legislature. On his change

Because taxes were not raised to meet the bonding, Caton said that he believes the burden is now on future administrations to find other sources of revenue. A study commission was also set up to analyze other sources of financing.

Caton also talked about a bill he had introduced that would use unrefunded gasoline tax collected on gasoline for boats for marinas and boating needs. The bill died in committee on a tie vote of 7-7, but Caton said he felt that he had spotlighted the problem and need so that the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries came to him and asked for acreage in Virginia Beach to build a small boat launching ramp. Such land was subsequently given by the City on land deeded from Camp Pendleton at Rudee Inlet, and will soon be built. He added that he hopes to do more with the bill at the next session, and that prospects are good.

Caton said he was pleased that local option had passed, but that he had been worried originally by the conservatism of the Senate. He also noted his pleasure at the impact fund decision to return all of the money to the localities and said he was glad a one-time windfall could be found to put in the budget to cover the loss to other areas without having to pass higher taxes.

On the matter of the budget, Caton said he felt there had been "great improvements, with education getting the largest part of the budget, as it should be," but he added that he didn't think the cities had yet gotten the support they needed.

On the matter of the budget, Caton said he felt there had been "great improvements, with education getting the largest part of the budget, as it should be," but he added that he didn't think the cities had yet gotten the support they needed.

Councilmen Schedule Preview Of New City Budget Tonight

City Councilmen get their first unofficial look at the city's new budget tonight at a closed, informal meeting to be held at the 3rd Police Precinct on Independence Boulevard in Bayside.

A spokesman for the city said this meeting is a special one where officials and the Councilmen can "hash it over" with no action to be taken. The discussion meeting is being held a few days prior to formal presentation of the document to City Council at its regular meeting Monday. At that time there will be no discussion or action, but a date for a public hearing on the budget will be set.

Final action will be taken after that hearing and upon passage in one form or another.

The new budget goes into effect on July 1. Shortly after the first of the year City Manager W. Russell Hatchett began meeting with various City department heads as he began preparing the budget. The present document, its contents still secret, went to the printer last week, after completion by the Finance Department.

Hatchett has been extremely close-mouthed about the contents, pointing out that he did not want to release any of it until Councilmen had a chance to see the document. Meanwhile speculation has run high, and reports in a Norfolk newspaper have appeared several times, often contradicting the previous report.

A spokesman for the City said the latest report in the same paper had quite a bit of incorrect material in it, although he refused to say what information

It is generally accepted that the new budget is another record-breaker for the city, as has been each succeeding one since consolidation in 1963. The 1968-69 budget is expected to be about $35 million, an increase of some $6 million. The school budget is expected to be nearly $4 million larger than last year, while much of the remainder of the increase is attributed to debt service on bonds totalling $26 million voted in 1967 and in January 1968.

Teacher salaries will account for the major part of the school board increase, with a starting salary jump of $600 to $6,000. The top salary is expected to be about $10,000, short of the amount sought by the Virginia Beach Education Association. The association had also sought a number of costly fringe benefits.

E.F. Brickell, school superintendent said, "There is no doubt that salary is important to us in recruiting new teachers."

The cities of Portsmouth, Chesapeake and Hampton have already approved starting teacher salaries of $6,000, while Norfolk appears to be on the way to approving a starting salary of $5,800. Norfolk is also currently under the Virginia Beach starting salary.

Brickell added that recruiting for next year, however, is already going well because "Virginia Beach is an attractive place to work." He said there are always needs for certain

Chamber To Name Four-Lane Farmer Will Link Main Roads

Bids are in the process of being advertised by city department of highways for the construction of the second phase of Independence Boulevard from its present four-lane terminus near Haygood Road to Shore Drive.

The scheduled date of advertising bids has for some months been March 20. Construction work will begin sometime later this year, after acceptance of one of the bids.

Besides acquisition of land and the moving of certain utility lines, the work includes two high-rise overpasses crossing Northampton Boulevard.

The present Independence Boulevard brings the morrist into Robbins Corner after a series of turns then across Northampton Boulevard to Shore Drive. The new road will provide a relatively straight four-lane connection from Virginia Beach Boulevard to Shore Drive.

The agriculture committee of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce will present its second annual Virginia Beach Man of the Year in Agriculture award on Tuesday, March 26, at a banquet beginning at 7 p.m. at the Holiday Inn on South Military Highway in Virginia Beach.

The winner of the award will be made known until the actual time of presentation, according to Frank Kellam, president of the Chamber.

The 1967 winner will be honored for his outstanding contributions to the industry of agriculture in Virginia Beach. Agriculture is still the leading industry in the city.

The first winner of the award last year was W. Clark Fleming, general manager of Bayview Farms in Virginia Beach.

The principal speaker of the evening will be the dean of the School of Agriculture at Virginia Polytechnic Institute at Blacksburg, Dr. William Bell.

City officials, including the mayor and city manager, will also be guests for the presentation of the plaque.

School Bids Are Below Estimates

Bids were opened, schools were named and personnel changes were approved at the School Board meeting Tuesday afternoon.

"We're still battling 1000," commented Ernest Stone, construction supervisor for the school system, after the low bids on two schools proved to be below estimates. Earlier bids on other schools, all to be constructed from funds from the recent bond issue, were also below estimates.

Low bids, tentatively accepted by the School Board, were for the Plaza Junior High (one of the schools which received a name at the meeting) and for a four-classroom, two-seminar-room additions to Pembroke Elementary.

The low bid for the Plaza school was W.M. Jordan Construction Co. at $2,489,000. The estimate had been $2,500,000.

Low bid for the Pembroke addition was W.B. Meredith II at $76,829. The company originally submitted the high bid, then sent a telegram in time for the bid opening lowering the original bid. The School Board had allocated $80,000 for the project.

Bids were also opened for 15 school bus chassis and bodies. The Board agreed to study the bids to determine the overall low price including freight.

Only two bids were submitted for chassis, the lower of which was R. K. Chevrolet at $3,194.24. There was only $9 difference in four of the five bids submitted for bus bodies which is why the board called for further study of the details.

Conrad Bros. Inc. was formally awarded the contract for Point of View Elementary School to be built on Yoder Lane. The bid of $758,857 was the low one of five opened recently.

James C. Mounie, principal of First Colonial High School, was approved to become director of secondary education, the position held by E.E. Brickell before he became superintendent. Carlton Bowyer, assistant

New P.O. Announced

First District Congressman Thomas N. Downing announced Tuesday through his Virginia Beach office at Princess Anne Courthouse, selection by the Post Office Department of a site for construction of a new Wiltchuck station for Virginia Beach.

Downing said the new post office will be located on the west side of Wiltchuck Road at Cleveland Street, on land owned by Selma Owner Properties, Inc., with offices in the Law Building in Norfolk.

The announcement did not contain any details as to cost of the facility, the number of persons who may be employed at the station, nor any indication as to when construction may begin on the facility.

In low-lying areas along Princess Anne Road, the high water had not subsided by Monday afternoon.

And the Rains Came... Blub

St. Patrick's Day 1968 wasn't as bad, by any means, as Ash Wednesday 1962 in Virginia Beach, but it, no doubt, will be remembered as the St. Patrick's Day storm that dropped more than three inches of rain on the city in less than 24 hours.

The rains on Sunday caused some flooding, but only in the usual low-lying areas. The Ash Wednesday storm in March 1962 caused general flooding almost citywide, especially in Virginia Beach Borough, and did thousands of dollars of property damage.

Sunday's storm caused some property damage, mostly minor. The majority of damage was to roads. The exact extent of that damage will not be known for several days until the roadways completely dry out. Then some will begin to buckle, according to Art Christian, Superintendent of highways, streets and bridges for the Department of Public Works.

"We expect to have considerable damage to the roads from the flooding," he said. "There wasn't much we could do about it except put up a few signs to warn people of high water."

Christian said his crews were out all night Sunday night checking known trouble spots, and that all pumping systems and drainage systems were working well up to capacity. In the canals the banks were full, he said.

"Everything worked fine just as it is supposed to do," he added. "But when you get three inches of hard rain in that short a time, you're in for trouble. That's all there is to it."

A Windsor Woods resident called the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN to complain of flooding near his home. He said this same area also had flooded last year in a bad storm, but that the City had denied poor drainage there. He also blamed drainage from the newly constructed Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway.

Christian, himself a Windsor Woods resident, agreed that it was bad there Sunday, but said the expressway and inadequate drainage were not the cause. "I know all about it," he said. "I stood right there and watched the water pick up a little foreign car and float it away. But all systems in the area, including the dredged 80-foot canals were open and functioning well. It was just too much rain for anything we can do."

He added that after the rain stopped or slowed substantially the water subsided quickly, proving that the systems were working well.

In North Virginia Beach, Atlantic Avenue was under varying amounts of water and in some places was impassable for a short time. Christian said that there has always been trouble there.

"Those homes are built in a hole," he said. "All their pumping systems were working perfectly too."

Christian said the last time this has happened to any great extent was in 1964 when rain continued for nearly two weeks.

Other low-lying areas of Princess Anne Plaza, Thalia, Birdneck Point and Aragona Village also noted some flooding.

By Monday morning most of the water had gone back into the creeks and drainage systems, although some parts of Princess Anne Road and Holland Road were still partly under water.

A school bus slipped into a ditch on Holland Road when the driver could not see the roadway near the intersection of Landstown Road. No one was hurt and the back wheels of the bus were returned quickly to the road with little difficulty.

No fires were reported during the storm that were caused by winds or water damage, and 11 automobile accidents were reported during the storm, none with serious injury.

St. Patrick's Day 1968 will long be remembered in Virginia Beach, however, not necessarily for the wearing of the green. Incidentally, according to horticulture experts, the rain will help to bring out the green of the grass. They say it was sorely needed.

The dredging goes on at Rudee Inlet despite the bad weather. The Erosion Commission hopes to have the job finished by May.

Delay Blamed on Weather

"It's not possible to complete dredging of Rudee Inlet by April 1. However, we are doing everything in our power to get it open as soon as possible," said Edward Church, chairman of the Virginia Beach Erosion Commission, in answer to questions concerning expected completion of a channel through the inlet to facilitate handling of all sizes of charter boats and pleasure craft.

The comments came during Tuesday's regular meeting of the Commission in a review of progress on the project. Two dredges began pumping sand out of the inlet last December in hopes of completing the 88-foot wide, 10-foot deep channel by April 1st. Tuesday's Commission meeting included a report to the effect that a superficial investigation of the inlet indicated the channel is nearly 51 percent complete, at a depth of approximately six feet.

While all members of the Erosion Commission were in agreement on the delay being unavoidable, perhaps the cause of the delay was best described by commission supt. Elsworth Morse who said, "The hang-up is the weather, primarily the recent high seas and winds."

Although no one is able to give a realistic date of completion of the access channel to a boat marina off Winston Salem Avenue, the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN has learned the project will be advanced enough to permit use of a small boat launching ramp at Owl's Creek this summer, to be constructed shortly by the state.

Repairs on Schedule Despite Weather

Weather or not, completed repairs on the damaged spans of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-

Tunnel will be finished by May 15 to June 1. Al Faber, public relations director of the facility said that bad weather and heavy seas have slowed down the repairs somewhat, but that they will all be finished before the peak summer traffic begins.

Nine high pre-stressed concrete spans were ordered from the Bayshore Concrete Products Corp. plant in Cape Charles to replace those damaged when the runaway converted barge first clobbered into the bridge then sideswiped it in several places on its unmaneuvered way to grounding near shore last December.

Two of the 75-foot spans have already been put in place. Another is in the process of being installed. The other six will be placed underneath the roadbed soon. They are the main structural members that support the roadway.

In addition major repairs to the curbing and hand railings are underway and the complete lighting system on the east side of the causeway still must be replaced.

There is no delay in traffic on the facility during any of the repair work, according to Faber. The only inconvenience, he says, is the closure of one lane in the immediate area of the repair work at the time the work is being done.

The man said, "Lower away," and one of the nine main structural members damaged last December was replaced by this huge pre-stressed concrete beam.

Tammy Is Just One Child Helped

By Mary Wright

Tammy Ashworth is a pert five-year-old with shoulder-length blond curls. And according to her mother, Tammy has been the object of some miracle-working on Virginia Beach Boulevard these last few months.

With two older sisters already in school, she has been attending her school since October—children receiving therapy represent a socio-economic cross section, with their handicap one common denominator. Several children are wards of the court, but because of their speech problem, stood little or no chance of adoption. Now, with therapy, they have every hope of finding a home.

There is no way to determine how or why a physically normal child will develop speech difficulties, said Mrs. Umbarger. Most of the children she works with have no physical impediment to speech, she went on and most come from families in which there are other children with perfectly normal speech patterns.

speech therapy classes taught by Miss Sally Bailey at the offices of the Easter Seal Society (formerly the Virginia Beach Society for Handicapped Children and Adults) located in the Byler Building near Princess Anne Plaza.

Tammy, whose speech problem involves articulation of certain sounds, is only one of 20 children receiving individual therapy through the Society. According to Mrs. Catherine Umbarger, director of the society, Miss Bailey and other staff members are now operating at capacity, and another therapist is needed if children and adults with speech difficulties are not to be turned away. There is now a waiting list of five people needing help.

As with any handicapped group, the 20 Virginia Beach forms an "l" sound with her lips...

The youngest child in therapy with Miss Bailey is two-and-a-half; the oldest, ten. Usually by age two a child will begin to say isolated words, said Mrs. Umbarger. If the child is not speaking by age three, the parents begin to worry.

One child may simply begin speaking later than other children, she added, due to delayed

Lehigh Alumni

Launch Drive

Lehigh University alumni representing every class from 1890 through 1967 launched the University's Class Annual Giving Fund drive at a meeting Tuesday night at the University Club in New York City.

At the dinner opening this phase of Lehigh's Annual Giving Fund drive it was announced by Edward A. Curtis, national chairman of the campaign, that more than $600,000 has been raised to date among alumni, friends, and parents.

The class agent phase will take place between now and June 30, 1968, during which period agents will contact classmates throughout the nation. Classes leading in participation and funds raised will be awarded leadership cups. The Virginia Class agent is Theodore Estes of Virginia Beach, class of 1920.

Crusade Reports Progress

Horace Cistola, Virginia Beach chairman for the Cancer Society's annual April Crusade has reported that the Crusade committees are showing "most encouraging" progress.

A progress interim report will be available the first part of April, with the final report following the Society's benefit gala tentatively scheduled for the first or second week of May.

Chairmen who have been announced for the committees are: James Sadler, trades and industry; Bob Johnson, special gifts; Dr. Howard Kahn, professional (medical); Bruce Murphy, professional (legal); Mike Savvides and Gus Riganto, restaurants and bookboards; Mrs. Howard Kahn, committee for special events.

The major solicitation of residential areas will begin in early April. As yet, no chairman has been announced to handle the solicitation.

In addition to the local speech therapy services, the Society (which supports 24 rehabilitation, speech and hearing, and cerebral palsy training centers in Virginia) has purchased artificial legs, braces and wheelchairs for the Tidewater handicapped. The State Association, of which the local branch is an affiliate, provides services to nearly 8,000 Virginians.

Both the state and local organizations operate entirely on funds received through the Easter Seal Drive and private donations. The door-to-door solicitations for Easter Seal donations will begin at Virginia Beach Sunday, March 31.

Skaters Commute from Baltimore

Virginia Beach holds a special attraction for several Baltimore, Md. natives—enough attraction that they make the trip to the Beach once or twice a week.

The attraction is Tim Maloney, the professional at Plaza Roller Rink, who taught skating in Baltimore for five years, and who has been at Virginia Beach for the past two years.

Among Maloney's faithful week-end commuters are the Bob Mulcahys, a family of eight with children between the ages of 17 and four. They arrive at Virginia Beach, where they stay with friends, every weekend to practice and polish their skating.

Francis Albert Sinatra and Edward Kennedy Ellington. What a combination. Recorded December 12, 1967, this album combines the best of two worlds. You take one giant of a man that has been owning the piano for over 40 years and you add to him "The Voice" and you get perfection. Soft, professional perfection, if all that's not enough talent, put in Sonny Burke as producer and Billy May as arranger.

Duke Ellington, born 1899, and Frank Sinatra, born 1915, have both seen it all—war, women, worry, and a wonder of variety. Both have already filled up a lifetime of sound—yet, somehow, they reach out in another new direction in this LP.

Before the session started Frank Sinatra said to Billy May, "Let these men play." Play they did—the Ellington orchestra with Jonny Hodges, Harry Carney, Russell Procope, Jimmy Hamilton, Ed Gonsalves, Sam Woodyard, the Rev. Cootie Williams and Cat Anderson. All "pro's"..... all men that know what's happening and where.

The songs are as varied as the talents. "Follow Me," "Sunny," "Yellow Days," "Come Back to Me," "Indian Summer," and more. If you like a big sound, pick up on this one. It's on Reprise and it's from Francis A. and Edward K.

Have the new low rates taken all the romance out of Long Distance?

And if a man talked business to someone out of town, he was a tycoon, remember?

And when boy lost girl and stomped off, he called her Long Distance just before his plane left the country, and you knew everything was going to be all right. Because if it was Long Distance, boy, it had to be important.

Somehow, today, it just isn't the same. What with Direct Distance Dialing, it's a lot faster, a lot more convenient, a lot more useable. And with Long Distance rates continuing to go down, down, down, everyday people can afford to call Long Distance and talk about everyday things.

Long Distance just isn't what it used to be. Aren't you glad?

3 Beach Policemen Graduate in Class

Three Virginia Beach police officers were among 26 men who made up the first graduating class of the Police Academy at Old Dominion College in Norfolk.

The Tuesday night ceremonies were staged in Hughes Library Assembly Hall with Norfolk Asst. Commonwealth's Attorney Robert Anderson delivering the main address.

The men from Virginia Beach in the initial class were police officers William M. Beard, Virgil L. Thornburg, and Ronald T. Wakeham. Officer Beard completed the course with the third highest average in the class, having just missed the second place standing by .7 of a point.

ODC Pres. Ronald Spector, Caton

(Continued from p.1) for this use passed. The glue-stiffening bill, sought by Virginia Beach Commonwealth's Attorney Andre Evans as well as in articles and editorials in the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN was also handled in the Senate by Caton. It too passed, as did a resolution, including Virginia Beach under a "lightening of certain conflict-of-interest measures." He said he also amended a bill which will greatly assist Virginia Beach in acquisition of land for school sites by condemnation.

"I think annual sessions are coming," said Caton. "In fact with the special session next year, we'll probably have annual sessions from now on. There's a lot of work to be done."

By way of summation, Caton said he thought the area-wide cooperation among legislators brought about the benefits that heretofore the State had neglected.

Committee To Check On Stadium

At the Tuesday afternoon meeting of the Virginia Beach Development Council, Richard Kline was appointed chairman of a committee to study the feasibility of a new athletic stadium for the city.

Mrs. Charlotte Tilbrook, chairman of the committee studying the possibilities of a Virginia Beach cultural, civic and convention center, reported that her committee's findings have been referred to the City Council, with no mention being made of any suggested location for the building. According to Mrs. Tilbrook, City Council took no action on the committee report at its March 18 meeting.

The word "stadium" had been deleted from the report, because a stadium had not been studied to any degree.

For that reason, Development Council president Richard Cockrell appointed Kline's committee.

R.H. Refore, chairman of the nominating committee, presented the slate of officers to be voted on at the annual May meeting, along with a motion to vote on a change of the Council's by-laws to establish the office of second vice president.

Recommended to the Board of Directors for three year terms were Clayton Shanks, Russell Rucks and Richard Kline.

Part of the horde seeking new licenses stands at the main desk of Kellam-Eaton, bright and early Friday morning.

Early Birds Purchase Plates

There is some dubious distinction in being first—or last—to do almost anything. And buying car licenses seems to be on the list.

When the doors to Kellam-Eaton Insurance Co. (one of several Virginia Beach businesses handling the new licenses) opened last Friday morning, the first day of the sales, some 50 or 75 people were there, braving a chilly drizzle just to play hare to everybody else's tortoise.

The licenses will be on sale through April 15, after which cars not displaying the new plates will be stopped. And if the opening-day crowd was impressive, it will be surpassed: on the last day, when the final horde of determined-to-be-last-ones will descend like Attila and the boys.

Kempsville Junior High, Bay-side Junior High and Virginia Beach Vocational-Technical Educational Training Center. Joseph Owens, administrative assistant, announced that Virginia Beach presently has 28 zoned schools, and there will be three more next fall. There will also be six freedom of choice schools—that is the parents may choose which of two schools in a given area their children will attend, as long as there is no overcrowding.

The three new zoned schools will be Pembroke Meadows, Point of View and the new school (unnamed) in Windsor Woods. The freedom of choice schools will be Linkhorn Park, Seaboard, Sealeck, W.T. Cooke, Court House and Creeds. Forms will be sent to parents of all school children on March 25 and must be returned by April 26. Owens said minor changes in zoning will be made because of the new schools opening in the fall. He also said integrated facilities will double in the fall.

Students will make up the last day missed by students at the Pembroke Mall. Police officers designated as a work day for teachers to complete year-end records. Teachers will work on June 8.

An expected report from Dr. James Bash, director of field services for the University of Virginia, was not presented because Dr. Bash was delayed in leaving Charlottesville. He has completed a study of the administrative structure of the school system.

GOP Picks Local Men

C. Bernard Brown of Virginia Beach was elected First District Chairman and Henry F. Clarke of Virginia Beach was elected to the State Central Committee at a meeting of First District Republicans in Newport News Saturday.

Dave Montague and William Knox, both from Hampton, were picked as delegates to the Republican National Convention in Miami in August. Alternates are Sue Hancock and Dick Anand.

Bob Anderson of York County was named elector.

Golfer Robbed

A suspect in the armed robbery of Norman Blossom, of Norfolk at the 13th tee of the Kempsville Meadows golf course last month has been bound over to a grand jury. Police officials say they have accused 38-year-old William Bryant of Willoughby Road of taking $33 from Blossom in the crime. Blossom told police his assailant stepped out of the woods, demanded he surrender his wallet, then fired a shot into the air. Blossom said he saw the assailant replace his wallet on the ground and step back into the woods as he moved down the fairway to continue his play off the course.

Burglaries Checked

An investigation is underway into an unusually large number of residential burglaries which have occurred in better class sections of the city within the past two weeks. Police have received reports of nine such breakins within an eight day period.

When questioned by the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN if the break-ins appeared to be related, Sgt. C.W. Simmons, of the police division detective bureau said, "They do appear to be the work of the same group of people." Simmons also had some advice as to how residents can protect themselves from future break-ins of this type. He called upon residents to "report suspicious persons in their neighborhoods, such as repairmen who come to their homes without being called and to attempt to get the license number and description of any vehicles which may be used by such persons."

Hearing Set

Court appearance is scheduled next Monday for two men charged with tossing a smoke bomb into the midst of several St. Patrick's Day auto show at the Pembroke Mall. Police officials have identified the accused as William McKeever, 21, of whom listed their address as Ottawa Road. An employee of the Mall, identified as Mark Ingram of Anson Lane, was reportedly partially overcome by smoke when he attempted to smother the bomb.

Convicted and Sentenced

A 19 year old Virginia Beach student at the University of Virginia has been found guilty of two counts of contributing to the delinquency of a minor in the investigation of drug trafficking through this resort city. John C. English of 52nd Street was fined $400 and given a 90 days jail sentence by Juvenile & Domestic Relations Court Judge Frank E. Butler, III. The investigation, which began in Virginia Beach January 27, has resulted in the charging of 71 adults and juveniles on various violations of laws regarding illegal use or possession of drugs.

An appeal of each of the charges has been noted by English.

Search Continues

As the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN went to press a massive search was continuing for Albert Rainey, of Virginia Beach, missing on a canoe trip down the intercoastal waterway. Rainey, 25, vanished along with his 32-year-old brother John of Chesapeake after the men left North Landing near Pungo, Sunday, on a trip to Colington, N.C. Coast Guard officials told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN search parties located the men's empty canoe in the region of Currituck Beach Light, in North Carolina, but were unable to locate any of the men's belongings, nor had they found any trace of the men.

Arrested for Arson

Court appearance is pending for Clifford J. Rainford Jr. of Virginia Beach on charges of starting a fire in a Suffolk business firm two weeks ago. Nansemond County police and fire officials contend Rainford, 21, of Thoroughgood Drive, was responsible for a fire which destroyed the main building of Hampton Roads Box Co., resulting in an estimated $40,000 damage. Rainford has been placed under $12,500 bond pending his court appearance on arson charges.

Texaco Car-Matic's National "Own the Perfect Business" Program is being shown to the public for the first time in Norfolk, at the Lake Wright Motor Hotel, tonight, March 21, at 7 and 9 p.m.
This is the first in a series of programs to be shown throughout the nation, designed to introduce a thoroughly tested, highly profitable franchise operation that combines two of the most well-known names in their field - Texaco and Car-Matic.
Car-Matic, in agreement with Texaco, is preparing to institute this program across the United States, with the immediate objective of the Southeastern region. Development has already taken place in the Norfolk area. There are currently 3 franchises available in Norfolk.
Interested persons must first make application and subsequently, be approved by both Car-Matic and Texaco. The franchisee, for his original investment of $15,000, selects a specific location from a list of properties made available by Texaco. He then undergoes 4 weeks of intensive management training by Texaco and Car-Matic on the operation of his business. Two weeks of training are at the Car-Matic home offices in Norfolk, Virginia, and two weeks are at the franchisee's new place of business. Central rebuilding and distributing facilities in each marketing area solves his inventory

Who Owns Island?
A Circuit Court ruling is being awaited as to who will be declared the owner of Black Beard Island in Lake Joyce. Baylark Pines developer Clyde L. Collier is claiming ownership of the island by virtue of a 1901 deed covering land near the Chesapeake Bay. City officials are claiming ownership of the island being included in last July's purchase of Lake Joyce from the city of Norfolk at a price of $25,000. Judge George W. Valcos is considering testimony in the case, but has not as yet indicated when he would render his decision.

Drivers Are Threat to Children

Concern is growing over the increasing number of motorists disregarding the safety of the young people of our city traveling to and from school by means of city owned, and/or privately owned, school buses. The lives of these students are being endangered by motorists failing to stop for such buses taking on, or discharging, passengers on streets of the city.

The State code of Virginia, as well as the code of the City of Virginia Beach, is very specific in outlining rules which govern motorists in regard to school buses. The law states "a person shall be guilty of reckless driving who shall fail to stop at a school bus, whether publicly or privately owned, and whether transporting children to, from, or in connection with, a public or private school, stopped on the highway for the purpose of taking on, or discharging, school children, when approaching the same from any direction, and to remain stopped until all school children are clear of the highway and the bus is put in motion."

This sign stands on Independence Boulevard, one of the divided streets where school bus drivers are complaining about non-stop-pers.

The VIRGINIA BEACH SUN questioned C. H. Gimbert, supervisor for the city's Department of Pupil Transportation, if ignoring of stopped school buses is prevalent in any particular section of the city. Gimbert replied, "The problem exists primarily on main thoroughfares such as Shore Drive, Princess Anne Road and Independence Boulevard."

Mrs. Maria Andrews, who has been driving city school buses for nearly five years, told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN she felt "people just don't think about the law regarding school buses stopped on the streets. They will stop their cars a long distance from the stopped bus, or almost pass us before coming to a stop."

One of the big problems facing bus drivers, according to Mrs. Andrews, is failure of motorists to wait for a stopped school bus on roadways divided by a concrete or grass median. The danger on these thoroughfares arises when children must cross to the other side of the roadway to board a bus, or having just departed from the bus. The law requires motorists to remain stopped until children have cleared the highway.

Another area of potential danger is railroad crossings not equipped with gates to control traffic. The law specifies that school buses must stop at all railroad crossings. However several of these locations in the city are points at which students board or depart school buses. Such locations should remind motorists again of the danger involved in passing a stopped school bus.

It should be pointed out motorists approaching school buses will be given advanced warning of the bus coming to a stop, by the flashing of red lights on the bus. These lights will also continue "flashing" while the bus is stopped until it is put in motion. This action is taken on the part of the school bus driver as a courtesy to motorists to alert them in order that motorists may act in a manner which will not place them in violation of the law, or endanger the life of a child.

Capt. G. K. Bryan, Virginia Beach Police Division Traffic Bureau C. O. said, "The men of our bureau are constantly on the watch for this type of offense, and we intend to rigidly enforce the law." Capt. Bryan also pointed out the necessity for motorists to stop in both directions on roadways divided by medians.

In searching for an answer on correcting the apparent disrespect for the law by many motorists, Capt. Bryan offered what is perhaps the most reasonable explanation when he said, "I think the biggest problem is that people are just not giving thought to waiting for a stopped school bus, especially on divided highways."

Eliot Play Scheduled

T.S. Eliot's "Murder in the Cathedral" will be presented tomorrow night, March 22, at Emmanuel Episcopal Church, Kempsville, at 8 p.m.

A non-professional group from several churches in the area, directed by Jennifer Barrows, is producing the play, which is Eliot's dramatization of the death of Thomas A. Becket, Archbishop of Canterbury under King Henry II.

Becket had been King Hal's closest and most trusted friend, and was given the Archbishopric at Canterbury with the assumption that he would relegate the Church's powers to those of the King. When Becket began to take his duties as Archbishop seriously, and began to threaten Hal's power, the King had Becket murdered on the cathedral steps...for which Hal did penance and Becket got canonized.

There will be no admission charged, and the public is invited.

S/Sgt. Thomas P. Campbell, son of Mrs. Mary Reed of Bernice Place, has been recognized for helping his unit earn the U.S. Air Force Outstanding Unit Award.

The sergeant, a preventive medicine specialist in the 437th Military Airlift Wing at Charleston AFB, S.C., will wear a distinctive service ribbon as a permanent decoration.

Capt. Nelson Gets Award

Capt. W.S. Nelson, commanding officer of the attack transport Chilton (APA-38) and a Virginia Beach resident, was awarded the Navy Commendation Medal in ceremonies March 8, aboard his ship.

Presenting the award was Capt. R.C. Gibson, Commander Amphibious Squadron Two. The commendation medal was presented for "meritorious service from Sept. 1, 1965 to July 14, 1967, as the A-64 Program Coordinator in the office of the Deputy Chief of Naval Operations (Air.)"

It's Time to Think Books

The State Library survey of library facilities in Virginia Beach has pointed out discrepancies in the system, most of which we knew without the survey. At present these discrepancies are not terribly serious, but unless the recommendations of the study are followed, the city may be badly lacking in the future.

School libraries are curriculum-oriented. Branch libraries, such as we now have, are inadequate to the needs of the older student or the researcher. We must, therefore, think in terms of a large central library for our city, not necessarily in cooperation with other Tidewater cities as recommended by the report.

By 1985, Virginia Beach will be the largest city in Virginia. It must by then have a library, rivaled by none. This can only be done if the planning for the facility starts now. We already find it unpleasant to be forced into downtown Norfolk for research and to pay an out-of-city fee to take books out.

Obviously the branch libraries we already have are filling a desperate need, but they must be filled with books, expanded and better staffed. Libraries are an important part of the education of our young people. Virginia Beach, as a metropolitan city, must take its place in the education process with more branches, more books and longer hours.

But even all of these will not answer the eventual need of a mammoth central library, filled to brimming over with research materials, as well as the best in books.

Several private and civic groups are already working toward this end, as are city departments. But even more should be done, before we find ourselves without a much-needed facility when we really need it the most.

National Wildlife Week

This is National Wildlife Week. The theme is simple... "Learn to live with nature." There is an urgent need for conservation in America if we are to protect our nation's resources and beauty.

Conservation education seems to be the answer, and it can be a self-education. We must take care of the land we have, protect wildlife and push for measures against water and air pollution. We should also take a sharp look at the changing environment and its littering, as well as the junk that ruins the looks of the land.

Virginia Beach, for instance, has within its borders a national wildlife refuge. Travel south of Sandbridge and look at it sometime, untouched and unspoiled. Then the need to conserve our country for future generations becomes really clear.

Pick A Spot... Now

Already it appears that controversy over the location of a cultural-convention center for Virginia Beach is shaping up. And that is a shame. It seems that everyone has agreed that the facility is needed, that the present facility is inadequate and that a new facility must be built as soon as possible.

If everyone can agree on those three points, then they should begin looking for a common ground concerning location. There are arguments that it can be better placed near the center of the city for best access and lower land costs. Others argue that it must be near the oceanfront for the best access to resort conventions and conventioners. Both factions are adamant and there are signs neither will give an inch.

This is ridiculous. Nothing should delay the start of the facility. Where it is put is very important, and the matter should be settled immediately.

We believe it should be in the Beach borough as near to the ocean and the resort motels and hotels as possible. We do not believe it should be where the present Dome is. The cost of land is definitely important, and we believe the area around the old sanitation facility off Laskin Road and Holly Road, filled and dredged could be ideal. It is already partially owned by the city.

But now is the time to move, not later. Hopefully all controversies can be ended soon. The same holds true for the location and kind of stadium to be built in the area. It is needed now without bickering by too many groups.

'Papa' Is Gone

A great man who lived in Virginia Beach is dead. He wasn't well-known outside his circle of business and social friends, but he was nevertheless, a great man.

Alfred Cistola, "Papa," as he was known to many affectionately, never held public office. He wasn't really a joiner, but he was always willing to help. He was a devoted family man, and he was devoted to his adopted home of Virginia Beach.

He came here 16 years ago, saw the potential of the fast-growing area and set about developing homes and businesses all over the city, including Pembroke Mall Shopping Center. Now his son and others carry on his work.

"Papa" worried a lot, but he always had a kind word and a smile. Virginia Beach will not be the same without him.

THE VERY WINDY SEASON

to build some important supporting walls on the firm foundation which has been established. The response to date from the business and civic leaders in the greater Tidewater area has been encouraging. There is great opportunity here for the development of a strong, small, private college.

Obscenity—Big Business

The following article is reprinted from the FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin. It was written by the Director of the FBI, John Edgar Hoover, and concerns a serious problem facing all of us.

The publication and sale of obscene material is BIG business in America today. Degenerate sex pictures and pornographic literature, covertly peddled and sold in most cities and communities, net greedy smut merchants millions of dollars annually.

It is impossible to estimate the amount of harm to impressionable teenagers and to assess the volume of sex crimes attributable to pornography, but its influence is extensive. Sexual violence is increasing at an alarming pace. Many parents are deeply concerned about conditions which involve young boys and girls in sex parties and illicit relations. While there is no official yardstick with which to measure accurately the reasons for increases in any criminal violation, we must face reality. Pornography, in all its forms, is one major cause of sex crimes, sexual aberrations, and perversions.

Is our society becoming so wicked that we are turning from virtue and integrity to immorality and degradation? Are we becoming morally bankrupt and letting our principles of conduct and decency deteriorate? Are we forsaking the simple teachings of right over wrong and good over bad?

Let us look about us. In the publishing, theatrical, and entertainment fields, are the good, enlightening, and educational qualities of their products being overshadowed by too much emphasis on obscenity, vulgarity, incest, and homosexuality? Many people believe this to be true. But the legitimate productions of these media are rather mild when compared with the "hard-core" pornography flooding the country in the forms of films, "playing" cards, "comic" books, paperbacks, and pictures. Such filth in the hands of young people and curious adolescents does untold damage and leads to disastrous consequences.

Police officials who have discussed this critical problem with me unequivocally state that lewd and obscene material plays a motivating role in sexual violence. In case after case, the sex criminal has on his person or in his possession pornographic literature or pictures. Under these conditions, it is not surprising to note that forcible rape in 1966 increased 10 percent over the 1965 total, a violation occurring every 21 minutes. Since 1960, forcible rape has increased 50 percent.

Obviously, all that is being done to combat the sale and traffic in obscene material in the Nation is not enough. Sound and workable laws are needed, and, where they do exist, they should be vigorously enforced. Since many courts seem to judge obscenity on the basis of the moral standards in the community, the public has a vital role in upgrading the level of community morality. When obscene material is discovered, it should be exposed and citizens should complain to proper authorities. When pornography is received in the mails, postal authorities should be advised. Citizens should come forward and cooperate in the prosecution of offenders.

Obscene material is indeed evil, but it is not a necessary evil. If the illicit profits in pornography were replaced with stiff punishments for the filth purveyors, this evil would be brought under control.

SPOTS

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

"What do you mean, you have spring fever?" he asked. "I never have any clean socks the rest of the year either."

"You wear too many socks," she said lastly, as she stretched and gazed at the great outdoors longingly. "Just two a day...one for each foot. Which reminds me... Have you seen one of several pairs are missing?"

"I've been meaning to ask you about that," she said. "Did you only wear one sock a few days?"

"Oh, come on now," he said. "You must have left them in the dryer or in the clothes hamper."

"Maybe I did. Isn't it a beautiful day? Just look out there," she said, pointing to the front yard. "The trees are all budding and the flowers are just starting to show above those ragged looking flower beds you haven't raked. And they certainly need weeding and straightening and fertilizing. When are you going to take care of that?"

"As soon as I find my other sock. Have you ever seen anyone working on a yard in just one sock?" he asked sweetly.

"You worry about socks at a time like this. Look at the little blades of grass peeking through the ground right by all the bald spots in the whole yard. That yard really needs a lot of work. When are you going to put down the fertilizer, the lime and the new grass seed?" she asked.

really needs a lot of work. When are you going to put down the fertilizer, the lime and the new grass seed?" she asked.

"You know," he said. "You have an interesting variety of spring fever. It makes you lazy and want to commune with nature, but I have to create the nature for you to commune with. Don't worry about it. It'll get done, probably before I find the mate to these socks."

"That's what you said last fall about raking the leaves," she pointed out.

"Well, it got done, didn't it?"

"Yes, last weekend!"

"I couldn't find a pair of socks all winter," he said. "Besides it really helped the ground. That cover of leaves and stuff decayed there and left me some beautiful black dirt. Now all I need is some black socks."

She sat down wearily and said, "You also have to clean out the gutters and wash the outside of the windows, you know."

"Gee, spring fever is great. You get it, and then sock it to me."

"I thought you couldn't find any socks."

"OK, That's it," he said firmly. "Now we'll turn to your jobs. When do you plan to get around to getting out the summer clothes, and mending all the holes in my pants pocket? When do you plan to wash the kids' Easter clothes like you said? When do you plan to wash the inside of the windows? When do you think you'll find time to find my socks?"

"Don't worry. All that will be done... sooner or later," she said, slightly on the defensive at last.

"Fine. And when can I expect to get that shirt ironed that I gave you to wash last October? When are you going to clean out the closets? And when am I going to get a pair of socks that match?"

"All right, you win," she said. "I'll get started on my jobs if you will."

"Good," he said triumphantly as he sat down on the sofa. "Just what are you doing?"

"Relaxing after all this exertion," he answered simply. She threw something black at him. It was a pair of socks, neatly rolled. The two socks were not exactly alike, but they did match another pair just like them upstairs in his drawer.

Little Theatre 'Grabs' Navy Families

Where do good Naval families go when they retire from service life? One answer seems to be Virginia Beach, and, more particularly, the Little Theatre, whose current production of "Grand National Night" has no less than five one-time Navy men in the cast, with four of the wives also involved with the play in some capacity or other.

John and Peggie MacArthur came to the Beach about ten years ago when he retired from the Navy, and John is currently employed as a personnel officer at Dam Neck. Both of them will be seen on stage in this show: Peggie in the lead role of "Pinky" and John as the family manservant, of few words but much importance to the plot.

Peggie is best known for her talent as a costume designer and needlewoman -- her creations this season have included the eye-catching pink outfits for the musical "The Amorous Flea." In past years she both acted in and made costumes for "Stop the World - I Want to Get Off," "Life with Father," "Brigadoon" and "Look Homeward, Angel." John appeared in all these shows too, joined by son Gordon for "Stop the World." In addition John is an indispensable "crew" member also, having worked on set construction for almost every play in the past three seasons.

After service as a Naval Aviator Jim English graduated from William and Mary into a career in life insurance. He and his wife Dorothy have lived in Virginia Beach for the past eight years. Jim's nationwide office is at Bayside, and the Sales and Marketing Executives' Club recently honored him with a "Sammy" award as Salesman of the Year.

Jim will not admit to being an actor at all, saying that he was Shanghaied into it through bringing daughter Karen to tryouts for "Life with Father." In which both of them were then cast. His performance in the upcoming play as "Detective Inspector Ayling" will, however, put an end to that yarn! His wife Dot is one of the staunch supporters without whom the Little Theatre would never get a show on the boards. When she isn't painting scenery she is working the box office or hostessing a party in the foyer.

Ian Goodwin's connections with the Beach Little Theatre go back to what are known as "The High School Days" when plays were rehearsed in a wooden hut on 18th Street and transferred with lightning expertise to the stage of what is now the Junior High School for a dress rehearsal and two performances. In those pioneer days Ian appeared in such plays as "Gaslight" and "The Winslow Boy," taking time from his duties as an officer in the Royal Navy on the staff of SACLANC in Norfolk.

When he retired in 1962 he and his wife Mary, with their teenagers Peter and Jan, decided to return to Virginia to live. They now make their home on Adam Keeling Road and Ian is a Vice President of the Chequered Flag Motor Car Company. In the current play he will give another of his impersonations of English policemen -- as "Sergeant Gibson," while Mary is on the vital job of "properties." She, too, is one of those indispensable people to the Theatre: all year she has been the "Mailing Room" for its publicity -- no surety this -- she has already sent out over a thousand letters since last September!

The Martins, Norrie and Penny, need little introduction to local theatregoers. The Royal Navy also brought Norrie to the Beach in 1956. When time came to retire they decided to put down roots here, having fallen in love with Virginia, thus becoming what Norrie describes as "the second wave of Jamestown settlers." Although also an insurance underwriter, it seems appropriate, therefore, that Norrie should have become best known locally as "The Voice of Adam Thoroughgood." He has been seen in many plays for the Little Theatre, the most recent being "Life with Father" and "Twelfth Night." In "Grand National Night" he portrays the Scottish lawyer friend of the family -- "Just my part after all my own father was both a lawyer and a Scotsman!"

Although Penny appeared in "Five Finger Exercise" before Christmas, she is best known as the director of "Stop the World," "Twelfth Night" and this season's "The Amorous Flea." She is publicity chairman for the year and is just getting ready to direct the final play of the season -- "Hay Fever." Son Charles has acted in a couple of small parts and hopes for "more-plays-with-teenage-parts-in-them." In the meantime he works on sets, as school and Scouting permit.

What brings people into the Little Theatre in the first place? Jim English admits it was purely accidental -- the Mac-

Arthurs were drawn into it via the Civic Chorus and a love for singing. Ian Goodwin's acting goes back to school plays, while Penny Martin's parents were Little Theatre buffs and she was, she says, "practically born into it." Norrie ruefully adds a footnote to that: "My involvement in the theatre was the classic -- 'If you can't beat it, join it!'"

"Grand National Night" opens March 29 and will be seen 30 and 31, April 5, 6 and 7. Nightly at 8:30, Sundays at 7:30 p.m. Admission $2.50; $1.25 for students and Service Personnel. For reservations call 428-8500.

Green Was the Password at the Foleys

The William F. Foleys' annual St. Patrick's party was a family affair--the family and more than 100 other people, that is.

The party began at the Cavalier Cabana Club Saturday night and wound up at the Foley's home on Bobolink Drive Sunday. The party, their 20th, has evolved from a day time office party into a full-fledged formal affair looked forward to all year by many.

Everything was green, from the green chiffon gown worn by Pauline Foley to the hats worn by the guests--even the band stand was green. Tom Rabeau went so far as to wear a green wig under his green hat.

Among the many guests were Norfolk Police Chief and Mrs. Claude Staylor, Hampton Police Chief and Mrs. John Lucy, Mr. and Mrs. Reeves Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. William Kellam, Mr. and Mrs. Brad Pulley, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Krause, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Foley and Mr. and Mrs. Bud Byers.

Pauline Foley, center, chats with her daughter-in-law and son, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Foley.

Jo Kellam, Mary Geiger, Bill Kellam and Brad Pulley shared a table.

Voters League Learns Facts From Local Party Leaders

By Carolyn Owens

Joel Carlson, director of community relations for WTAR Radio-TV, was the moderator for a panel of distinguished guests of the annual meeting of the League of Women Voters held yesterday, March 20, at the Admiralty Motor Hotel.

Members of the panel were Henry Clarke, of Virginia Beach, representative to the Republican State Central Committee; Owen Pickett, Democratic City Chairman of Virginia Beach; Robert Doumar, Republican City Committee Chairman of Norfolk; and Joseph Fitzpatrick, Democratic City, Executive Committee Chairman of Norfolk.

Carlson was introduced by Mrs. Audrey Tozer, president of the League, who noted that Carlson was the only person at the head table who was allowed to make a speech. His topic was "The Importance of Voting." He said there are three freedoms which will always be influential in our form of government: political freedom, not tyranny; economic freedom, not poverty; and intellectual freedom, not ignorance. Public sentiment or opinion may change any law now in existence, as more people become concerned, you create a "public opinion climate" to which all politicians are sympathetic.

The members of the panel introduced themselves by answering a series of questions. Fitzpatrick, Doumar and Pickett are elected to their chairmanships by the voters for two-year terms. Clarke will hold his office four years. During his opening statement, Clarke added that when he first moved to Virginia Beach, he was a proached concerning his political affiliation. His desire was to activate the two-party system in this area, and he says he now sees the favorable results of his decision. Carlson declared the floor was open to questions from the ladies.

Doumar was asked how the Republican Party in his area had progressed in recent years. He said that six years ago the League of Women Voters was begged by the representatives from the Republican Party to allow them to be speakers before their annual meeting, but it was not possible because the Democratic representatives refused to appear at the same time. Doumar added that the League was supposed to be non-partisan. He jokingly said that the future of the Republican Party at one time was so dim that if the Democrats placed an orangutan up for office against a Republican candidate, the monkey would win.

Question: Are the delegates from either party instructed? The Democrats are "briefed" the Republicans, definitely not.

Question: Who are "at large" delegates? Usually the current Congressman from the particular district is asked to be a delegate-at-large.

Question: On instructions received for National Conventions, do they apply only to the first ballot? Yes, unless you are weakening your vote with a split ticket; then unit rule should be placed into effect.

Question: Do the taxpayers pay for the delegates' expenses to State conventions? No, the delegate pays his own expenses. Question: How necessary is the Electoral College? Since the Electoral College was originated to prohibit one geographical area from controlling or dominating the election, it may not now be necessary. We were reminded that the Electoral College does not have to follow the instructions of the voters at the polls. In Mississippi in 1960, the College did not cast its votes for John F. Kennedy as the public had... instead they voted for the late Sen. Harry F. Byrd, Sr.

Question: How much power does the office of chairman really have? Each of the panel members agreed with Fitzpatrick who said that there is no inherent power other than appointing other chairmen; you must respect the views of your co-workers.

New Officers elected at the business meeting which preceded the luncheon and panel discussion are: Mrs. Clement Todd, first vice-president; Mrs. Raleigh Engle, second vice president; Mrs. G.R. Friedman, treasurer. Directors elected for a two-year term are: Mrs. A.A. Flynn, Mrs. Earl Morris, Mrs. Ezra Landres and Mrs. Robert Racine.

Committee Celebrates Victory

The scene was strictly jubilation Friday night when members of the Virginia Beach Cancer Society Unit's Trades and Industries committee met for victory cocktails at the James P. Sadler's home on Adam Keeling Road.

Cancer Crusade chairman Horace Cistola laughed and said that he had tripled the committee's goal over its 1967 quota, wanting to give them a figure they "had to work a little to meet." Now, with the April Crusade not even officially begun, the committee (chaired by Jimmy Sadler) has already reached 152 per cent of $1,700 its goal.

Sadler presented Cistola with $2590 in cash and pledged donations, the pledges yet to come in totaling $425.

According to Cistola, the Virginia Beach Cancer Crusade now has the highest percentage of its goal of any of the four Tidewater units.

Committee member Rip Riopelle, who turned in the highest amount of donations, was awarded a gift by Sadler.

Concerts Scheduled for Schools

What is it that Young Audiences has that accounts for its success? The approach is a fresh one, one that treats children in its audiences as people, never talking down to them, drawing them into musical performance as a natural and casual thing. The program is a simple one. Live chamber music concerts are presented under informal circumstances, in elementary and secondary schools, during regular school hours, by different types of small ensembles. The instruments are demonstrated, the children are told about various aspects of the music played, and there is audience participation as well as a question period.

Horace Cistola, Crusade chairman, grins as he accepts Jimmy Sadler's report of having reached 152 per cent of the trades and industries' $1,700 goal.

Sipping cocktails and congratulating each other were committee members and their wives: the James Midgettes, the Rip Riopelles, the William Alexanders, the Bob Ashburners the Frank Weigands, the Oels Parkers, the Dean Lees, the Joe Crosswhites, the Bernard Kralls, the Ward Kings and the George Parkers.

To make your donation a real pleasure, all three of the ensembles (Feldman String Quartet, Tidewater Woodwind Quintet, Norfolk Brass Quintet) will play on Monday, March 25 at 8 p.m. at Kaufman Hall, Oyster Shum Temple, Raleigh Ave. at Stockley Gardens. Donation is $3.

Checks for tickets may be made out to "Norfolk Chapter of National Council of Jewish Women," or "Norfolk Chapter of Young Audiences." Tickets can be obtained from Mrs. Ralph Rabinowitz, 100 Whiting St., Norfolk, Va. 23505.

The Norfolk chapter is engaged now in a fund-raising project.

'Mad Hatters' Win Clients

Their hats are their trademark.

The "Mad Hatters" believe fashion and femininity are the keys to unlocking the doors of Tidewater businessmen. They have recently joined the ranks of women radio account executives (there are only five) in Tidewater as members of WVAB, Virginia Beach's radio station.

Jack Harris, executive director of WVAB and the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, lost a secretary and a staff artist when the young women decided to get out and see the world.

Judy Hundley had been Harris' secretary for 5 years, and Meredith Sembler was the newspaper's staff artist before she toured Europe recently.

The two fashion plates believe that fashion is "the important thing."

"We wear hats because very few women do anymore," said Judy.

"Women are under the misconception that men don't like hats," added Meredith. "They really do."

Although neither had been involved in sales before, neither is a newcomer to the advertising and radio field.

Judy has worked in various facets of radio for 11 years, and recently became interested in sales when she began handling printing orders for Beach Publishing Inc.

As an artist with advertising agencies, Miss Sembler "was on the other side of the desk" in advertising before. "My father is in t.v., and I grew up in communications."

"We asked Mr. Harris if we couldn't give it a try," said

Judy and Meredith, ready to see their clients.

Judy. "We told him the two of us could make it together. We were both tired of being shut up in an office. Mr. Harris is still the greatest boss in the world, but I wanted to get out."

One of their "trade secrets" is to keep up to date on world events so they can discuss them sensibly with their clients. They say this helps the client "feel confidence in us. We show a sincere interest in his business," said Meredith.

As for being accepted by Tidewater businessmen, Robert W. Porter, who heads the Dale Carnegie Courses in this area, was so impressed by their sales presentation, that he invited the pair to speak before one of his classes last night on their techniques of selling. "Said Harris of his executives, 'I've always felt women are the greatest salesmen in the world and if you don't believe me, ask any man who is married.'"

"I feel both of these young ladies are extremely well qualified to serve as radio account executives. In addition to having a fine educational background, both had practical experience regarding the internal operations of a station, and this is a value that can only be gained by experience."

"And if all of the above reasons fail to make sense, they are a lot more attractive than some of their competition," he concluded with a smile.

ALLEY

Spring Has Sprung? Posies, Rain, Etc.

Ah, spring!

That's what the calendar says it is despite any weather to the contrary.

Soon birds will be bursting open to greet the warm rays of sunshine--only to be drowned in the April showers which somehow usually arrive in March and last through May. That is if they don't get buried in a late snowstorm.

Next thing you know everybody will be complaining about the sweltering heat. Then the roads to the ocean will be so crowded with tourists the natives can't get to the water.

Surfers will be complaining about lack of space.

Of course, the crazy forestry bush in my front yard has been anticipating spring since November. It's bloomed, one branch at a time, every other week since Thanksgiving.

Spring--that's when the brats are finally released from their cages and can play outdoors again while their mamas breathe a sigh of relief--until the little darlings come in with mud all over their feet (among other places).

"In the spring a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of..." Well, we won't say what since this is a family-type newspaper. The teenagers become more interested in each other than in final exams, much to the frustration of parents.

And poor papa's pocketbook suffers. First there's Easter--requiring complete new outfits for everyone. Then all the kids discover they can't quite fit into last summer's clothes, meaning whole new wardrobes for all.

The wild onions have already sprouted and will soon be joined by the crabgrass we so carefully pulled up root by root last year. Then there are always dandelions for variety.

What I really look forward to in spring is warmer weather so the brats can wear shorts and I can stop spending all weekend patching knees in corduroy pants so they'll last another week.

The Blackwater Volunteer Fire Department headquarters, on Blackwater Road where an elementary school stood for many years, also serves as the center for many activities of the community.

Fire Hydrants Are Scarce

The Blackwater Volunteer Fire Department had its beginning 10 years ago when a group of men remained after a church service and decided a fire department should be formed to offer protection to residents of the community. The idea quickly spread to nearly every corner of the community, combined with a drive for public donations to support such an operation.

A decision was made to locate the fire department "station house" on Blackwater Road where the old Blackwater elementary school was located, which was to be torn down. Through the use of the public donations a cinder block building was erected for the housing of a "1942" pumper-tanker engine which was obtained from the Navy as the department's first piece of fire fighting equipment. Incidentally, that original truck is still housed at the station house and along with another tanker pumper truck, plus one ambulance make up the equipment used by the department.

These facilities served needs of the department until five years ago, when it was necessary to build a "maintenance garage" adjacent to the main building. Today the department headquarters also serves as a "community center". The portion of the building used for regular meetings by Blackwater Volunteers also serves for public meetings of community groups, as the area's elected headquarters and for recreational activities, including teenage dances which are held twice a month.

The Blackwater Volunteer Fire Department's constitutional officers consist of Arnie Werner, president; Norwood Shirley, vice president; and J. L. Parsons who serves both as secretary and treasurer. John Contos is "chief" of the department, an office he has held for the past six years, and is assisted in administration of the department by John Cahoon, who serves as assistant chief. The Blackwater Dept. is one of the few volunteer fire departments in the city which does not have a ladies auxiliary, of a rescue squad. However every man of the department does respond to emergency calls requiring medical or ambulance services.

Chief Contos speaks very highly of the men of the department. He told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, "The morale of the men is very good and they are very proud of their company, and that while everything is so wide open here, and emergency calls involve long distances from the station, the men really respond to an alarm and move as quickly as possible when they are needed."

Contos added, "The men always show an eagerness to improve themselves by attending training sessions at City-sponsored fire schools, as well as demonstrations in fighting different types of fires, and that the men learn very quickly."

The lack of fire hydrants in the region poses a particular problem in the fighting of fires, Chief Contos says. Water is drawn from the Mill Dam, Blackwater River, and/or available nearby ponds. Contos also said owners of boats moored at these locations have offered immediate use of their craft by the Blackwater Volunteers in the event of any emergency, and that "we have been lucky so far and haven't had to use these boats."

Communications also creates difficulty in operation of the department, since many times phone lines are busy resulting in delaying notification of the scene of a fire. Chief Contos told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, "Residents could help us on this by calling the city's fire headquarters as soon as they find a building, or woods, on fire, and report the exact location of the fire. The dispatcher could then alert us by signalling with the siren at the station house and alerting the men by use of a monitor system. Residents should remember the phone number to use in such an emergency is 428-9121."

With the approach of spring, grass fires will be an increasing danger in the Blackwater region, Chief Contos said many times the men will "back fire."

As you plan your summer flower border, you will no doubt want to consider the flowering annuals.

Annuals add a great deal to the color scheme of the landscape, quite often presenting the only spots in the entire landscape.

Annuals come in a host of varieties, and in a multitude of colors, and heights, in both doubles and singles, and in dwarf and regular sizes.

Some annuals that you might want to choose from are petunias, snapdragons, marigolds, cockscomb, zinnias, asters, coleus, poppy, spider plant and sweet pea.

around potential danger areas to protect nearby homes or buildings to prevent such fires from spreading, and to have advance "fire breaker" regions to aid in confining such fires. Such a service is provided many times for farmers in the region, at their request.

At the present time 25 men make up the membership of the Blackwater Volunteers, which brings the unit up to full strength. This membership covers an age range of from 22 to the forties representing a wide cross section of interests as a result of the varying backgrounds of the men.

Success of the Blackwater Volunteer Fire Department, as with the other volunteer units of the city, depends to a great extent on the support of the public. Chief Contos is proud of the support the department receives from residents of the region, and in Contos' words "we're doing pretty good, but we can always use financial help from the public."

Ocean Park Women Hear About Camp

A St. Patrick's Day theme provided a colorful atmosphere for the buffet luncheon and meeting of the Ocean Park Women's Club last Wednesday, March 13 at 12:30.

The warm, bright surroundings inside and the "freak" snowstorm whirling about outside only heightened the importance of the message of their guest speaker, Edward N. Badran, of Camp Civitan's board of trustees.

Richard Lindell, chief engineer of WTAR-TV, accompanied Badran, and brought the film, "The House That Hope Built." The film was produced by the WTAR-TV Public Affairs and News Department and donated to Camp Civitan.

Camp Civitan, a project supported annually by the Ocean Park Women's Club, is a camp for handicapped children started in 1967 as a daytime recreational facility for about 400 youngsters in the summer. At present, the camp is used the rest of the year by 20 to 30 children who are victims of cerebral palsy. Although Camp Civitan is now a daytime operation, the Board has hopes that someday soon, with more contributions, the camp may become a full-time residential rehabilitation center.

Mrs. J. Laurence Eley, publicity chairman for the club, said that the Camp Civitan Board of Trustees now included not only Civitan members, but also men and women from other interested clubs in the Tidewater area.

New officers for 1968-1969 elected at this meeting are: Mrs. W. F. Salkowski, president; Mrs. C. B. Ostrander, first vice president; Mrs. W. O. Sherman, second vice president; Mrs. Charles McCoy, treasurer; Mrs. H. Wittersheim, recording secretary; Mrs. R. L. Oliver, corresponding secretary.

VIRGINIA BEACH LAWNS & GARDENS

Exclusive in the Sun

Edited by four turf and garden authorities living in Virginia Beach.

Soggy Lawns Suffer From Sunday Rain

Most homeowners agreed this week that their lawns look as bad as they have seen them look in the last five years. The heavy rain Sunday did start some rejuvenation but much more needs to be done.

Turf authorities blame it on "desiccation" or dehydrating of the grass which was caused by the several ice storms last winter. The grass leaves became covered with ice and could not breathe, causing them to dehydrate and the grass to turn yellow. Most lawns in the city of Virginia Beach are mighty yellow right now.

FEED LAWN - The first thing to do is feed your lawn. Now is the time to fertilize the first time. That, plus rain, will green your lawn up again. Many good products are on the market, but you should get one high in nitrogen such as a 24-6-6. A popular analysis in this area has always been 8-8-8. That means equal amounts of nitrogen, phosphorus and potash—the three primary plant foods. Grass does not need plant food in that ratio, however, so be sure to buy one high in nitrogen.

PREVENT CRABGRASS - If you have crabgrass, use one of the new crabgrass preventers now. After crabgrass starts, there really is no effective way to stop it, despite what you read in the ads. But it can be stopped before it starts with the new pre-emergent crabgrass controls. They prevent the crabgrass seed from germinating. But they must be applied early. A rule of thumb is to use them before forsythia blooms fall. As you know, forsythia is about ready to bloom. Ask for one that contains Tupersan—DuPont's new, effective crabgrass preventer that allows you to seed the same day if you are not seeding. You can get one containing Dathal, which is also very effective. But if you need to do any seeding, be sure to use the Tupersan product. It is sometimes harmful to Bermuda grass, so if you have Bermuda, be careful.

If your lawn needs raking, be sure to do it before you apply the crabgrass preventer. The new crabgrass preventers form a tiny invisible film over your lawn. Any raking will break this blanket and allow crabgrass to creep in.

SEEDING - If you have bare spots, be sure to re-seed them now. You should have really done it last fall, for fall is a much better time to seed. If you did not, however, be sure to seed the thin and bare spots at once. Delaying means the seed is less likely to germinate.

As to variety of grass, there are several mixtures blended for this area by local seedsmen. We have found that one of two turf combinations are best—either an old Kentucky 31 fescue lawn or a combination of Bermuda in the summer and rye in the winter.

Kentucky 31 is a thrifty grass; grows well in shade and stays green all winter. It does sometimes not do as well in full sun.

If you have very little shade, we recommend Bermuda in full sun, because you are eventually going to get it anyway. You can seed Bermuda now, although it does not germinate until the weather warms up considerably. Either hulled or unhulled seed is available. If you seed now, unhulled seed costs less and is just as good. Later on, be sure to buy the hulled seed.

More lawn building tips next week. These are the things you should be doing in March.

Council Announces Plans for Luncheon

The annual luncheon of the Council of Garden Clubs of Virginia Beach and Surrounding Area will be held on May 29 at the Ocean Heath Restaurant. Tickets will be sold in advance only.

The business meeting will begin at 10:30 a.m., followed by lunch at noon, it was announced at the March council meeting.

Mrs. M.J. Schwartz, general chairman of the recent council flower show, said that a full report on the show could not be given until next month. However, Mrs. Schwartz called the show a "tremendous success." She received a standing vote of thanks from the women at the meeting.

Mrs. Donald L. Edwards, arbor month chairman, reported that 279 trees had been planted in February with Bow Creek Garden Club leading with 269 crane myrtles. She said all reports are not in yet.

Mrs. E.A. Hoffmeister, beautification chairman, said that Bay Colony Garden Club has donated 16 crane myrtles to honor past presidents.

Mrs. G.L. Tilbrook, hospital beautification chairman, reported that Bay Colony Garden Club has contributed $100 toward hospital beautification. She also said that about 100 pine seedlings had been moved permanent "homes" along the emergency entrance drive.

Garden Personals

Now is the time to plant. The Virginia Beach area has many good nurseries, who will either plant shrubs for you or give you instructions on how to do it yourself. Some of the best are Cavalier Nursery at Hilltop, Accredale Nursery on Kempsville Road, Harrison's Nursery on Virginia Beach Blvd., Whitehurst-Corbett on Virginia Beach Blvd., Edmonds Corner Drive-In Nursery in Chesapeake, Garden Fair on the Military Highway, Winn Nursery in Norfolk and Coleman's in Portsmouth. Also, Fuel Feed in downtown Virginia Beach and at the Plaza sell potted shrubs for planting yourself. Visit any of these nurseries this weekend. It is the ideal time to put out trees and shrubs.

Company coming to dinner? You'll want to impress them. But think twice before serving rib roast or filet mignon. Consider a less tender choice, economical and just as impressive our LONDON BROIL.

For six, you need a 3-pound round steak, 1" to 1 1/2" thick. Sprinkle both sides with meat tenderizer (do not salt). Pierce all surfaces at one-inch intervals with a fork, cover and refrigerate overnight. Then broil. For a rare steak place on rack in broiler pan 3" to 4" from source of heat. Broil for about 10 minutes; turn and broil for about 8 minutes. For medium doneness, place broiler pan 5" to 6" from source of heat. Broil for about 12 minutes; turn and broil about 10 minutes.

While steak broils prepare the following sauce. In a saucepan combine 1/2 cup beef bouillon, 1 cup dry white wine, one 4-ounce stick of butter, 3 tbsp. lemon juice and 1/2 tsp. ground pepper. (If you wish to omit the wine, substitute 1 cup bouillon and increase the lemon juice to 6 tbsp.) Bring to boil and simmer. Cook until butter is melted. Just before serving add 1/2 cup minced parsley and 1/2 cup chopped chives. Now your steak is ready to carve. Cut steak in diagonal slices at about a 30° angle. Serve steak on a warm platter and sauce in a gravy boat. Serve together.

The cost of this creative, thrifty dish will be anywhere from $3 to $4, depending on what you pay for round steak. And the cost of electricity is less than 2¢. Quite a bargain, electricity. Even better than round steak.

'Some Men Stand Out in a Crowd'

By Jack Harris
VIRGINIA BEACH SUN General Manager and Executive Director

There is always one who stands out among the crowd... Stan Musial in baseball, Billy Graham, the Evangelist, Howard Hughes of the business world.

Just recently it was our pleasure to meet such a man, Cdr. Glenn E. Kollmann. This man was one of the most devoted I have ever met... A happy husband, a proud father and a dedicated American, fighting for his country as the Skipper of the VA 35 "Black Panther" carrier squadron.

We met Cdr. Kollmann in January of this year aboard the aircraft carrier USS Enterprise, The Enterprise was carrying this reporter, along with 14 other newsmen to Pearl Harbor. Kollmann was headed for Vietnam. It was his second time around.

When the skipper of the Black Panther learned that I was aboard and from Virginia Beach, he went out of his way to make our trip most enjoyable and productive. It was natural.

In a squadron, supported by a mechanical crew that "kept them flying day and night."

The enthusiasm of this man was contagious. During the four-day ride on the Enterprise I never missed an opportunity to talk with Kollmann. We discussed many things, ranging from his beloved A6A Intruder jet, the end of the war and finally, retirement.

Kollmann, rightly so, was proud of his accomplishments during his initial tour in Vietnam; 98 logged missions; a Distinguished Flying Cross and a record of bringing his squadron back intact can make a man feel good.

Just before leaving the ship at Pearl Harbor I asked the skipper to pose with me beside his jet bomber. It would be a good companion shot to go with the story I was writing about my trip. Besides his family and his many friends at Oceana jet base would probably appreciate it.

I will never forget the circumstances surrounding the picture. Cdr. Kollmann, along with this reporter and an official navy photographer walked up some six flights of narrow stairways to reach the Enterprise flight deck. The skipper was attired in "off duty" clothes. As the photographer started making different shots, Kollmann asked if I would rather have him pose in regular "fighting" gear. "No trouble," he said, "besides I think it will make a better picture."

Down six flights of stairs, 10 minutes to put on a 40-pound flying gear and back up six flights to the plane. No trouble, my foot! But that's the kind of a good Joe the skipper was. We ran that picture in the Sun and I'm now thinking it is worthy of a re-run.

LT. John Griffith rode side saddle with Kollmann in their A6A Intruder. Griffith, in addition to being a top notch professional airman, was a very talented newsman. Since departing the Enterprise last January I have received many stories written by "Griff" on his favorite subject, the exploits of the Black Panther squadron and the man he idolized most of all, the Skipper! Last week The SUN featured one of Griffith's articles and I would like to quote a remark attributed to Cdr. Kollmann. Few people know that a Navy flyer, at his request, can be relieved of flying duties. In a sense, every flyer in Vietnam is a volunteer.

When Cdr. Kollmann was asked that inevitable "why" he answered, "My reasons are simple. They are my moral obligation and commitment to our nation. I identify myself with the obligations of the United States to honor its commitments with foreign nations all over the world. To me, my duty here is as natural and normal as accepting the responsibility of caring for my wife and children."

We are also glad that we used this particular story in the Virginia Beach Sun. Cdr. Glenn E. Kollmann and Lt. John C. Griffith a few days after the story was written gave their lives for the country they loved, three miles out from takeoff, enroute to target. Some men stand out in a crowd. The fighting skipper of the Black Panthers was such a man.

Indians Would Have Found Out

Despite public opinion to the contrary, there is no evidence of any escape tunnel under the Adam Thoroughgood House.

"We had an interesting time but found absolutely nothing," commented Mrs. W.T. Lindemann, otherwise known as Sarah Thoroughgood to visitors to the house.

The search was made during a recent closing of the house to the public for repairs. It will open again April 1.

"We searched every possible area under the parlor," said Mrs. Lindemann. "The architect who did the original restoration said there was no indication of a tunnel, but we have been besieged by visitors, many from out of state, who insist there is one."

Mrs. Lindemann said an earlier hunt for a tunnel was made when the garden was restored. "We found a wine cellar, but that was all."

She said all the tourist "experts" seem to agree that the tunnel (if there is one) went from the house to the garden as an escape route from the Indians. She said it was mentioned in one historical book.

"But I don't believe there ever was a tunnel. For one thing, the Indians in this area were friendly. And, if a tunnel had been built, the Indians would have known about it."

Cdr. G.E. Kollmann

The home base of VA 35 is NAS Oceana. A large percentage of the squadron's families live in Virginia Beach. Cdr. Kollmann introduced me to his pilots and to members of the ground crew. He was a man of pride, flying the greatest jet bomber ever built, leading the finest pilots ever assembled

Campers Win Prize

Two Virginia Tech students were named winners of the eighth annual $5,000 Reynolds Aluminum Prize for Architectural Students for their design of an easy-to-carry "Inflatable Camper."

They are Charles R. Ansell, 23, of Virginia Beach, and John W. Bradford, 21, of Arlington. Both are fourth-year students in Virginia Tech's College of Architecture, and are the first Virginia students to win the national award.

Their "Inflatable Camper," made of aluminum-impregnated plastic, is designed to inflate into an eight-foot-high dome with a 10-foot diameter, complete with inflated floor. Both dome and floor are inflated with gas, produced by a simple chemical reaction.

The design also includes a "living kit," comprised of a pressurized water tank, sink, propane gas light and heat, cooking plate, cleaning system and disposal unit.

The entire unit, camper, floor and living kit, weighs only 50 pounds.

The winning design was announced by Reynolds Metals Company, sponsors of the prize, and the American Institute of Architects, which administers the prize-competition. The award is for the "best original architectural design in which creative use of aluminum is an important contributing factor."

The $5,000 prize will be presented during the AIA Convention in Portland, Ore., June 23-27. The cash award is divided equally between the college and the winning design team, with the stipulation that the students use the money for further architectural study or research.

Both Ansell and Bradford are experienced campers, and believe the design is commercially feasible. The inflatable dome design also may have other uses, such as migrant workers' housing units, the students suggest.

Ansell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Ansell of Dendron Drive.

Now that City Councilmen have officially had the new 1968-1969 Virginia Beach budget in hand for three days and have had it unofficially for a week, they have a number of questions to ask of City Manager W. Russell Hatchett and Finance Director Giles Dodd.

They get their chance to ask tonight at another informal meeting at the Bayside Police Precinct on Independence Boulevard. After the formal presentation at the regular Council meeting Monday, most Councilmen indicated they did not had time to study the document in detail, but those who had said they considered it a "tight budget," "well-drawn."

Council set a public hearing on the budget at the next regular meeting on April 8, at 2 p.m., and it is presumed that Councilmen and all interested parties will have a chance to wade fully through the inch-and-a-quarter thick document by that time.

That the $35.9 million budget set a new record, $7.5 million higher than last year, came as no surprise. That the school budget also set a new record, $4 million higher than last year, also came as no surprise. And that taxes were increased, 41.7 to 66.7 per cent, came only as a mild surprise. Only the rate raised a few eyebrows. The increase had been expected.

In presenting the budget to Council, Hatchett said, "We must remember we are building and developing out city and extending services over a short period of years comparable to the accomplishments of cities of such size which have been in the making for a hundred years or more."

He added that Virginia Beach has enjoyed a low real estate tax rate for many years, and that taxes still are comparable to other cities of the same size in the new budget. They will remain lower than other neighboring Tidewater cities.

Taxes on real estate are to be assessed on 60 per cent of true value now instead of the old 35 per cent, and a study is also underway that will undoubtedly raise the value of much real estate by January 1, 1969.

Debt service to the large bond issues floated in the past two years accounts for a large chunk of the new budget, as well as pay increases for all city employees, including a two-step increase for police, and the hiring of 100 new teachers. New police officers, 24 of them, will also be hired. The Department of Public Works shows a great increase to deal with all the new streets and service added in recent years.

Few departments show a decrease in expenditures in the new budget, and they are almost insignificant, when compared to the increases.

The school budget is "very tight," according to Supt. E. E. Brickell. But he said he is pleased with the $6,000 starting salary for new teachers next year. This is higher than Norfolk and the same as all other Tidewater cities. The maximum salary is $10,080, with most teachers setting much as $780 to $1,280 increase, far more than neighboring cities.

Extra pay steps and fringe benefits sought by the Virginia Beach Education Association were not put in the budget, but Brickell said he thought the budget was "adequate," with "no fat."

Brickell had earlier hoped to eliminate all secondary school supplementary fees, but noted that this would have cost $13,000 and was impossible this year. Elementary fees, totaling

Council Tackles Other Business

Besides formally receiving the giant-sized 1968-69 budget, Virginia Beach City Council moved swiftly Monday through a long and important docket. Although a few questions were raised, Council okayed the start of construction on a temporary charter boat marina at Rudee Inlet, presumably to be in operation this summer. The contract for the work was awarded to Hunt Construction Co., for $14,500, after the city negotiated an earlier bid down from $17,500. Originally the structure was estimated to be built for $10,000. A question was raised concerning how the bid was reduced so sharply but was not answered.

The other main question was whether the Erosion Commission will be able to finish the dredging of the Rudee channel in time for the facility to be useful this year. City Manager W. Russell Hatchett, said he had assurances that the channel would be finished in time, but that a guarantee was impossible working with the ocean. A spokesman for the Erosion Commission also confirmed Hatchett's remarks.

The construction was approved after Council changed zoning in the area to allow for a marina.

A request for campgrounds off Shore Drive and bordering Lake Smith was finally approved with numerous restrictions to guarantee no use of the lake by campers. A seven day limit was imposed on campers and no storage of camp trailers or the like was permitted. Councilmen reserved the right to revoke the zoning change for the campground if it becomes a traffic problem or if it becomes unsightly.

City Council's own request for a proposed amendment to the Subdivision law to eliminate re-subdivision in certain areas, was delayed for one month.

Council accepted the high bid of $40,000 for a 5-year rental of the city-owned marina on Long Creek. The contract went to Baystate Boats, Inc. The city has been operating the 50-slip marina since it opened last fall.

In other action, a public hearing was set for April 23 on Chesapeake and Northern Transportation Corp.'s application for permanent service to southern areas of the city it has been serving temporarily. Another public hearing was set on the same date for the city's proposed new building code. Contracts were awarded for installation of water lines and water mains from the Courthouse to Nimmo Church, along Great Neck Road from Virginia Beach Boulevard to First Col-

It's Ouch Time Again

Remember about a year ago when Virginia Beach had a mass immunization against tetanus? The lines were long at many schools, and the screams were loud from, well, a few of the kids anyway.

The clinics were sponsored jointly by the Virginia Beach Sertoma Club and the Virginia Beach Medical Society. Some 80,000 people in Tidewater received the first two shots. Now it's time for the third, or booster, shot to complete the series. Medical societies in the area have issued reminders for those immunized a year ago to see their doctor or local Public Health Department.

City Council Surprises Cox

Recently retired Virginia Beach School Supt. Frank W. Cox received still another honor Monday, this one from City Council.

Council adopted a resolution commending Cox and "thanking him for his magnificent achievements" in his 35 years with the Virginia Beach School System.

The resolution was read by City Manager W. Russell Hatchett and presented to Cox by Mayor Frank A. Dusch.

Cox expressed his appreciation to Council and noted that the resolution had taken him entirely by surprise because he was told to be at the Council meeting, but not told what for.

Brickell Predicts Changes

"I will have quite a few recommendations to make to the April meeting of the School Board," said Virginia Beach School Supt. E. E. Brickell. The report, while giving much credit to school officials for the job done in the past in a rapidly-growing area, said there was an overall need for revamping responsibility of top officials for increased effectiveness in the structure.

Overlap of responsibility was noted as the most glaring error. It was recommended that more definite and specific outlines be made for the officials. In addition, the report also called for the hiring of additional top men as the projected needs of the system over the next 10 years to as many as 80,000 students, almost triple the number now in school.

Brickell called the report a "good one," but said that any report of its kind "tends to the ideal" and he said that even the consultants knew that. He added that any report of this kind must deal with position, not personality.

Just what recommendations he will make, Brickell declined to say until the School Board was made aware of them, but he indicated he would follow the report rather closely.

Cockrell Named 'Man of Year'

E. R. "Dick" Cockrell, Virginia Beach Extension Agent, has been named the 1967 recipient of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce 2nd annual "Man of the Year in Agriculture" award.

Cockrell was selected by a special subcommittee of the Chamber's agriculture committee and was honored at a special dinner-meeting Tuesday night at the Holiday Inn of Virginia Beach on South Military Highway.

The 1967 winner was not announced ahead of time, and the selection of Cockrell came as a surprise to the approximately 30 Chamber members and guests at the banquet.

Chamber president Frank W. Kellam presented Cockrell a plaque and noted his many contributions to agriculture and agricultural interests in Virginia Beach and in the Tidewater area. Cockrell is also quite active in civic affairs and is president of the Virginia Beach Development Council.

The featured speaker of the evening was Dr. Wilson B. Bell, dean of agriculture at Virginia Polytechnic Institute in Blacksburg. City Councilman Curtis Payne, chairman of the agriculture committee, presided over the meeting.

Remarks were also made by the first recipient of the award last year, W. Clark Fleming, general manager of Bayville Farms, of Virginia Beach.

Dick Cockrell accepts the award from Frank Kellam.

City May Get 27-Hole Course

Indications now are that the proposed Virginia Beach Municipal Golf Course may be in operation by May or June of 1969.

Asst. City Manager Roger Scott told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN four architects, closely connected with better known courses in South Carolina and New Jersey, had been contacted as possible designers of the course. Scott identified these as George W. Cobb, Greenville, S.C.; Russell Breeden, Mauldin, S.C.; Ellis Maples, Whispering Pines, S.C.; and Robert T. Maples, Montclair, N. J.

According to Scott, two of the architects, Cobb and Breeden, came to Virginia Beach to inspect the proposed site of the future course and submitted written proposals for the course. Scott said, "Both men felt the site was an excellent one, which could accommodate an 18 hole championship course, plus another nine hole course for golfers who do not feel they are up to the demands of the longer, more taxing championship course lay-out." Both Cobb and Breeden felt the proposed site would be suitable for a 27 hole lay-out with both courses starting from a central location at the course club house.

Some concern was expressed earlier over several low spots in the site presenting a major drainage problem. When questioned about this, Scott replied, "Both men felt the site offered only a small drainage problem which could be overcome, apparently through the use of course water hazards."

As for the cost of the course construction, "ball park" estimates placed the figure at between $250,000 and $300,000. As for the next step in the program, Scott told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, "We'll discuss the matter with City Council members on Monday to get their feelings on how to proceed." No indication has been given as yet regarding the time of awarding a contract for construction of the course.

The Municipal Golf Course is planned for a 287 acre portion of Camp Pendleton donated to the city of Virginia Beach in the last General Assembly session, in a bill co-sponsored by Virginia Beach Delegates Kenneth Whitehurst, Jr. and B.R. Middleton, with the sanction of the Virginia National Guard and Maj. Gen. Paul M. Booth, Virginia Adjutant General.

Convention Bldg. Still in Turmoil

The matter of a new convention center in Virginia Beach to replace the obsolete Dome remains up in the air. The type of facility needed for the cultural and convention interests of the city seems fairly well determined, as several groups have agreed that a combination sports arena, auditorium and small theatre would be ideal.

The Virginia Beach Development Council has completed a report and sent it on to City Council for study, in which the above mentioned are included. The report would appear to concur with a preliminary report by Council's special committee after a tour of several southern convention centers recently. Councilman Lawrence Marshall noted at the time that a similar facility in Monroe, La., built at a cost of about $6 million, would fill the needs of the city well.

Since that time the committee has not met. One of the members, Albert Bonney, has been out of town but has now returned. The committee is expected to meet shortly and present its report to a full meeting of City Council.

Meanwhile controversy grows over the location of a new facility. Many interests want it in "the center of the city," near Pembroke Mall Shopping Center, while most motel and hotel operators in the resort area want it in the Beach Borough, although not necessarily as an addition to the present Dome. An area, to be filled and drained, off Laskin and Holly Roads, al-

Lights Help Solve Jams

Say, do you remember when there were only a couple of stoplights on Virginia Beach Boulevard? If you do, you've been around more than ten years. In the last decade a number of additional lights have had to be added to handle the traffic flow, but in the past year or so there has been more than the usual proliferation.

The most recent addition to the stoplight sweepstakes was turned on Monday at a place where a number of bad accidents had occurred. The light at Little Neck Road has been promised for some time. This was completed shortly after the addition of the lights at Rosemont Road and the new left-turn light at Plaza Trail, another site of numerous accidents in the past.

The poles are up for the last one for awhile, according to Reeves Johnson, chief of Traffic Safety Engineering. That one is at Lynn Shores Drive, entrance to Birchwood Gardens and the location of a large, new building materials store and warehouse.

"There are still more in the works," said Johnson, "but this should do it for the time being." The next one, according to Johnson, will probably be at Constitution Avenue, to govern traffic entering Pembroke East Shopping Center, now ensnared in a legal battle over land ownership of some previously closed streets. There is no time set for the start of construction of the center or the stoplight.

Trust Speedometer, Not Detector

There is an electronic device on the market in Virginia Beach for mounting on dashboards or sun visors to detect radar. The advice of Patrolman W.W. Taylor, traffic officer, is, "Forget it."

Taylor is the man who knows. He confiscated the little items last Thursday, the day before one turned up in the hands of a police officer in Norfolk.

First of all they are illegal. Mere possession of any type of radar-detecting device is punishable by a fine of up to $100. Secondly they are expensive. The price tag ranges from about $30 to $40, according to Taylor. Thirdly they are noisy. They set up a terrific static racket the driver must bear while he speeds. And last of all, they don't work.

The little monsters are set to one radar frequency. The trouble is all radar sets are not set to one frequency and if the set varies the slightest bit, it won't work anyway. Virginia Beach radar is the direct beam type. It can detect a speeding car before the detector detects radar. Radar sets get a speeder traveling in either direction. The little detector only handles one way.

Taylor and another traffic officer confiscated the gadget. It was ineffective in all 15 tests, Policemen ran a series of tests under all types of road conditions, according to Taylor. Even if it did buzz, radar had already been effective.

"It's also dangerous," said Taylor. "The driver has a false sense of security. First of all, he's breaking the law by speeding, but he is also confident about it, while he's making it dangerous on the other driver."

Within a few feet of a given radar set, the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN determined that the detector does indeed work, but 30 feet away, all that could be heard was a mass of static, and radar would have been more than effective by that time.

Taylor said he knows of several that have been sold, but that he is not going out to look for them. He said he is hopeful the owners of the detectors will realize they own a useless piece of equipment and get it off their cars before they are found.

"We usually find the things when we stop someone on another violation," said Taylor. He added that the one last week was found after the driver was stopped for speeding, through radar.

"The simplest way to beat radar is to watch your speedometer."

Every Little Bit Helps 'Trash Mountain' Grow

If you would like to see the amphitheater scheduled to be built in Virginia Beach finished before May 1970, there is only one thing to do. Throw out more garbage.

It's kind of hard to believe, but the city of Virginia Beach has just released the results of a report that has to be called unique. The only way to find out how long it will take to gather enough garbage together to fill up the garbage disposal area off Bonney Road near Independence Boulevard enough for the amphitheater to be ready was to take a survey, yes a survey, of garbage. And this survey of garbage turned up some rather startling facts.

On a given route in the city on a given collection day a single truck picked up 7,960 pounds of garbage, including, that is, the weight of the cans. This represented a total of 367 residential stops, averaging about 25 seconds per stop for a total of 155 minutes. In this time the collectors serviced 737 garbage cans of the 331 owned by the residents. Seems a few folks were remiss in putting out the garbage that day, (79% of the cans owned were by the curb). Then 3,020 pounds of materials were separated from the cans.

While the collectors were doing the heavy work, a survey team checked out the residents. Seems that on this given route in the Princess Anne Plaza area there are 1,522 people 796 of those children and 726 adults. And 72 of those homes have garbage disposals, so think of the amount "trash mountain" might be increased if that amount were not lost in the sewers.

The next part of the survey must have been the worst to take. The materials had to be separated and weighed. Here is the breakdown: Paper, 820 pounds (17.2 per cent); Glass, 400 pounds (13.2 per cent); Garbage, 1,020 pounds (33.3 per cent); Rags, 80 pounds (2.6 per cent); Plastics, 60 pounds (2.0 per cent); and Other (including rubble), 120 pounds (4.0 per cent).

Further broken down that comes out to 5.22 pounds of garbage per person, per collection per household. How about that? That's 21.92 pounds per household with each garbage can weighing in at 10.8 pounds with each household having 2.56 cans.

Incidentally it took five minutes per household, including transportation time to gather that interesting data.

Over a period of 24 days, from Oct. 16, 1967, through Nov. 11, 1967, the city collected 11,375,515 pounds of garbage of all kinds. All that added to the hill already under construction for about a year changed the volume by 9,953,82 cubic yards, according to the survey.

along, we'll go along with this one. We are not about to undertake an individual survey.

The idea of building an amphitheater on the site is novel. It began in Virginia Beach, received national acclaim and a promise of federal aid and is now being studied in several other places.

The site is just south of the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway between the Rosemont Road and Independence Boulevard exits. You can tell when you get there by the abundance of seagulls who have found a free meal.

The garbage is dumped. Dirt and deodorizing materials are bulldozed over it, and "trash mountain" piles up. Eventually the seagulls will have to go. There'll be a scenic outdoor theatre by a man-made lake that will never tell its low, earthly beginnings. It all goes to show, no doubt, that with a little ingenuity, one can build something on any premise...even if the premise is nothing but a lot of garbage to begin with.

Commission 'Attacks' Laskin Rd.

The Virginia Beach Beautification Commission, at its March 14 meeting, set a date for its annual meeting, May 16, at the Captain's Table at the Cavalier Hotel. One guest speaker for the evening has already been scheduled—a representative from the United States Brewers' Association, who is expected to discuss ways of discouraging littering with his association's product's containers.

The Commission also unanimously adopted a resolution requesting the City Council to pass as stringent anti-litter laws as possible, on the recommendation of the city's attorneys.

Commission president E.S. Ruffin reported that he had received a booklet of model litter laws from the Keep America Beautiful, Inc. offices at New York.

sion heard a lengthy discussion concerning an unsightly stretch of Laskin Road, some five or six blocks from Atlantic Avenue, according to superintendent of landscaping for highways, streets and bridges Richard F. Humphries. The area which has been used for sewage disposal, said Humphries, is now covered over with marsh grass.

Two plants Humphries and Easter mentioned as possibilities for the screen they will plant along that part of Laskin were Chinese Holly and Wax myrtle.

Commission vice pres. Sims Reed made a motion to leave the problem in the hands of Humphries and Elgia Easter, horticulturalist with the University of Virginia extension at Princess Anne. The motion carried.

Reed also reported on the spring planting of portulaca throughout the city which had been proposed at the last Beautification Commission meeting. He addressed the Virginia Beach Council of Garden Clubs March 13, and received their complete cooperation in the project.

It was reported that city manager Russell Hatchett, at a Feb. 6 meeting with Commission representatives, assured the Commission that no more city garbage cans will be painted orange; they will be painted green. Hatchett informed the Commission that the city has purchased a tractor attachment for edging curbs and sidewalks. He could give no definite word on whether or not billboards will be allowed on the new Virginia Beach-Norfolk toll road, but said that the city will take the Commission's disapproval of any such display advertising into consideration if a billboard permit is requested.

Units Set to Train

Approximately 7,000 Army Reservists and National Guardsmen will train for two weeks active duty at Ft. Eustis and Ft. Story from May 19 to Sept. 7 this year.

Fifty-two units from home stations ranging from Maine to Texas are scheduled to train at the Army's Transportation Center. All of the units are responsible for specialized transportation missions such as terminal, boat, railway and amphibious vehicle maintenance and operations. Ft. Eustis and Ft. Story were selected as training sites because of geographic advantages and specialized transportation facilities and guardsmen.

More than 2,000 additional soldiers will undergo two weeks active training this year than last. The number of units is also up from 40 in 1967. The 587th Transportation Company Platoon from Chincoteague, Va. The 151st, which operates and maintains the LARC LX, an amphibious vehicle, will train at Ft. Story.

Most of the units will train at Ft. Eustis with only 11, numbering less than 700 men, scheduled for Ft. Story.

P.O. Gets Bond Award

Virginia Beach Postmaster Joe T. Crosswhite attended a luncheon and awards ceremony Monday at Naval Air Station, Norfolk, to accept the second consecutive Minute Man Award for the Beach postal system.

Presented by Deputy Assistant Postmaster General Frederick C. Belen, the Minute Man Award—a blue flag flown immediately below the Stars and Bars—is in recognition of Virginia Post Office personnel having averaged 90 per cent in the purchase of U.S. Savings Bonds over the past two years.

Postal service regional director Alvin C. Webb was on hand for the ceremonies, at which Portsmouth also received a Minute Man Award.

Sun Review

Cavalier Play Is 'Ho-Hum'

There have been some successful two-character plays, notably "The Forpstruper," "Two for the Seamus" and even "The Owl and the Pussycat" more recently. The Cavalier Playhouse is now displaying a far less successful play with the unlikely and "cute" name of "Paterpat," so named for its only two characters, Peter and Pat.

It is a sometimes amusing, sometimes mundane and sometimes too-close-to-home dialogue between two married folk in some rather usual or fairly unusual adventures and misadventures.

One may ask, "Can a play which opens with a boring dialogue proving that an unmarried, kept woman (kept three years) has goofed and is pregnant and then proceeds to the next scene in which we see her fresh from a large wedding forced to rush to the labor room on her wedding night be all bad? The answer is entirely up to the audience.

And as far as we are concerned, if Cavalier continues to present this type of drivel and trite nonsense for the sake of getting a laugh out of sex, the audiences are going to be hard to come by. It's not really that the play is so bad. It is just not too good, and too Ho-Hum.

The action covers several years. Curiously neither the set, the furniture nor the actors age at all. The same whiskey bottle even appears for several years. The set changes, incidentally, are accomplished quickly and smoothly. Harry Cauley, who plays Peter, is a funny guy. He plays well the put-upon fellow, but overdoes the underplays in this one in his usual manner so that he appears almost bored throughout. Underplay is usually funny, but carried to extreme as Cauley does in this one, it comes off badly.

Nancy Chesney plays Pat, and struggles valiantly through the dialogue to keep a fast pace going. She does about as good a job as can be done. The play, directed by Cauley, also tries some broad slapstick, which gets a few relieved laughs from the audience. But the slapstick for the sake of slapstick just doesn't come off.

All this doesn't mean the play isn't worth seeing. For a playgoer who wants to see a couple of hours of reasonably funny material and doesn't want to have to think at all, this is it. But both Cavalier and Cauley can do better. HJL

Vepco Warns Kite Fliers

The roaring lion of March is preparing strong winds which are ideal for kite flying. Children throughout the area eagerly await this windy month to send their kites soaring.

Kite flying can be one of the happiest pastimes for youngsters, but as in every other sport, there are rules to be observed to make it safe. Virginia Electric and Power Company has these suggestions for its young kite flying friends:

1. Always use dry string, wood and paper in your kite...not wire or metal.
2. Always fly your kite on days when there is no rain.
3. Always avoid busy streets and highways while flying your kite.
4. Always fly your kite away from TV and radio aerials, electric or power lines.
5. Always keep away from fallen wires.
6. Always call your power company if your kite gets snagged in a power line.

700 More Apartments Crowd Planning Docket

The City Planning Commission faces a long 24-item docket at its next public hearing on April 9 at 2 p.m. in the new Municipal Court building.

Five of the zoning matters deal with apartments and townhouses, some 800 of them. More than 700 are apartment units in all sections of the city. At the last meeting the commission also heard requests for more than 500 new apartment units.

In the upcoming meeting, Lynbrook Corp. seeks a use permit to build 70 townhouses near Pontiac and Chickadee Roads in the Arrowhead area, and another for 25 more near Cheyenne and Comanche Roads in the same area.

The largest single apartment complex request to be heard is a change of zoning and use permit for 346 apartments adjacent to the existing Regency Apartments in the Hilltop area. The next largest request is for 224 units near Old Great Neck Road and Reagan Drive near London Bridge.

Other apartment requests include 106 units near the General Hospital of Virginia Beach off First Colonial Road and Will-O-Wisp Drive. Another 27 units are involved in a zoning change and use permit in Bird-neck Village.

Probably the largest single request to come before the commission at its next meeting involves rezoning of property in the Lake Rudee-Harbour Point area by the Lighthouse Corporation to build a 200-

Police Are Continuing Drug Fight

Further steps are being taken to enable authorities to deal more effectively with persons who may participate in any future attempts to move narcotics or other illegal drugs through the city of Virginia Beach.

Lt. Henry Capps, director of the Police Division's Youth Bureau, told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN: "I'm going to the city attorney within the next several days in hopes of getting more local ordinances passed to enable us to more effectively discourage trafficking and use of drugs within the city of Virginia Beach."

Meanwhile police continue their surveillance of the city in efforts to halt the movement of marijuana, amphetamines, drugs, in the region. The continuing investigation has resulted in the charging of two more juveniles with being incorrigible under existing statutes.

Lt. Capps said the juveniles, students at Bayside High School, were charged in regards to the dispensing and receiving of drugs classified as barbiturates and amphetamines. Capps told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN a 15-year-old allegedly supplied drugs to a 16-year-old who fell into a 24-hour sleep after taking several pills at school. A court appearance is scheduled Monday in Juvenile & Domestic Relations Court for the two juveniles.

ready owned partly by the city, has also been suggested.

A third site is on a 15-acre tract owned by developer David I. Levine on Shore Drive near Great Neck Road. Levine has offered to donate the site to the city with water and sewer lines.

Although his offer is still under study, some sources have said privately that the tract is not large enough and is too far from the resort area. Levine also hopes to build that area into a motel and hotel resort mecca.

There is speculation that a positive move toward a new convention center will come possibly this year, although location still seems to be the problem.

On the matter of a sports stadium, the Virginia Beach Development Council is currently studying the feasibility of one or more cities building it. Again the Council is ignoring the location problem. At the same time, City Council's special committee is studying the stadium need also. A similar one to that in Memphis is being discussed by Marshall. In addition a group of private individuals are studying the feasibility of a four-city stadium for Norfolk, Portsmouth, Chesapeake and Virginia Beach. Two men from Virginia Beach serve that group.

The 1968 session of the Virginia General Assembly passed a bill creating a stadium authority, although there is already some question as to how the facility could be financed. Authorities most often sell bonds, and there is doubt that bonds can be sold in a facility that is not likely to make money or break even.

No one will say for sure, but a site in Virginia Beach or Chesapeake near the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway and Interstates 264 and 64 seems to get most nods of approval so far. If other cities enter into the project, there is the accessibility factor and the no-fall factor to be considered.

Committee Named

The committee has been named, and sometime next week the members may be seeking the signatures of qualified voters on a petition calling for a referendum on the local option liquor-by-the-drink question for Virginia Beach.

The combined Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce-Virginia Beach Jaycee committee will be chaired by Richard D. Guy, Chamber representatives, besides Guy, include W. Clark Fleming, James P. Sadler, B. M. Stanton, Charles H. Forbes, Jr. and Bailey Parker.

Jaycee representatives will be Linwood Benton, Sam Scott, Beau Outlaw, Vic Simiele, John Perry and Dr. Harvey Shiflet. The announcement of the formation of the committee was made jointly by Frank Kellam, president of the Chamber and Bob Stanton, president of the Jaycees.

About 3,500 names are needed on the petition to call for a referendum, but the committee has indicated it will seek as many names as possible. There is a possibility that the vote may come in September, although the referendum may yet be held in conjunction with the November General Election.

It was noted that it was appropriate that the Chamber and Jaycees should work closely on the matter and that since Virginia Beach has for so long been an advocate of the referendum the city should take the initiative.

"Virginia Beach, which has long sought the right to hold this referendum, should be the first to take positive action to make the referendum a reality," said Guy.

He added that he thought the question will be overwhelmingly passed by the voters in Virginia Beach if everyone voted. He said voter apathy could, as always, be a problem.

Guy also said the main work of the committee will be to gather the names on the petition, and pointed out that the two organizations were merely providing leadership in the drive.

The committee has not yet met formally, but plans to meet soon to formulate concrete plans for the campaign.

TAHB Meets

Kevin E. Keegan, Agency Manager of the Philadelphia Regional Office of the Federal National Mortgage Association was the guest speaker at the Tidewater Association of Home Builders membership meeting, Tuesday, March 26 at the Bow Creek Golf and Country Club.

He spoke on FNMA's present operations and pending Federal legislation which may affect their activities. Keegan is a native of Connecticut and a graduate of Georgetown University with B.S. and LL.B. degrees. He has held his present post since Aug. 1965 and has been with FNMA since Sept. 1950.

Equipment Poses Problem

The question of where to park a boat or store a trailer may be partly settled at a public meeting Tuesday evening, April 2.

The hearing, which will air the preliminary draft of an ordinance establishing new regulations for storage of recreation equipment and trailers within the city, will be presented at 7:30 p.m. in the new Municipal Court building at Princess Anne.

The ordinance is a "middle ground" attempt to solve the parking and storage problems of campers, camping trailers, boats and boat trailers, according to Stanley Phillips, assistant city attorney. He said the new ordinance is "equitable to both sides."

In recent years there have been growing complaints about camping trailers being parked or stored on streets or in driveways. An existing ordinance which prohibits storage of any type of trailer on a city street has not been enforced.

As the direct result of the complaints, Phillips drew the new ordinance after working with those wanting new restrictions and the campers. If the new ordinance is approved at the public meeting, it will be sent to Council for hearing and approval.

Eat Chicken, Aid Boy

If you are one of those who likes "chicken every Sunday," this coming Sunday, March 31, is a good day to prove it and at the same time be helping a handicapped boy.

The five Kentucky Fried Chicken stores in the Tidewater area will contribute 50 cents of the price of each "bucket" or "barrel" of chicken sold that day to the relief of a Norfolk boy, severely injured in January, according to the president of the company, J.V. Robinson, of Virginia Beach.

The 15-year-old Negro youth, Frank Caffee, lost his leg when he was "bumped" against a wall by a car in which it was reported two other boys were riding at the time of the accident on a major city street. The car allegedly was stolen. The Lake Taylor Junior High School student is one of a large family. His mother is ill, and his father reportedly does not live with the family.

One of his older brothers, Isiah, is employed as a cook in the Portsmouth Kentucky Fried Chicken establishment. "The family is of meager circumstances, to say the least," said Robinson. "And this accident has hit them hard."

A fund to help pay the medical expenses of the youth was started by his classmates and by Frank Tuso, father of the student government president at Lake Taylor Junior High, and now contains about $300, according to Robinson. The money given from sales Sunday at the five stores will be contributed to the fund.

Direct contributions may be made to the fund by writing the Frank Caffee Fund, P.O. Box 14402, Norfolk, Va. Robinson said he is hopeful of a "good day" Sunday, so that a maximum amount can be contributed to the worthy cause.

Budget

$130,000 have already been eliminated.

The illustrations with this story show the amounts and percentages of revenues and expenditures estimated in the new balanced budget.

The large increases in real estate taxes will cause many house payments in Virginia Beach to rise sharply. For instance, the owner of a $20,000 house in Lynnhaven borough will find his taxes up by about $100. Other areas will find similar increases.

In defending the tax hike, Mitchell said, "We now must make the effort financially based on realistic real estate assessments in order to provide funds to keep our city moving ahead, rendering ever greater service to our people and building for a better tomorrow."

The budget is expected to receive some criticism at the public hearing but is also expected to pass virtually unscathed at the April 22 meeting of City Council.

Travel Writers Plan Two-Day Meeting

Virginia Beach plays host this weekend to the Mid-Atlantic chapter of the Society of American Travel Writers. About 60 writers and their families will attend the two-day conference Friday and Saturday before the group moves on to a tour of Williamsburg on Sunday.

The Society is made up of travel writers and editors from all over America and Canada. The Mid-Atlantic chapter extends from Pennsylvania through Virginia. The president of the chapter is Mrs. Carolyn Bennett Patterson, travel editor of National Geographic Magazine, of Washington D.C.

The chairman of the organization, Bob Kane, travel writer for Doubleday and "Cue" magazine will also attend the meeting, as will the outgoing president, Kermit Holt, travel editor of the "Chicago Tribune."

U. S. District Judge Richard Kellam of Virginia Beach will present Holt with a plaque symbolizing the first landing of English settlers in America at Cape Henry on land that is now a part of Fort Story. The award is known as the Sir George Percy Award.

Sir George Percy was, according to history, the man who came ashore at Cape Henry in 1607 and explored the territory before Captain John Smith's band moved on to Jamestown. The current symbol of office of the Society of American Travel Writers, as suggested by Kellam some years ago, is a shallop, or longboat, such as the one Percy came ashore in.

Special guests at the weekend conference will be the Austrian Ambassador Dr. Ernst Linberger and his family. The Austrian government and Linberger will host a meeting of the society in Vienna in October for 13 days.

Bonus Plan Has Seen Its Day

A much-heralded plan that was supposed to give a shot in the arm to the ailing Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel has failed and will be dropped May 15.

The "travel bonus" books entitling span travelers to discounts in participating restaurants, service stations, gift shops and tourist attractions, were given by the toll takers to motorists going in either direction beginning last April 15, marking the third birthday of the facility. They will still be good until 30 days after the end of the plan.

New Boy Scout Head

Executive Has Varied Background

The first night the Gomer Jones family moved into their home in Arlington, they were awakened by tom-toms and looked out the windows to see Indians dancing to the light of the moon in an adjoining back yard.

Life in Virginia Beach's Thoroughgood area may be more quiet, but the Joneses think they're going to like it fine.

Long-time Virginia Beachers of almost two weeks now, the Jones family moved to the Beach when Jones assumed his new duties as head of the Tidewater Council of Boy Scouts, including Virginia Beach, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Chesapeake and seven counties in North Carolina.

In Washington, Jones had served as Deputy Scout Executive for a district including 17 Virginia counties, seven in Maryland and Washington D. C. The neighbor with the tom-tom beating friends, Indian representation to the U.S. Health Association, was only one of the fascinating things about Washington for the Joneses.

Jones was vice-chairman of the committee that arranged the inauguration of John F. Kennedy, and later served as executive vice-chairman of the Johnson inauguration committee.

In spite of the excitement of living in a cosmopolitan city like Washington, still Jones said that he has "to look up from my desk every once in awhile to realize that I'm not in the same job."

Of his plans for the Scouting program in Tidewater, Jones said that he would like to see one in every three boys involved, rather than the "one in four we have now. We know we can get the boys; what we need is adults to be scout masters." Jones will be working primarily with the adult leadership rather than the Scouts themselves, and he said that the caliber of the existing scout masters has resulted in a fine scouting program for this area. "All we need is more men."

Jones, who has been in scouting since he was ten years old, was assigned by the Army to reorganize the Filipino Boy Scouts. "I just can't get away from it," he laughed.

The three Jones children, Peggy, 11, Bob, 19, and Kathy

Lee, 16, have been involved in scouting at one time or another. Bob made Eagle Scout, the highest rank in scouting.

Bob, a sophomore at Virginia Tech, came home Christmas to Arlington, and came home last week for the Easter break to Virginia Beach. "The move was the easiest for him of anyone," said Mrs. Jones.

The move to Virginia Beach was something of a homecoming for the Joneses. "On our first night here," said Jones, "one of the neighbors came and brought us 'big-a-blankeet,' a Slovak dish neither of us has had since we left Wilkes-Barre," the Pennsylvania town that Mr. and Mrs. Jones both came from.

As it turned out, the next-door neighbor was also a native of Wilkes-Barre. And a few doors down the street lives a boy who went to school with Kathy in the fourth grade in Arlington.

Which says something about the size of the world, or the number of people in it that the Joneses know.

Command Change At Dam Neck

Capt. Stuart T. Sadler will assume duties as Commanding Officer of the Fleet Anti-Air Warfare Training Center at Dam Neck, Virginia Beach tomorrow afternoon. Capt. Sadler, formerly chief of staff for Cruiser Destroyer Flotilla 8, homeported at Norfolk, will relieve Capt. W.N. Homer in a 2:30 p.m. ceremony in front of the Administration Building at the Center. Adm. J.S. Coye, Commander U.S. Atlantic Fleet Training Command will officiate during the ceremony. Capt. Green Run Works on 1st Designs

The Green Run planned unit housing development, approved by City Council and the City Planning Commission earlier this month, is moving closer to the unveiling of final plans and house models.

"We should have renderings of the first models within the next 30 to 40 days," said Ferebee. "However, this doesn't mean we'll be quite ready to make them public then."

In the meantime, final financing is also being arranged, according to Ferebee. He said in about 60 days the housing development, first of its kind in Virginia, may be nearing primary construction.

The development will be built in three phases, each having private homes, apartments, townhouses, a school and a commercial area, as well as a large commercial area on the perimeter.

The first phase will be entered from Lynnhaven and Holland Roads. The 1,000-acre tract stretches from Holland Road to Princess Anne Road.

Jaycees Pick Jerry Deviney

Jerry R. Deviney, a 28-year old teacher at Frank W. Cox High School, was awarded the Virginia Beach Jaycees "Young Educator of the Year Award" during a special assembly at Cox Monday morning, March 25. Deviney strode on stage to receive his award from Phillip Wade, chairman of the Jaycees Award Committee, accompanied by a burst of applause and cheers and a standing ovation from the Cox student body.

Obviously a popular teacher, Deviney has been instrumental in introducing several new programs at Cox. As the high school's S.C.A. sponsor, he was largely responsible for the two annual parades which the S.C.A. has organized at Virginia Beach in support of our men in Vietnam.

In 1965, under Deviney's leadership, the state S.C.A. conference was held at Cox, the first time the conference had been held at Virginia Beach.

Deviney has been one of the chief supporters of the Domestic Exchange program with Hershey, Pa. The program is built around the visit of 30 Hershey students to Cox for a period of one week. In return, Cox students travel to Hershey for one week, as an "experience in living."

In the summer of 1967, again with thanks largely due to De-

Deviney, in addition to his other activities, coaches the junior varsity basketball team, and has led the team to its highest record for a season—11-7—in its short history.

PA Names Delegates

They are: juniors Linda Wilkins, Susan Marshall and Charlene Wulser. Alternates are Helen Spence and Tom Cooper.

ber of the State Executive Council of the State Student Cooperative Association for 1968-69.

Don is parliamentarian of the Princess Anne SCA and hopes to run for the office of president for the 1968-69 school year.

The purpose of the State SCA convention is to permit each school SCA to see how other SCAs handle their problems and to discuss new ways to solve them.

During her stay here Perla lived at the home of senior Kathy Wright. Last summer Kathy visited Peru as her part in the foreign exchange program.

The Princess Anne Cavalier Band received three superior ratings in the March 11-12 Band Festival Princess Anne High hosted.

In a grade five category,

Princess Anne received a district rating of one, of the highest available, for her work. This and her other two ratings were based on three selections that each band must play: a warm-up number selected by the judges and two selections by the director.

The Cavalier Band played 'Coat of Arms,' 'Dedication Overture,' and 'First Suite in E flat for Military Bands' (1st and 2nd movements).

For the third straight year the Princess Anne High School newspaper, the PAGE, won a first place award at the 44th Annual Columbia Scholastic Press Association convention held at Columbia University, New York City, March 14-16.

Bids Set For School

April will be contracts let for at least one more new school in Virginia Beach and for additions to two more.

Ernest Stone, construction supervisor for the school system, says the bids will be opened April 11 for the new elementary school in the Windsor Woods area. Estimates call for a total cost, including land and equipment of about $887,000, however all estimates for the schools already bid recently have been high. Stone says he is happy about this.

Additions to Malibu and Lynnhaven Schools will be started shortly after bids are opened on April 2 and 4. Additions to Trantwood, Pembroke and Kempsville elementary schools are also scheduled to be completed by this fall term. The cost of each addition is put at about $80,000 including equipping the new rooms.

All of the new schools were approved in the $14.5 school bond issue in January. The bonds are now being financed by tax increases in the city.

Tighten The Belts

It must have been extremely difficult for City Manager W. Russell Hatchett to recommend such sharp tax increases in his new budget, particularly since this is his last budget before retiring, and since he has always been quick to boast about the low tax rate in Virginia Beach.

But reality being what it is, he had no choice. Although the state of Virginia provides a large portion of funds in the budget, it is still not enough to serve the special needs of such a fast-growing area, beset with terrific growing pains.

The tax increase was the only way to balance the budget and to meet the pressing needs of services and to cover the already passed bond issues for schools and other improvements. And it must be recognized that the taxes still will be lower than those of our neighbors and lower than many other cities of like size.

It Depends on What City

Within this week, two cases of teenagers charges with either possession or use of marijuana have been reported by newspapers in Norfolk, both fairly well hidden in miniscule items on inside pages. One even concerned "an incident at Norfolk High School". But the incident was not discussed and the item was published six days later.

In the other only a few lines discussed the shenanigans of a 16-year old, with no detail whatsoever.

Parents, Take Note

It's that time of year again when the weather warms up and the kids emerge from the wintry world that has kept them cooped up and their energies pent up. They run immediately into the middle of the streets to play in the path of vehicular traffic. And they ride their bicycles in all the wrong places endangering their own lives and the lives of others.

Please parents, take note, before there is a problem either with law enforcement officials or with injury or even death. Deal with this problem now.

The streets are not to play in. They are for cars. The city has gone to great lengths to provide recreational areas, which do not include the city streets, especially for the small fry on tricycles, completely unattended.

Bicycle traffic is subject to the identical traffic regulations as that of automobiles. Bike riders cannot ride on the wrong side of the street, darting in and out, two and three abreast and disobeying stop signs and stop lights legally. And if they do it they could very well end up dead.

There are more and more cars today than ever before,

Certainly the sharp hike will cause a tightening of the purse-strings of the homeowner a bit and no doubt will cause a bit of ire at the city fathers, but these are the same people who want all the best in city services. Now we have to pay for them.

It is unfortunate however, that the increase had to come all at once. It would have been so much better had it been possible to do this over a three-year period, beginning two years ago. Actually we have been living on borrowed time taxwise since that time. Now we pay.

The budget appears to be a good one, realistically and tightly drawn, and one that will definitely serve our needs in the coming year, however barely.

We only hope that other avenues can be opened by next year this time so that we do not face another giant tax hike.

But lest we forget, these same newspapers opened fire with the big guns on use and possession of the same drug in Virginia Beach with stories on the front and second front pages. Certainly this was at the beginning of the probe, but a long item describing a new incident in Virginia Beach appeared yesterday in prominent place on the second front page.

but pity the driver even the most careful one, who hits one of the errant street players of reckless bike riders. He will pay forever for the child's mistake.

Please parents...

Smoking More?

An item released by the Agriculture Department crossed our desk which says that Americans smoked seven fewer cigarettes in 1967 than in 1966... only an average of 4,280 cigarettes or 214 packs per smoker. Cigarette smokers no doubt finally took heed to the warning on the packs that smoking could be harmful. But they just didn't pay too much attention to it.

Incidentally the overall consumption of cigarettes was up last year because of new smokers. Isn't that wonderful? They must not heed the pack warning either.

Then there's the poll that says 80 percent of teenagers who now smoke say they plan to quit someday. And 90 percent of them said they consider smoking harmful to health, as they puff away. Yet one teenaged boy in seven and one teenaged girl in 12 is a regular smoker.

In Appreciation

VIRGINIA BEACH SUN,
Mr. Jack Harris:

"Some Men Stand Out in a Crowd" with your by-line in the March 21, 1958 Virginia Beach Sun, was truly a fine tribute to Commander Glenn E. Kolman and Lieutenant John Griffith. Men of their caliber are the real backbone of today's Navy, and the loss of such devoted, capable and enthusiastic men is indeed a tragedy.

By your sympathetic handling of this article, it is evident that you were genuinely impressed with the quality of these men who are fighting for our country. I know that the families, friends and professional associates here at Oceana of these two fine officers are genuinely appreciative of your quite evidently heart felt remarks.

Please accept my personal 'Thank You' for a job well done.

Sincerely Yours,
A. K. Earnest
Captain, USN.

Guest Editorial

Something New in Richmond

The following guest editorial appeared in the official publication of the Virginia Municipal League and affiliated organizations. The City of Virginia Beach is a member of the Virginia Municipal League. Because of the timeliness of the subject it is reprinted here.

There is something very definitely new in the Old Dominion. The General Assembly is creating a new image, and the towns and cities of the Commonwealth may well take heart. But what is this new thing?

The average age of a legislator is 47. Ten years ago it was 50. Only six members were born in the 1800s. Twenty-three of the 140 members have been born since 1930. Thirty-three were born outside of Virginia. One is a Negro. Twenty House members (20 per cent) are Republicans. Six of the 40 Senators are Republicans (15 per cent). But the Republicans aren't obstructionists. They are quite solid citizens.

And the nice part of it all, is that the whole works is made up of Virginians, bent in general upon restoring the state to a place of leadership in the nation—a leadership that began fading after the Commonwealth had supplied the nation's presidents for 32 years of its first 36 years of existence.

Urban places may expect to occupy a higher place in the General Assembly's thinking as time goes on. Even the most rural of representatives are now experiencing the growth of urban places within their districts. And this will continue as Virginia continues to grow at a rate greater than that of the nation.

The legislators are better educated and better informed. They need more staff work, more intimate information. And they're moving to get that. The Planning Division of the Governor's Office, established only in 1956, will soon be providing all local officials with better data on which to base decisions. Roads are a-building everywhere, and other forms of communications are picking up.

All localities can pave the way to a better future by making sure they are doing their best for all citizens, and doing it with total efficiency. They must take advantage of all available modern knowledge. Unless they do, a constantly better equipped legislature may force upon them some unwanted changes. After all, the State is sovereign.

Cooperation beats coercion every time and, be sure of this, many changes will be made by one or the other of these means.

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

"Certainly it was a fine weekend," he said innocently. "I didn't have a single problem with the children." "Somehow or other that makes me feel very bad," she said. "That I can go away for three days and leave two small, very normal children with you and you don't have problems like I do when I'm here."

"It's all in knowing how to discipline them. They listen to me," he bragged. "How'd the little one do with her potty training?" she asked suspiciously. "Fine," he said too quickly. "She did exactly as I said."

"Do you mean to tell me that you told her to mess up all those diapers, pants and training pants I found in the diaper pail?" she asked.

"I didn't know you'd looked." He was on the defensive now. "Well, she did have a few little problems...several times a day. Okay, I admit it. I couldn't do anything with her. That kid has a mind of her own on that subject, and it wasn't her mind that kept me busy."

The Joys Of Children

"Come on now," she chided, "any more problems?" "Well, I was upstairs shaving Saturday morning and your older daughter chased the cat into the kitchen. The cat jumped on the table and caught her claw in the tablecloth and broke three glasses. And I thought I was being so smart," he said. "I had set the table for lunch right after breakfast."

"I wondered what became of those three glasses," she paused, then said, "Go on." "Well, I went back up to shave the other side of my face and I smelled something burning. So I came running back down again. The little one had turned on all four burners of the stove and the oven. Except for being a little warm in there, there wasn't much damage though," he said. "But that Teflon saucepan that I was going to fix soup in for lunch was one of the eyes. It burned up. So did the pizza pan in the oven. She said she did it because her sister was watching TV, whatever that meant."

"I wondered what became of them," she said, again with a slight chuckle. "Anything else?" "Nothing that I can think of, except I couldn't get the little one to go to sleep Friday night. She came down at 12:30 to watch what she called 'Johnny Carter' with me. Her sister heard her laughing, so she came down too. We had cookies and Kool-Aid. It was a good show that night."

"Yeah it's all in knowing how to discipline them," she said sarcastically. "The wind was blowing pretty hard. It woke them up." "Did they eat well?" she asked.

"Of course," he said. "...But they didn't like the way I fixed the baked potatoes. I cooked them for an hour-and-a-half, but they still weren't done. And the little punk laughed when I burned myself while I was fixing the rolls." "Incidentally," she asked, "how did you do on the cooking?" "Fine," he said, again too quickly. "No, miserably! Even the TV dinners were a catastrophe."

"Just remember. It was your idea that I go away for a little vacation with the girls and leave the kids with you."

"Yeah, I remember," he said wryly. "Do me a favor, will you?" "What?" "Don't talk about it any more. I'm trying to forget.... And please don't ever do it again."

Sadlers Look Forward to Beach, Yard

By Mary Wright

Tomorrow there will be a change of command at Dam Neck Fleet Anti-Air Warfare Training Center: Capt. W. N. Homer and Mrs. Homer will shortly be leaving for a new duty station at Yokosuka, Japan. And Capt. and Mrs. Stuart T. Sadler will be moving into the commanding officer's quarters at the Center.

During this busy week, Mrs. Aura Sadler took time out to talk about herself, and her family, and the prospects of moving to Dam Neck.

"We have lived at Norfolk numbers of times," said Mrs. Sadler, "and always loved it. But this is the first time we've ever been stationed at Virginia Beach. We've always lived informally, and we're all looking forward to the 'beach living.'"

The Sadler's daughter Katherine, 13, "is already excited about the horseback riding at Oceana." And son Stuart, 19, "is ecstatic about being so near the water."

As for Capt. Sadler, "having a yard to work in at Dam Neck is enough to make him happy about the move," she went on. The new C.O.'s mother, a Canadian, moved to Florida with her forestry agent husband "when there was almost nothing there," said Mrs. Sadler.

Capt. Sadler's mother built a garden which is now famous around her Mt. Dora, Fla. home, near Orlando. "I know that's where he gets his green thumb," said Mrs. Sadler, who is originally from Tampa. "Whenever he comes back from a cruise, he laughs and asks which philodendron I've killed this time."

With 27 moves in 22 years behind them, the Sadlers are well-acquainted with changing homes. "The only way I know to make it any easier," said Mrs. Sadler, "is to try and mentally place the furniture before any of the physical moving starts, so that you can decide—depending on the house or apartment you're moving to—what can be stored, and it's easier for the movers and yourself."

The Sadler children have always taken the sudden moves and uprootings in stride, said their mother. "But, of course, we have had friends whose children have become quiet and shy. I think once a child reaches junior high school—when the attachments are closer and it's more difficult to change schools, then it's harder."

Capt. Sadler, who was formerly Chief of Staff of Cruise and Destroyer Flotilla 8, homeported at Norfolk, has been in every war in the past 22 years, with the exception of Vietnam.

Mrs. Sadler herself was a Navy nurse during World War II. "My husband was at sea between 1943 and 1945, and I was at sea between 1944 and '45. It's a family joke that I chased him all around the world till he caught me."

"Virginia Beach will be something entirely new to us," she went on, "living at the Center itself (the Sadlers have lived in quarters once before, in Charleston) and working with almost as many civilians as military people."

"My husband is excited about the prospects of working with the schools at Dam Neck. It's a challenge to him. And I know that he will make a mark there. I don't know how, in what way. But whatever he's involved with is always so important to him."

Mrs. Sadler began the conversation by saying that she isn't "very interesting; my husband is. I've only tried to augment his career as well as I can."

But Aura Sadler is a modest woman, which is not unique in itself, or unique in comparison to other commanding officers' wives around Tide-water. Which is, nevertheless, gratifying and, somehow, reassuring.

Mrs. Stuart Sadler will become "first lady" of Dam Neck FAAWTC tomorrow when her husband relieves Capt. W. N. Homer at change-of-command ceremonies scheduled for 2:30 p.m.

Four Local Clubs Enter Competition

Four Virginia Beach Clubs are among 97 Virginia women's clubs competing for honors in this year's General Federation of Women's Clubs/Shell Oil Company Education Program.

The clubs are the Virginia Beach-Princess Anne Woman's Club, Bayside Junior Woman's Club, Cavalier Junior Woman's Club and the Kempsville Junior Woman's Club.

Now in its sixth year, the GFWC/Shell education program annually presents three awards in each state to women's clubs judged to be conducting the best programs to further the education of young people in their communities.

Any GFWC club conducting such a program is eligible to enter the program. Each club, has an opportunity to win an award. Judging criteria includes need, approach to the problem, membership participation, time and financial support given to the project, ingenuity of fund-raising activities, community reaction and involvement with the project, and effect of the club's project on the young people.

In reward for their efforts, awards totalling $1,000 are presented to three clubs who in turn apply the money toward their education projects.

The winning clubs in this year's competition will be announced during the Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs Convention to be held April 30-May 2 at Roanoke.

First place winners from each state become eligible for national competition which includes awards of $2,500, $1,500, and $1,000. These winners will be announced at the General Federation of Women's Clubs convention to be held this June in Boston, Mass.

Orgera, manager of the Sears store at Pembroke, turns over a check for prizes in the HANDS contest to Mrs. C. L. Hershberger, Council of Garden Clubs president, and Mrs. Gallagher.

They Aren't Telling Yet

Home and Neighborhood Development (HANDS) projects of local garden clubs were judged Friday, but the winners will not be announced until the April meeting of the Council of Garden Clubs of Virginia Beach and Surrounding Areas.

Adam Orgera, manager of the Sears store at Pembroke Mall, recently presented Mrs. Arthur Gallagher, HANDS chairman for the council, with a check for $800 to be given to the six local winning garden clubs. The money must be re-invested in either the winning project or another one.

Sears began sponsoring the annual contest some years ago to encourage "community spirit and enthusiasm," according to Orgera. Last year Virginia Beach was one of the 10 finalists in the national contest.

In other cities other business and organizations have contributed to further stimulate beautification, Mrs. Gallagher said. "We hope more business in Virginia Beach will contribute, and more money will be reinvested."

HANDS projects are judged in two categories, with separate prizes for each. They are beautification of public buildings and beautification of neighborhood areas. Judges were not connected with the Council of Garden Clubs in any way, Mrs. Gallagher pointed out. "It was unbiased judging strictly on merit."

Mrs. Gallagher will enter the city's scrapbook of projects in the regional contest to be judged later this spring. She will also attend the HANDS Workshop for councils of garden clubs in 13 Southeastern states which will be held May 22 to 24 in Birmingham, Ala.

The deadline for submitting applications in the 1937 contest is June 1, and projects must be completed by next March 1.

"Both Mr. Orgera and I agree that Virginia Beach clubs should enter the contest in Virginia Beach rather than Norfolk," Mrs. Gallagher added. "Since the beautification is part of our city, our city should judge it. Besides, why should another city get credit for projects within Virginia Beach?"

Cape Henry Elects Officers

Dr. Robert Wadell, first vice president of the Virginia Beach Safety Council, spoke to members of the Cape Henry Woman's Club at their March meeting at the Ocean Hearth and also showed a safety film which he compiled and the club helped make possible.

He pointed out that 105 persons are killed on U.S. highways every day, and the death rate involving motorcycle accidents is five times greater than from auto accidents.

Mrs. James L. Craig Jr. of the club has been named second vice president of the Virginia Beach Safety Council.

Mrs. E. E. Cox, garden and conservation chairman, announced that the lower James River homes have been selected for the club's annual Garden Week bus tour.

Mrs. C. E. Upton Jr., president, and Mrs. E. Gilbert Keene will represent the club in Roanoke at the 1938 Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs Convention on April 30th through May 2. Mrs. Council D. Garrett and Mrs. Noel Fallwell were named alternates.

The club voted to double the amount of their two teacher scholarships and to make a special grant of $400 if needed by a student at a special request, this grant to be voted on each year. They will also increase the amount of their nursing scholarship.

The club voted to contribute to the March of Dimes and the American Legion Shoe Bank.

New officers elected at the meeting were Mrs. C. E. Upton Jr., president; Mrs. Earl W. Leonard, first vice president; Mrs. Richard J. Counselman, second vice president; Mrs.

A. J. Chowning III, third vice president; Mrs. J. Elwood Lant, recording secretary, and Mrs. V. Alfred Etheridge, treasurer.

Ladies Veto Waists

Fashion designers have dictated that women will have to give up their comfortable shifts this spring and wear wide belts, full skirts and other "girlish" attire.

What the designers apparently didn't count on was the American female. According to a story in "Women's Wear Daily," the ladies have been demanding their shifts from their favorite stores in preference to the shapelier garments.

And no wonder. I can name at least two women's editors in Virginia Beach who are attempting to shed a few pounds gained during the winter months.

It's much easier to hide your "defects" inside a loose shift than to try to disguise them with a girdle, waist cincher, etc.

Then there are people like Ethel Kennedy (Bobby's wife) with ten kids and a size 8 figure. There goes the excuse of about half the overweight ladies—that motherhood causes a weight gain.

Even I can brag that I lost 20 pounds with three kids—only some of them sort of sneaked back.

There are always exercises. Many of the city's public schools offer their gyms at night for workouts—exercise classes too. But somehow, exercises always seem to appeal more to the people who are already physically fit.

Of course, Grandma had her day when young ladies were judged by their tiny waists—anything over 18 inches was a disgrace. These same young ladies also frequently hinted because their corsets were tied too tight and, they couldn't breathe.

So, designers to the contrary, shifts (I hope) are here to stay—at least until I can lose five more pounds.

Members of the Ladies Auxiliary to the Davis Corner Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad have launched a fund raising drive to equip the Rescue Squad's ambulance. One of the main features of the project will be a game party scheduled at the station house on Friday, April 5. The program will begin at 8:00 p.m. and include door prizes. Funds will be raised through a $1 donation at the door.

A report just released showed the month of February was a busy one for the Virginia Beach Police Division, and unusually so for the Division's Youth Bureau. A total of 967 requests for service of the Bureau were answered, resulting in 140 complaints involving juveniles, in addition to 61 juveniles being involved in traffic law violation investigations.

This Saturday will be "family day" at the Creeds Fire and Rescue Department station house. Members of the unit's Ladies Auxiliary will hold a spaghetti dinner. Serving will begin at 4 p.m. Funds received from $1 donations being used to improve the unit. Further information may be obtained from Betty Waterfield, Auxiliary publicity chairman.

Did Adam Thoroughgood Smuggle?

By Carolyn McAllen

It may be a wine cellar. It may be a tunnel. It may be a storage room. Anyway, despite earlier reports that none existed, there is an arch leading somewhere from the northeast corner of the Adam Thoroughgood House.

The opening was discovered a week ago, but it was kept secret until a press conference Tuesday.

Presently the opening is covered with boards to keep dirt from caving in under the house. The arch, made of brick, is about eight feet below the surface of the parlor. There is only about a two-foot crawl space under the foundation.

"There is no doubt the floor has been changed," said Floyd Painter, archaeologist with the Norfolk Museum, who has done extensive digging around the house. No access to the arch has been found.

Painter has been using a steel probe in hopes of tracing the path of the tunnel, if one is there, through the back yard. "We've put the probe down and hit it" at the same uniform depth angling toward the cove (Lynnhaven River)," Painter said.

Whether or not the secret of the arch is uncovered is in the hands of the board of trustees of the Norfolk Museum. Their permission to continue the exploration must be given. Then the Garden Club of Virginia will have to be contacted, since the route goes under the garden they planted behind the house.

"We'll have to dig slowly and carefully," said Painter.

Painter traces line of tunnel or whatever with a metal probe.

"We can't just start in with a pick and shovel. We'd destroy more than we found."

The Thoroughgood House was closed March 11 for renovation, including replacement of flooring, and will reopen at noon Sunday.

"We've had every bit of the flooring up," said Mrs. Martha Lindemann, curator. It's funny. A woman called me at 6:30 a.m. last Tuesday and said we were looking in the wrong place. Then she hung up. That afternoon we found the opening."

Painter offers two theories for the tunnel (Indians in the area were friendly, so an escape route is discounted)--"piracy or smuggling."

He said there were quite a few such tunnels in New England. "The people in New England were real smugglers." He pointed out that English taxes were high (pre-Revolution), and many colonists smuggled goods to avoid paying them. He also said piracy was prevalent in this area.

Earlier excavations have uncovered two wine cellars--one wooden and one brick--plus a circular excavation about nine feet in diameter and a six foot long trough that "looked like a grave but it was empty."

There is no written history of the house, and information about it has been collected from diggings, word of mouth, etc. It is known, though, that Adam Thoroughgood was given 5,300 acres of land by the king for bringing indentured servants to the colonies. He himself came to Virginia at the age of 17 as an indentured servant.

Although he was from a well-to-do family, he was the seventh son, and only the oldest son was in the line of inheritance in those days. His home here is believed to have been built in 1635, and Thoroughgood still occupied it in 1781.

The Thoroughgood House is located in Bayside Borough, but it is owned by the City of Norfolk and is on the Norfolk Tour.

The kangaroo and the animal keeper at this week's petting zoo at Pembroke Mall seem to be carrying on a serious conversation, which may or may not have to do with the baby elephant in the background.

Trio Await Sentencing

Three Navy men are awaiting sentencing after pleading guilty to the Feb. 5 robbery of cab driver Homer L. Rutan. The accused were identified as Richard A. Derringer, Jr., Jerry A. Jensen and Newman W. Graves, all of whom are attached to the U.S. Dahlgren.

According to investigators the trio hired Rutan's cab at the Norfolk Greyhound Bus depot, robbing him of $31 on Interstate 264 while enroute to Virginia Beach, then forcing him from the cab. Police were alerted by a phone call from Rutan touching off an area-wide search. Graves reportedly was arrested at Susquehanna Drive and Newtown Road with the arrests of Jensen and Derringer taking place several hours later.

Brighten Yards with Azaleas

All across Virginia Beach, azaleas herald the arrival of spring! No other plant produces so vivid and showy a spring display as the azalea when completely clothed in bloom. Within the next few weeks, azaleas will be painting the local landscape with masses of breathtaking color. Every Virginia Beach yard and garden should have azaleas—even if it entails time and trouble in preparing soil and providing ideal growing conditions.

Follow these five points when setting out azaleas: (1) Soil must contain sufficient humus. Peat moss or rotted leaves mixed with topsoil are good materials to use. (2) Soil must be acid. Azaleas will not grow in neutral or alkaline soil. (3) Soil must be friable; it should never be pasty or stiff. Any soil which hardens when dry is unsuitable. (4) Good drainage, is a must. If soil is poorly drained or waterlogged, it is useless to attempt to grow azaleas. (5) To ensure good drainage, set azaleas a little higher than they were growing in the nursery. The part of the main stem that was underground is evident by its darker color. Cover soil around plants with about 3 inches of mulch such as pine straw. Let them get a good start before fertilizing. A little fertilizer goes a long way. Azaleas can be killed with fertilizer by applying too much. A special azalea fertilizer will help create an acid soil condition. Just follow directions carefully. City water may contain enough lime to neutralize the soil acidity in a few waterings. In such cases, it is advisable to apply small amounts of aluminum sulfate at monthly intervals during the summer.

Keep in mind that azaleas need water during dry periods—both summer and winter. Too many people forget this.

Most azaleas prefer a sunny exposure or a location where they will receive direct sunlight for at least a portion of the day. They do well under tall trees that give them filtered sunlight. An ideal location is beneath tall pine trees. Pines also provide a bonus of good pine needle mulch.

Azaleas like protection from high winds. When planting, do not allow the ball of earth around the roots to dry out between the time of digging and planting. Containers for young plants also must be watched to be certain that their soil does not become dry.

A good planting mixture is composed of about one-half peat moss and one-half loam soil. If a more acid condition is needed, add aluminum sulfate before plants are set out.

Azaleas look their best when grouped in masses and drifts. By proper color and size selection, you can create there or mounds of harmonious spring color in your yard. Azaleas cannot be beat to define a border or yard which needs the feeling of enclosure. Avoid straight lines of plantings, but group plants into fat colonies. Well-tended azaleas will thrive even on steep inclines. If you have a bank in the back of your house, you can cover it with azaleas.

Take the potato. It's plentiful supply, and there's no more nutritious, flavorful tuber. Low in calories, too. The best way to buy this old standby is by the bag, so you'll have potatoes of several sizes. Use the smallest ones to boil in their jackets, middle ones to mash or fry, and the biggest ones to bake. Save the odd shapes for dicing in casseroles or in soup.

You like potato soup, don't you? We can't think of better eating on a rainy day. Try our BROWN FLOUR POTATO SOUP. It was meant to keep the family happily fed... economically.

To make potato soup for six you'll need 4 leeks and 1 medium onion. Slice them (only the white part of the leeks), and sauté in 2 tbsp. of butter for about 10 minutes in 2½ to 3 qt. saucepan or Dutch oven. Now, add the potatoes. Peel and dice four large potatoes and put in the saucepan with 3 cups of water, a teaspoon of salt and a dash of pepper. Bring to a boil, and cook slowly until the potatoes are tender.

Next, stir in 3 cups of hot milk. And finally, 3 to 4 tbsp. of four which you have browned in 2 tbsp. of butter in a heavy skillet. (To prevent lumping add some of the hot milk to the browned flour and butter.) The best potato soup on earth! For about 45¢. The cost of electricity to cook it, less than 1¢. Quite a bargain, electricity. Like the potato.

Camellias are excellent companion plants and ideal for use behind azaleas. They both like acid soil and appreciate growing in a slight shade. Showy annuals and perennials such as daylilies, phlox, Shasta daisies, chrysanthemums, zinnias and marigolds may be planted in among azaleas and will bloom long after the azaleas are gone.

When planting azaleas around a foundation, care must be taken to dig out all litter and mortar that may have been left by the builders. Such material can create too alkaline a soil condition for good azalea and camellia growth. Select colors that harmonize with the background wall color. If the building is dark, use azaleas of light-colored blooms. White is lost against white. A home of red brick needs white, rose or pink azaleas—never purplish tints that clash with the brick. If you want some of the vibrant hot-orange shades, isolate them from the reds, lavenders and pink. Or place the oranges away in a planting of their own and give them a few white neighboring plants for cool contrast.

If you have more time than money, consider buying azalea "liners." These are the small bundles of bare-root plants, reasonably priced. With proper care, liners grow into large, showy specimens within a few years. They are useful in developing new properties, where many small shrubs often are planted for future landscape effects.

Azaleas can be moved at any season of the year, although most growers recommend spring planting. The next few weeks are ideal. The main thing to remember is to plant them shallow and apply ample water around their roots the first few months.

For more color around your home, plant some azaleas now.

Q. I think my evergreens may have red spider mites. How can I tell for sure and what do I do about it?—J.D.N., Birdneck

A. Evergreens can be damaged by red spider mites any time during the growing season. Check once a month by tapping branches over a white piece of paper. Crawling mites appear as moving specks of dust on the white sheet. Spray your evergreens at once with any good broad control spray and repeat again in 30 days.

Q. I have lots of chickweed in my lawn. How can I get rid of it?—T.W., Alantown

A. Chickweed is a problem in the Tidewater area, especially in shaded lawns. Spray at once with a turf weed killer. Chickweed is difficult to kill and a second spraying in 30 days is recommended. I like a hose-end sprayer, available at any garden store. Be sure to hold it close to the ground so the spray does not blow onto adjacent shrubs or flowers, since it will kill shrubs and flowers if it gets on them.

MULCH SHRUBS. If you have pine trees in or near your yard, it probably needs raking right now. And now is the time to be mulching your shrubs for summer—to keep down the grass and weeds and hold in the moisture. If you do not have natural pine straw readily available, you can buy it or try one of the pine bark mulches available locally. Pine bark mulch is especially attractive in planters, around patios, etc.

CLEAN UP THE LAWN FURNITURE. Get out your lawn furniture now and wash it down. Some plastic webbing may need to be restrung with the kits you can buy at most hardware stores. If your furniture is rusty, paint it with something like Rustoleum to prevent fur-

SET OUT PANSIES. Most every kind of store will be having baskets of pansies within the next few weeks. Pansies bloom prolifically and give much color in the house when picked. If you like pansies, now is the time to pick up a basket of plants.

Seal of Approval
The Lawn Institute permits packagers to utilize its Seal of Approval if the seed blend is at least 75% fine-textured, of grasses that are perennial and spread well. Most mixtures containing "coarse-kind" haygrasses are not of sufficient quality to merit the Seal.

Among other speakers will be Alan V. Whitney, chairman of the Chamber's Agriculture Committee, George W. Baker, director of the Norfolk Botanical Gardens, Frederic Heutte, retired director, and Alan J. Hofmeier, president of the Norfolk Botanical Garden Society.

Now is the time to...
FEED ROSES. Roses should be fed monthly between the start of their growing season in early March, through mid-September. Now is the time to begin, by putting one half to one cup of a special rose food around each of your plants. The newer rose foods contain a systemic insect control that will eliminate aphids and thrips—two rose pests.

Then, there's that once a month when a girl could use a good old-fashioned medicine.

QUESTION BOX

Here are the answers to your garden questions. Send your questions to Garden Editor, The Sun, P. O. Box 657, Virginia Beach, Va. 23451.

Q. When should I prune roses?—Mrs. A.J., Acredale

A. Right now, February is usually the preferred month in this area, but some rose growers like to wait until March. My own experience has proven that waiting until now may help avoid winterkill from a late freeze. If you have not pruned your roses, it needs to be done now. Remember that roses bloom only on new growth. They should be pruned back to about 8 to 12 inches above ground, to allow plenty of new growth for blooms.

Q. I think my evergreens may have red spider mites. How can I tell for sure and what do I do about it?—J.D.N., Birdneck

A. Evergreens can be damaged by red spider mites any time during the growing season. Check once a month by tapping branches over a white piece of paper. Military Wives Club Notes

By Mary Wright

The Army Community Services office at Ft. Story, which went into operation for the first time earlier this year, is now functioning successfully only two months after birth.

Headed by 1st Lt. Glenn Miller, ACS "tries to move into any area where an Army family has problems," said Lt. Miller.

One of the services offered is financial counseling. Lt. Miller is the Army Emergency Relief Officer at Ft. Story, and provides the counseling that determines whether a family will receive a loan, which must be repaid, or a grant from ACS. The Service office has already distributed $4,000 in loans and grants this year, according to Lt. Miller.

"Most of the money we handle is in the form of loans," he explained. "For emergency medical or funeral expenses, for example. Or when a wife's allotment check has failed to arrive on time. That money is paid back to us."

The ACS office does provide grants in cases of extreme hardship, when there would be no feasible way for the money to be repaid, said Lt. Miller.

Most of the office's financial help goes to dependents "often," Lt. Miller continued, "an individual will leave the immediate area on an unaccompanied tour without taking steps to see that his dependents will be cared for. We try to help."

The ACS office also gives financial assistance to retired Army families in the area. The office is presently operating with the help of volunteer workers drawn from the ranks of officers' wives at the post, whose hours are coordinated by Mrs. Everett Topham, wife of the commanding officer, 102nd Battalion.

The wives work four days a week, for half a day, following up on whether the families' problems have been solved, trying to establish contact with families off the post.

Aside from the financial help offered, ACS serves as a general information center for families moving into the Tidewater area; sending out information on schools, churches and available housing.

Don't Hard Boil

Good cooks never hard boil eggs. They know that hard-cooked eggs are easiertoshell, and will have a clear yellow yolk when cooked in barely simmering water—promptly cooled under cold running water.

Fescues Strong

As delicate as the fine fescues appear in a lawn, they are by no means frail. Chewings, Illabees, Highlight and Pennlawn fescues are mainstays in the most trying lawn situations, as in the shade under trees, where the soil is dry and infertile.

Barbecue Lamb for Spring

Barbecuing is not confined to the outdoors but is a way of cooking that can continue all year 'round inside the house. The only requirements are a range, a favorite cut of meat such as lamb and a sauce.

Many cuts of Winter Wonder lamb are suitable for barbecuing but try lamb ribs for a pleasant change. They are cut from the breast and are succulent and tender when browned and simmered in a zesty sauce. And they're economical, too.

TOMATO AND RAISIN BARBECUED RIBLETS (Makes 4 servings)

Water Everywhere--Except Pumpers

Of the various volunteer fire departments serving residents of the city of Virginia Beach, the Knotts Island Volunteer Fire Department is perhaps the most unique of the units.

Knotts Island Volunteers are responsible for the protection of residents completely surrounded by water with the exception of a small causeway linking the "island" with the Virginia Beach "mainland".

In 1962 a small group of men who lived on the island gathered in a diner operated by George Sauer and felt they should form an organized fire department for protection of the island's inhabitants of the island. Until that time the island, although one fire engine was available, depended entirely upon whoever could be summoned to the scene of a fire. Sauer, who had previous experience with fire fighting units in California, New York, and the U. S. Navy, was elected president of the unit. He was able to obtain support of 18 men to form the nucleus of an organized "volunteer fire fighting unit".

A search for a headquarters building site was started in 1963. Donavan Bonney of Creeds, learned of the search and donations of money and material, along with untold man hours of volunteer labor, the present headquarters building was constructed.

Today the Knotts Island "Volunteers" are composed of 30 men, backed up by equipment consisting of two "pumper-tanker" trucks, an ambulance, and "fire chief" car. Chief Sauer told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN the men are in dire need of a large "tanker", in order to haul water to the scene of a fire. Under present conditions water is hauled to a fire in the two small "pumper-tankers", and a large fire would require the refilling of the units to continue fire fighting operations.

A large problem in this is the availability of water. Chief Sauer said that only two places offer proper water supplies which would not result in damage to the tanks and/or equipment—one at the Knotts Island ferry landing at the south end of the island, the other at the public boat landing at the north end of the island.

Chief Sauer also said he hopes to obtain funds in the near future to enlarge the present building, not only to house any additional equipment, but to provide space which could be used as social quarters for the department and residents of the island. Under present conditions when residents wish to hold any social activity on the island, the equipment must be moved out of the building to provide such space.

Chief Sauer is assisted in operation of the department by Larry Etheridge, asst. chief; Edward Cason, captain; and William Stevens, asst. captain. The unit's officers are Norwood Ansell, president; Harold Capps, Vice president; Walton (Buster) Brumley, secretary; and Melvin Waterfield, treasurer. Sauer speaks very highly of the men of the unit, as well as the ladies of the Ladies Auxiliary whose officers consist of Cassie Hutchinson, president; Kay Barnes, vice president; Jane Brumley, secretary; Gladys Stevens, treasurer; Georgia Cason, corresponding secretary; and Sue Sauer, publicity chairman.

There is no question of the women of the Ladies Auxiliary wanting to support the men in continued growth and operation of the department. Chief Sauer said the ladies, by means of various projects, presented the department with a $1,000 check two years ago, plus another $1,000 donation recently to be used towards the purchase of a later model, better equipped ambulance.

The main cause of fires on the island is two-fold, according to Sauer, consisting of grass or woods fires as the result of lightning or careless smokers. This is another reason behind the need for a large tanker truck, to enable the men to have enough water on hand to prevent any such fires from reaching homes or barns on the island.

Surprisingly, residential fires are not prevalent on the island. Chief Sauer attributes this to a good fire prevention program. Sauer told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, "School fire drills and prevention are practiced both by students and teachers, and our people, perhaps since they live in a rural area are more conscious of the dangers of fire than those in urban areas". This is borne out by the report of only one house fire within the last six months.

A very unique operation of the Knotts Island Fire Dept. is the formation of a "Junior Fire Patrol". This utilizes the young people of the island who are issued cards bearing the phone number of the "fire dispatcher" and requesting them to report smoke or fire in woods or buildings to the nearest adult.

Pharmacy Wins Prize For Ads

Bayside Pharmacy, one of the first Virginia Beach businesses to sign an advertising contract with this newspaper after it went off in 1966, has been announced as the first place winner in the Pharmacist Management Journal's annual newspaper advertising contest for advertising run the past year in the Sun.

The ads were conceived, designed and written by G.W. Dettmerman, pharmacist-in-charge and part owner of Bayside. The photographic work for the advertising was handled by a local photographer. Thead series layout was prepared by the advertising department of the Virginia Beach Sun and Miss Meredith Sembler, who was the paper's staff artist during 1968. PM's panel of judges, including design expert and a professional advertising man, considered more than 200 entries from retail pharmacies throughout the country.

Vepco Makes Appointments

Virginia Electric and Power Company has announced two appointments in its accounting department, effective April 1. Raymond B. Ashe was named service director at Virginia Beach. Succeeding him as assistant service director at Norfolk will be James R. Frazier Jr.

A native of Portsmouth, Ashe has been with Vepco since 1947. He became service investigator at Portsmouth in 1951 and was named assistant service director at Norfolk in 1961.

Knott's Island Fire Department stands isolated.

also to not play with matches or fire, and remain clear of firemen enroute to a fire or at the scene of an alarm. Membership in the "Patrol" requires parental consent and keeping passing grades in school.

When questioned about any difficulty in obtaining enough help to answer any alarm, Sauer said, "At least 10 men, as well as from 10 to 20 members of the Ladies Auxiliary, will respond to an alarm. In the event enough men are not available, Sauer said, "the women will pitch in by handling hoses and other equipment until enough men can arrive". While men are summoned to an alarm by sounding of the "fire house siren", phones are also used to alert others who may be needed, and in the event ambulance services are required.

The largest amount of water surrounding the island presents special problems for the Knotts Island "Volunteers" especially in spring and summer, in protecting swimmers who become endangered or boaters who go "overboard". Still the department does not maintain a boat. However all residents of the island have agreed to make available any boats which may be needed in an emergency.

Although the Knotts Island "fire station" is physically situated in the North Carolina portion of the island, the department operates through the City of Virginia Beach, and utilizes services of the city's fire dispatcher office on Pacific Avenue. This is the result of the department being physically separated from North Carolina, and offering assistance to Creeds "Volunteers" on a reciprocal agreement.

Chief Sauer is very proud of the department and the loyalty shown by men of the unit, and women of the Ladies Auxiliary. He also speaks highly of public support. Sauer told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, "people of the island are 100% behind us. They have a good thing here, they know it, they give us their full support, and we will always try to live up to it".

Of the 30 men who make up the departments' membership only one of them resides in the Virginia Beach portion of the island. He is the department's Sec. Walton (Buster) Brumley, whose wife Jane holds the same office in the Ladies Auxiliary.

'Show-Off' Continues at Wedgewood

A fictional character who stands at the polar extremity of Casper Milquetoast has become almost as much a part of the American folk tradition and his name, like Milquetoast, stands for a particular type. This is Aubrey Piper, the character around whom all the film centers in the George Kelly period comedy.

"The Show-Off" which is currently playing at Wedgewood Theatre, Williamsburg. "The Show-Off" was first produced in 1924 and became one of the sensational hits of its time due to the recognizability of its title role. It ran for over two years on Broadway, was toured to almost every city in America, has three movie versions to its credit, and is currently on Broadway in a revival by the APA Repertory company.

Aubrey Piper is the exact opposite of Casper Milquetoast.

Where Casper is timid, Aubrey is audacious, where Casper is self-degrading, Aubrey is the back-slapping boaster, and where Casper is rather pitiful, Aubrey Piper is outrageously funny by very reason of his brazenness—at least on the stage. In person, Aubrey is the kind of man who irritates you at the office and the fellow who lives across the street that is hard to be neighborly toward.

The Wedgewood production of "The Show-Off" features Paul Kidding in the title role, Waltham Hamilton as his scrappy mother-in-law, and Sherri Reid as his wife. Also in the cast are resident company members Ty and Jeffery Stephens, Roby Brown, Ron Reid, Leroy McFarland, and Bob Hutchinson.

The vintage comedy will play through April 13 with a Sunday matinee on March 31.

ODC Hosts First Music Symposium

The first annual American Music Symposium featuring the University of Maryland Trio and Daryl D. Dayton, pianist, will be held at Old Dominion College Friday, March 29 through Sunday, March 31. The Symposium will include a repertoire of both standard and avant-garde American music.

The University of Maryland Trio will present a concert Friday, March 29, at 8:15 p.m. and a lecture-demonstration, Saturday, at 10 a.m. Dayton will give a lecture-demonstration at 2 p.m. Saturday and a concert at 8:15 p.m. All events will be held in the Hughes Library Assembly Hall.

Dayton, chief of the music branch, Information Center Services, and music advisor to the United States Information Agency, has had graduate piano study with Arthur Schnabel in Berlin, Dailies Frantz in New York, and Guy Maier in Los Angeles.

There is a registration fee of $1.50 for the symposium, which concludes with a free concert presented by ODC music organizations in Webb Center at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Cayce to Speak At ARE Forum

A lecture, "Edgar Cayce on Atlantis" will be given by Edgar Evans Cayce at the Sunday Forum of the Association for Research and Enlightenment, 67th Street and Atlantic Avenue, March 31, at 3:30 p.m.

Cayce, the younger son of the late Edgar Cayce, is a graduate of Duke University in electrical engineering, is a member of national organizations of engineers and is an engineer with the Virginia Electric and Power Company. He is also a trustee of the A. R. E., active especially in helping scientists interested in the Edgar Cayce readings. His new book, "Edgar Cayce on Atlantis," has just been published.

A question period will follow the lecture, after which an informal coffee hour will take place. The public is cordially invited to this event. For further information call the Association.

On the Monument label, the album is simply titled "Boots Randolph With The Knightsbridge Strings." If you didn't know better, you might not be too impressed and might pass it by. What's inside, though, will leave a lasting impression. Boots has left his famous "Yackety sax" behind for this second trip into music with strings. The results are really pleasing.

Boots Randolph has many things to many people. To the sophisticated his "sax" has a sensitive, soulful sound that soars; to the jazz oriented Boots keeps the basic beat and overlays it with percussive improvisations; to the young mods the "teeny boppers" his music is as "in" as Liverpool and flowers. To all the people in the middle of these classes, Boots Randolph has the simple "down home" music.

This album is the first marriage of Boots Randolph with The Knightsbridge Strings & Voices. The "Strings" are well known in their own right and, at times, supplement at times showcase the great sax. The songs in this "LP" are varied. "Temptation", "Somewhere My Love", "Cast Your Fate To The Wind", "Misty", and "More" are some of the pleasing sounds in this new Monument album "Boots Randolph With The Knightsbridge Strings". Listen to it, and, we think, you'll want to add it to your collection.

After 100,000 miles still the family handy man.

Week in, year out, it seems the entire family likes to boss the Peugeot around. Dad, for business. Mom, for shopping. And the kids for whatever they feel like doing at the time. It's enough to make an old wagon weary. But at 100,000 miles Peugeot is as strong as ever. How come? Because Peugeots are totally engineered. For example, Peugeot wagons are built on their own custom chassis, not just a modified sedan chassis.

And Peugeot is built to take it. Even filled to its big 66 cubic foot capacity, Peugeot never sags. The weight is always distributed. Which, in turn, means Peugeot rides and handles better, safer.

Busy Woman Tired of 'Women Too Busy'

While a good many people are frustrated by things moving too quickly for them, Mrs. Estelle Dolgins is one of those human dynamos frustrated by the comparative slow-motion of most people and things around her. Staccato is her rhythm for living.

A good part of her intense activity this spring is being directed toward the residential committee (of which she is chairman) of the Virginia Beach Unit of the American Cancer Society, during the Society's April Crusade.

Mrs. Dolgins, who moved to Virginia Beach from New York with her husband Paul and son Gary, now 20, some 15 years ago, has been active in the Virginia Beach Society "for as long as there's been a Society."

Her grandfather died of cancer. "I think all of us working in the Society are personally involved with it somehow, through someone close to us."

Back in 1955, when the Society was organized, it was the Princess Anne Unit, and a part of the Community Chest Mrs. Dolgins served as secretary of the group from 1955 to 1957, and was president of the Society from 1958 to '59 during which time she was also elected a lay director for the Virginia Division of the American Cancer Society—the first time anyone from Princess Anne or Virginia Beach had been elected to the Board of Directors.

"From the very first," she went on, "when my office was a desk in the corner of my bedroom, we were a community service organization—preparing bandages and—loaning out beds."

One of the first unwritten laws of the Society is that none of their services—either beds or bandages or the transportation service for Virginia Beach cancer patients to Norfolk for treatment—be identified as coming from the Society.

"One of our first members," said Mrs. Dolgins, "was a doctor who told us that 75 per cent of his cancer patients didn't know what they were suffering from. Their families hadn't told them. And we never want to be responsible for letting someone know he has cancer when for his own peace of mind, he shouldn't know. So we never use the Society's name on any of the articles we send out. People can come to us for assistance without being afraid that we'll give away clues that the help is coming from the Cancer Society."

Mrs. Estelle Dolgins maps out plans for the April Cancer Crusade with Dr. Alvin Q. Jarrett at the Cancer Society's office on Laskin Road.

In 1959, the Cancer Society withdrew from the United Community Fund which had taken the place of the Community Chest.

"Every dollar we make above operating costs," Mrs. Dolgins continued, "goes toward cancer research on a national level."

This year's Crusade is the first time that Mrs. Dolgins has been involved in the fund-raising side of the Society. She added that there are two community services she would like to see her residential committees accomplish this April: to see that every home receives a copy of the Society's seven danger signals for cancer, and to make more families aware of the services the Society can offer them.

"If service is the heart of our society, then educating the public to cancer is the Society's mind," said Mrs. Dolgins. "There won't be one answer to cancer, as in the Salk vaccine for polio; there are so many varieties of the disease. Our chief weapon right now is education, so that people will be aware of the warning signals and have themselves examined before it is too late to help them."

Estelle Dolgins, who handles almost single-handedly the home office of Southern Safe Company, which she and her husband own, who keeps up with her son's college activities at Lynchburg, who is and has been one of the most active people around in civic affairs, is frustrated by women who tell her they are "too busy with bridge or social clubs" to help in the Cancer Crusade.

"In Bayside we are really desperate for women to help us," she said. "In most places we have had wonderful response. But it's not really a matter of being too busy to help us," she went on. "It involves a woman's deciding what's important to her and then making time to do it. To me, the Crusade is very important."

And in a schedule that would make almost anyone shudder, she has made time for it.

Australian To Address Rotarians

An Australian representing the president of Rotary International will address the annual conference of Rotary District 760 to be held next weekend at the Cavalier Hotel. It has been announced by T. Roy Grubbs, of Virginia Beach, governor of the Rotary district.

Rotary International Pres. Luther H. Hodges has designated A.D.G. Stewart, of Sydney, Australia, to be his personal representative to the Virginia Beach meeting of Virginia Rotarians. Stewart is to address the convention at a Saturday fellowship luncheon. Gov. Grubbs has indicated that some 500 Rotarians and their wives are expected for the two-day meeting. A special program of entertainment has been planned for the ladies.

The annual district conference is scheduled to open Friday afternoon with a plenary session. A hospitality hour and buffet dinner Friday night and the Governor's reception and ball Saturday night are the conference highlights.

The Virginia Beach and Princess Anne Clubs are serving as co-host clubs to the meeting. L. Floyd Patrick of the Virginia Beach Club is general chairman.

Bus Drivers Star in Own Film

Smile, you're on Candid Camera. That might have been the password Monday when Virginia Beach public school bus drivers took starring roles in a film strip to be used in driver training which will, hopefully, reduce the number of accidents involving school buses event more.

According to Rex Bolton, assistant supervisor of pupil transportation for the Virginia Beach city schools, damages to school buses last year amounted to about $20,000; the total in 1965-66 was about $40,000. So far this year the total is $1,500. A driver training program was inaugurated in 1967. "It's an excellent safety program," said Kenneth Carr of Aetna Life & Casualty, which insures the buses.

So far the 222 buses have traveled in excess of a million miles this school year, Bolton said that 70,000 pupils are transported 10,000 miles a day in the buses. "There hasn't been a single injury on buses this year due to accidents," Bolton pointed out. "We've never had a pupil killed on a bus in Virginia Beach."

Both Bolton and Carr took pictures to be used in the color film strip. It was also video taped.

"There just aren't any driver training films for school bus drivers that I know of," said Carr, "except one put out by the State of New York. But they have entirely different driving situations from Virginia Beach."

"This is one of the first efforts, as far as we know, of a training film made in Virginia."

"The training program here includes not only driving skills but defensive driving, and I think they've done an excellent job of it."

Bolton pointed out that more than 200 of the bus drivers are housewives with no experience in operating large equipment. "We want them well informed on what to do and how to do it," said Claude Gimbert, supervisor of pupil transportation. "Our ultimate goal is to reduce accidents to zero," concluded Carr.

Garden Clubs Turn Eyes Toward Service Stations

The eyes of the Virginia Beach garden council members will be on automobile service stations in the area during the next month as a search is made to find the station that has done the best job of landscaping and litter prevention.

Mrs. Arthur H. Gallagher, chairman of the HANDS beautification-conservation program of the Council of Garden Clubs of Virginia Beach, said that the station selected will receive recognition at a regional meeting in Birmingham, Ala. on May 22, 23 and 24. The recognition, she said, will be the display of a color photograph of the station at the regional meeting along with photos of top stations from other cities in the Southeast.

Mrs. Gallagher said that many of the major oil companies are vitally interested in attractive landscaping and litter prevention in their outlets and that this program would merely work to provide an additional incentive for station operators in Virginia Beach.

"The importance of the appearance of service stations in a community cannot be over emphasized," Mrs. Gallagher said. "Since very often the first impression that a visitor, a tourist, or a prospective in-

Top Students at PA Keep Busy

By Charlotte Keith

Each year since 1955, Princess Anne High School has named its top two ranked students as Valedictorian and Salutatorian. This year Jeff Jewett and Lawrence Marshall respectively, have been named number one and two of the 1968 graduating class.

The students named to these places must have completed their high school grades with an overall "B." The highest ranked (according to their scholastic average) is valedictorian and the second ranked is salutatorian.

When Jeff found out about being named valedictorian, he was very much surprised. "I really didn't expect to be named number one. I was late for school that day, so if I hadn't been named valedictorian, I would've had to stay after school."

Jeff is looking forward to leaving high school and entering a completely new and challenging world. He attributes being able to such a high academic standing to "clean living."

Jeff is strongly in favor of extra curricular activities. He feels that they "make high school enjoyable (and bearable) and provide recreation and a chance to communicate with people." He is president of the Chess Club; president of the Electronics Club; vice-president of the National Honor Society; a member of the Key Club; on the PAGE and the PEBERAGE staffs, and a member of the student council. Also, he was captain of the "Hi-Q" team and appeared on "Youth Questions."

As for scholarships, Jeff is a National Merit Scholarship finalist and a National Honor Society semifinalist.

Jeff would like to major in Physics at Caltech or Princeton and pursue a career as a physicist.

Lem had slightly different feelings when he was named salutatorian. "I was a little disappointed, Jeff and I knew for two months that we would be one and two. The question was which one would be number one." He was still proud of the honor, it was just having to wait around to see who would be number one.

Lem is also looking forward to leaving high school. "It is a part of growing up. It's not the world that changes but our attitudes that change."

"The fact that I never allow myself to get disinterested in a subject," is how he attributes being able to maintain such a high academic standing.

Lem is also strongly in favor of extra curricular activities. "Nobody in high school or society is well rounded who can't get along with other people."

Along with Jeff, Lem was a member of PA's "Hi-Q" team. Last summer Lem went to Brazil as a foreign exchange student and last semester he housed Hiram Guerra, PA's foreign exchange student. Other than these things Lem is vice-president of the Chess Club; president of Junior Civitan; a member of the National Honor Society; on the SCA executive committee and plays first chair clarinet in PA's band. He was elected student conductor of the PAHS band and was a member of the all-regional band.

Each semester during high school Lem has been on the Tidewater Scholastic team with other students from PA. This year he was chosen for the All-Tidewater Scholastic team.

In the way of scholarships Lem was runner-up in the National Council of Teachers. It was a nationwide writing contest with about 8,000 students. He also received a letter of commendation from the National Merit Scholarship.

Lem enjoys math and science most of all and finds physics most difficult. Speaking of physics Lem said, "It severely penalizes you for most minute failure to reason properly."

Lem would like to major in chemistry and math at the University of Virginia and then there go to Germany for graduate work.
